INSCRIPTIONS OF THE KALACHURIS OF SARAYUPARA

No. 73; PLATE LXI

KASIA STONE INSCRIPTION

THE stone slab which bears the subjoined inscription was discovered by Mr. A. C. L. Carlleyle in 1875-76 at the Buddhist ruins near Kasiā (lat. 26° 45' N., long. 83° 55' E.), the ancient Kuśanagara, where Gautama Buddha entered the Mahāparinirvāṇa.¹ 'The exact spot where the discovery was made was on the south side of the doorway of the brick-shrine in which the large blackstone image of the Buddha, locally known as Māthā Kūar was originally enshrined'.² The inscription was first noticed by Dr. Kielhorn, from estampages supplied to him, in his Epigraphic Notes in Nachrichten von der Königl. Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen Phil.-historische Klasse, 1903, pp. 300-303. It was next edited from the original stone, with a lithograph and a translation, by Rai Bahadur Daya Ram Sahni in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XVIII, pp. 128 ff. It is edited here from excellent estampages which I owe to the kindness of the Curator of the Lucknow Museum, where the slab has since been deposited.

The slab which is of the blue stone variety from the Gaya district measures 3' ¼" in breadth and 1' 5½" in height. The inscription is fragmentary. The extant writing covers a space 2' 10½" broad by 1' 2½" high, and contains 24 lines. Nothing is of course lost at the top. On the proper right and particularly on the left, especially in ll. 10-24, a large number of letters have been completely damaged owing to the peeling off of the surface of the stone. Besides, one or two lines have been damaged at the bottom, which is much to be regretted; for the lost portion must have contained some more historical information as well as particulars about the object of the inscription. The size of the letters varies from ⅜" to ⅝". The letters are larger and more sparsely written in the first five lines. They gradually decrease in size and are more compressed in subsequent lines.

The characters are of the Nāgarī alphabet. R.B. Sahni assigned the inscription to the 11th or 12th century A.C. In my opinion it is somewhat earlier as it shows the following palæographic characteristics:—(1) The mātrā for the medial ē and one of the constituents of the medial ai, ō and au appear as small curves added to the left of the top line of the consonant. They have not yet developed into full-fledged prishṭhamātrās; (2) the medial u is shown by a small serif at the bottom of the vertical; see, e.g., sudhīh and sphuṭa-, both in l. 8; (3) the left limb of dh and kh, the tail of h and the vertical at the top of ṭh have not yet been developed as in the Nāgarī alphabet of the 12th century and the loop in the right limb of kh is open in some places; see, e.g., -nidhīh, l. 4, khyāta-, l. 13, sikhari-, l. 16, and haṭhakṛit-, l. 3; (4) ph presents transitional forms; see, e.g., the archaic form in muktā-phalaiḥ, l. 20, and the later one in sphuṭa-, l. 8. In many respects the present inscription resembles the Bilhāri stone inscription of Yuvarājādēva II. On the evidence of palæography I would, therefore, assign the record to the 10th cen. A. C. The language is Sanskrit, and except for the opening obeisance to Rudra and Buddha, the preserved portion is wholly in verse. The number of verses wholly or partially preserved is thirty. As regards orthography we may note that b is everywhere written as v; h is replaced by gh in Naghuṃsha-, 1.9 and the anusvāra wrongly substituted by ñ in vanśa and vanśē, ll. 10, 11 and 12, by m in samvidhāy-, 1.5 and by n in rājahans=īva, 1.19.

² Ep. Ind., Vol. XVIII, p. 128. Hirananda Sastri, who excavated at Kasiā, thinks that the shrine was the chapel of a monastery; see A. R. A. S. I. for 1910-11, pp. 68 ff., and for 1911-12, pp. 138 ff.

The inscription opens with five invocatory verses, the first two of which are in honour of Śiva,¹ probably because the king who put up the inscription was a devotee of that deity. The third verse is in praise of the Buddhist goddess Tārā, while the next two invoke the blessings of the Buddha. With verse 6 begins the description of the pedigree of the ruling king. The first seven verses (6-12) describe his mythical ancestors. The god, who is the cause of the creation, preservation and destruction of the universe, first created Brahmā, who himself produced the seven Prajāpatīs. One of them Atri, after performing very severe penance, called *anuttara*², brought forth the moon. His son was Budha who married Ilā. Their son was Purūravas with whom the heavenly damsel Urvaśī enjoyed pleasures for a long time. The genealogy is then carried on through Āyu, Nahusha, Yayāti, Yadu, Sahasrada and Haihaya to Kārtavīrya. The historical portion begins in verse 13 with the mention of the Kalachuri family, to which the reigning king belonged. The first historical person of that family mentioned in the present record is Śaṅkaragaṇa who is said to have pleased Śiva and obtained from him his own symbol. This was probably the emblem of the bull which figures on the seal of Sōḍhadēva³ who probably belonged to a collateral branch of the same family. His son was Nannarāja, who, again, had a son named Lakshmaṇa (I). This last-mentioned prince is described in verse 17 as having established himself in the mountainous country called Śaivaya, which was the place of residence of the mythical king Sibi, the son of Uśinara. From him was born Śivarāja (I). The latter's son was Bhīmaṭa (I), who again had a son named Lakshmaṇarāja (II). We are told that the title Rājaputra befitted this prince more appropriately than hundreds of others. Lakshmaṇarāja (II)'s son was Śivarāja (II). The latter's son was described in verse 22, but his name is now lost. His wife was named Bhūdā. Next is mentioned Lakshmaṇarāja (III) who was probably a son of Bhūdā. He married a lady named Kāñchanā whose father's name, which occurred at the beginning of line 21, is now illegible. Their son was Bhīmaṭa (II). The mutilation of the last three lines makes it difficult to say if it was Bhīmaṭa II or one of his successors who put up the present record.

As the concluding portion of the inscription is completely effaced, it is not possible to say definitely what it was intended to record. But since it was found amidst the ruins of a shrine where a colossal image of the Buddha was discovered, it can be conjectured that the object of the present inscription was probably to record the construction of a monastery and the chapel attached to it.⁴

The preserved portion of the inscription contains no date, and as stated above, it is not possible to say how many princes, if any, succeeded Bhīmaṭa, the last named king in this record. The description of the ruling princes given here is again merely conventional and mentions no historical event. It has, of course, been suggested that the word kīrti in the beginning of line 17 may be the name of a king who was a contemporary of

⁴ A. R. A. S. I. for 1910-11, pp. 68 ff.

Sivarāja I. Dr. H.C. Ray¹ has attempted to identify him with the Chandēlla king Kittivarman (1098 A. C.), but this would necessitate our assigning the present record to the 13th century A. C. Such a late date is opposed by the palaeographic evidence set forth above. It is again very doubtful if ketri in line 17 is at all a proper name. It is more probably used here in the ordinary sense of 'fame'.

There is only one place-name Saivaya in the preserved portion. Kielhorn identified it with Seweya about a mile to the south of Kasiā, but as Sahni has pointed out, it is described in the present record as a mountainous district (sikhari-vishaya), while Seweya is situated on perfectly level ground. It is, however, quite likely that this branch of the Kalachuris was ruling over the adjoining country.

TRANSLATION

Om ! Adoration to Rudra !¹ Adoration to the Buddha !

(Verse 1) May the eternal lustre of Saṅkara, who destroys fear from the three-fold cause,² protect (you)—(the lustre) which, being subtle and unique, flashes forth (after) cutting asunder the knot of the deep and extensive ignorance with the sword of knowledge, in respect of which the whole multitude of sense-organs is at variance, (and) which shines in the (various) forms of (its) superhuman power such as the manifest, delighting Puruṣa . . . !

(V. 2) May Saṅkara protect you for a long time !—(Saṅkara) who, seeing that Pārvatī had turned away her face in anger through jealousy owing to his salutation of Sandhyā,³ was perplexed in (finding out) an excellent means of coaxing her befitting the occasion, (and) who that very moment had the joy of a forcible embrace (given) by her (i.e. Pārvatī) being frightened [by the lifting up of the mountain Kailāsa] by the two mighty arms of Rāvaṇa !

(V. 3) May Tārā, the mistress of the three worlds, increase your pleasures !—(Tārā), who bears her body (which is) manifestly beautiful and (which is) intent on (following) the precepts of the Buddha in this way, (viz.,)—(her) form is full of piety, (her) mind has the feeling of mercy, (her) intellect is very pure, (her) eyes (appear) beautiful with (their) love of the virtue benevolence, (and) (her) hands (are) in a peaceful posture of . . . !

(V. 4) Glorious is the Buddha, the ascetic, whose intellect is bright on account of the absence of fondness for the varied desires and qualities, (and) who, having curbed the great joy of the damsels (sent) by Māra, was praised by the multitudes of Siddhas !

(V. 5) Who, seeing the highest bliss in obliging creatures, performed various deeds for the suppliants even at (the cost of) his life, which have been glorified in stories ; (and) who, having assumed by his power of Yōga a great many incarnations in this world, was always wholly merciful by nature,—such is (Buddha) that foremost of sages !

(V. 6) That god (I śhṇu), the destroyer of demons, who is the prime cause of the destruction and maintenance of worlds and is (their) sole support, created Brahmā in the beginning. He, who is the repository of the skill and knowledge in the creation of the manifold objects in the three worlds, created speedily the seven Prajāpatis, Atri and others, by meditation.

(V. 7) Of them Atri, the foremost among the wise, practised the austerities known as *anuttara*⁴ with unwinking eyes for three thousand divine years without cessation. Through his power was born from his noble eye a mass of light brightening the ten quarters.—So was born the moon, the store of nectar, whose light is praised by the (whole) world.

(V. 8) From that moon was born the wise one, who had manifestly the lustre of gold, the abode of the irreproachable lustre of glory, who is celebrated in all the three worlds by the name of Budha. He obtained for (his) wife Ilā, the daughter of Manu.

(V. 9) From him also was born a son, the repository of austerities, whose glory

² I. e., the fear of the ādbibbautika, ādbidaivika and ādhyātmika danger.

⁴ Sahni refers to Harivamśa, (Calcutta ed., 1839), Adhyāya 25, vv. 1314-15, where Atri's penance is called anuttara.

had a marvellous form in (this) world, and whose fame spread to the confines of the quarters; with whom, Purūravas, the beautiful-browed Urvaśī enjoyed pleasures here for a long time, rejecting the whole host of gods.

(V. 10) His son was Āyu; he begat Nahusha; from him (was born) that Yayāti. He had five sons Yadu and others. The son of Yadu, named Sahasrada, became a well-known king. From him again sprang Haihaya, whose extensive dynasty was revered by the three worlds.

(V. 11) In this family gladdened by princes of infinite virtues was born that venerable one who, having the most holy name of Kārtavīrya, governed the earth with (his) merits surpassing those of Prithu.

(V. 12) The same path, which was formerly laid down by the self-existent (Brahmā) according to the old custom, was followed (by all beings), while he, whose orders were venerated, was the lord (of the earth). What more (need be said)? He knew of the advent of misconduct even in the minds of (his) subjects, appearing immediately (before them) with (his) missiles.¹

(V. 13) In the dynasty of him of well-known prowess, (adorning) the Kalachuri family (which is) the crest-jewel of the three worlds, there was born (the king) Śaṅkaragaṇa of well-known form, to whom Siva being pleased instantly granted his own emblem (i.e., the bull).

(V. 14) From him, whose fame (spread) up to the ocean which is the garment of the earth, was born Nannarāja, whose rising fortune, honoured by all, shone forth exceedingly owing to the absence of faults and who, like the sun (whose rising splendour, adored by all, shines forth at the close of the night) purifies the earth

(V. 15) The damsels, that were his (i.e., Nannarāja's) forces, longingly looked at the faces of rivers² (as they were being kissed) by their lord (the ocean),—(the faces) which had for their fresh ornamental mark, newly planted tilaka trees; which appeared more lovely with the play of eyebrows (in the form of the dancing waves); (and) which had blue lotuses for their bright eyes and the petals of (red) lotuses (growing in them) for their reddish, tremulous and smiling lower lips.

(V. 16) The son of him (i.e., Nannarāja), who, with the canopy of the creeping plant of his matchless dense fame, had covered the whole expanse of the confines of the quarters, was the illustrious Lakshmanarāja (I) who, having destroyed the armies of his enemies, was prowess (itself) in a visible form.

(V. 17) The lord having entered with affection the fort afterwards took his abode in the inaccessible place called Śaivaya, situated among mountains, which was the all-in-all of the earth and the residence of Sibi, the son of Uśinara.

(V. 18) From him was born the lord of the circle of this earth (named) Śivarāja (I) resembling Siva, who, possessing excellent fame, looked bright with his valour resembling the radiance of Aurva; who, a wise man, became known over the whole earth by his fame

(V. 19) The son of that king was the lord of the earth, the illustrious Bhīmaṭa (I) of noble birth, the sole store of the multitude of excellences (used for) comparison, the sharp edge of whose sword was adept in the guileless destruction [of his enemies].

(V. 20) there was the illustrious Lakshmaṇa (II), who had mastered the entire skill of bowmanship; to whom, on account of his excellences, resorted the title of Rājaputra which passed over hundreds of other princes.

(V. 21) His son was Śivarāja (II), who, like Śiva, was conversant with all matters confusion in the cities of his enemies on the earth.

(V. 22) [From him] was born the wish-fulfilling tree (and) the crest-jewel of kings whose fame was sung in the three worlds.

(V. 23) That prosperous king had a lawful wife named Bhūdā, who, being resplendent and descended from noble families on both sides, won his heart, (and) who resembled a female swan, casting shade with both her extremely white wings and going to the Mānasa lake.

(V. 24) From her [was born] Lakshmaṇarāja (III) in (this) world

(V. 25) By whom the earth (was strewn) with pearls scattered from the large frontal globes of the enemies' elephants cleft by the hard strokes of (his) sword on the battle-fields and mixed with the dropping tears resembling saffron.

(V. 26) [He married] the daughter (of) named Kāñchanā

(V. 27) On her (i.e. Kāñchanā) that king, whose foot-stool was brightened by a multitude of the crest-jewels of a host of enemies bowing to him, begot the illustrious Bhīmaṭa (II) who, winning fame by his great prowess, became worthy of him.

(V. 28) they describe (his) arrow

(V. 29) [He was] the desire of the wish-fulfilling trees, the Mēru mountain that is dug day by day.

(V. 30) hundreds of the hoofs of the numerous galloping horses which reached [the place]

KAHLA PLATES OF SODHADEVA : (VIKRAMA) YEAR 1135

THESE plates were discovered in 1889 by a cultivator in his field at Kahla¹ (long. 83° 23' E. lat. 26° 23' N.), a village in the tappa Athaisi of the parganā Dhuriāpār of the Gorakhpur District in Uttar Pradesh. They are now deposited in the Provincial Museum, Lucknow. The inscription on them has been edited before, without any translation or lithograph, by Dr. Kielhorn in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. VII, pp. 85 ff. It is edited here from excellent ink impressions kindly furnished by Rai Bahadur Prayag Dayal, Curator of the Museum.

They are two copper-plates² inscribed on the inner side only, each measuring about 1' 5¼" broad and 1' 1" high. Their ends are raised into a low rim for the protection of the writing. In the middle of the top of each plate there is a round hole, about .9" in diameter, for the ring which holds the plates together. This ring has a round seal, about 3" in diameter, containing in relief on a counter-sunk surface the figure of a couchant bull facing to the proper right. Below this is the legend Śrīmat-Sōḍhadēvasya in Nāgarī letters, about .4" high; and below this again, an arrow pointing to the proper right. It may be noted that an arrow pointing in the same direction is also engraved at the end of the record on the second plate to the left of the donor's sign-manual. The first plate weighs 420, and the second, 452 tolas, while the ring with the circular seal weighs 157 tolas.

The record contains fifty-nine lines, of which thirty-one are inscribed on the first, and the remaining twenty-eight on the second plate. The inscription is well preserved, only a few akṣaras in the first six lines being slightly damaged by verdigris. The letters are, on the whole, carefully engraved. Their size is about .5". The characters are Nāgarī. The letters kh, dh, bh and ś present transitional forms; see, e.g., the forms of kh in mēkhalā-, l. 11 and sākh-ēva ll. 18-19; of dh in -dharā- in l. 3 and =bhū-dharah l. 17; of bh in -ākūta-bhrit-, l. 2 and -kṣmābhritō, l. 12; of ś in =āśij-, l. 3 and -śira- l. 5. H shows a fully developed tail in graha-, l. 1 and ḥ a vertical stroke at the top in -hatha-, l. 13. In the form of the initial i the horizontal stroke at the top is joined to one of the dots below. In all these respects the characters of the present inscription will be seen to have later and more developed forms than the Kasiā stone inscription.¹ The sign of avagraha occurs only once in l. 47, and those for the fractions $\frac{1}{2}$ and $\frac{3}{4}$ in ll. 48-50. The language is Sanskrit. The first thirty-two lines, which contain the genealogical and eulogistic portions, are in verse. The total number of verses in this portion is 30, but none of them, except the last, is numbered. Then comes the formal part of the grant in prose in ll. 32-51, which is followed by ten benedictive and imprecatory verses, all of which are numbered. Lastly come the date, the name of the writer and the king's sign-manual.

In respect of orthography, it may be noted that the v is throughout used for b; the dental and palatal sibilants are confounded in many places, see, e.g. -visada-, l. 1 and =ajaśram-, l. 16; j is used for y in Kṛitavīrjja-, l. 3; -Kārtavīrjō, l. 4 and jātō (for yātō), l. 23; gh takes the place of h in Naghushah, l. 2 and si[ni]ghāsana-sthō, l. 13; m is wrongly used for anusvāra in kim=vā l. 27, samvat, l. 57 etc., and n for the same in -vansē-, l. 6, -vinsati-, l. 37, -trinsat-, l. 39 etc.

After the customary svastī, the record, without any invocatory stanza, begins at once an account of the pedigree of the Kalachuri king Sōḍhadēva who issued the present plates from his residence at Dhuliāghaṭṭa. The royal genealogy is traced back to the moon. After describing his mythical and legendary descendants Budha, Purūravas, Nahusha, Haihaya and Kārtavīrya Arjuna, the record states that in the family of the last named prince was born a personage who established himself in Kālāñjara, from where he gradually overran Ayōmukha.² We are next told that this prince, who was an ornament of the Kalachuris, conquered his enemies and gave the kingdom to his younger brother Lakshmaṇarāja, who in turn conquered Śvētapada. In the family of this prince was born the king Rājaputra who captured Vāhali (or, Bāhali), the lord of horses, defeated the kings of the east and lowered the fame of Kirīṭin and other kings. His son was Śivarāja (I), who, again, had a son named Śaṅkaragaṇa (I). The latter's son was Guṇāmbhōdhidēva (or Guṇasāgara I), who received some territory from Bhōjadēva and took away the fortune of the Gauḍa king. His first wife was Kāñchanadēvī who bore to him a son named Ullabha. The latter placed on the throne his half-brother Bhāmānadēva (I), (a son of Guṇasāgara I from another wife Madanadēvī), who, for regaining his kingdom, defeated an army of the king of Dhātā. From his queen Dēhaṭṭadēvī, Bhāmānadēva had a son named Śaṅkaragaṇa (II) alias Mugdhatuṅga. Mugdhatuṅga had, from his queen Vidyā, a son named Guṇasāgara (II). The latter's son from his queen Rājavā was Śivarāja (II) also called Bhāmānadēva (II). His son from Sugalladēvī was Śaṅkaragaṇa (III). The latter's son from Yaśōlēkhyā was Bhīma. We are next told that Bhīma, through adverse fate, lost his kingdom. Then Vyāsa, the son of Guṇasāgara¹ from the queen Lāvanyavatī, was placed on the throne of his father at the capital² Gōkulaghaṭṭa on Monday, the 8th tithi of the bright fortnight of the second (or nija) Jyēshṭha in the year 1087 (expressed in words). His son and successor was Sōḍhadēva who is described as the life of (the country of) Sarayūpāra.

The object of the present inscription is to record that the Paramabhaṭṭāraka, Mahārājādhirāja and Paramēśvara, the illustrious Sōḍhadēva, a devout worshipper of Mahēśvara, who meditated on the feet of the Paramabhaṭṭāraka, Mahārājādhirāja and Paramēśvara, the illustrious Maryādāsāgara,³ after bathing in the great river Gaṇḍakī on the occasion of the Uttarāyaṇa-saṅkrānti on Sunday, the seventh tithi of the bright fortnight of Pausa in the year 1134 (expressed in words), granted twenty nālus of land in the fields of certain villages to fourteen Brāhmaṇas whose names, gōtras, pravaras, śākhās and places of residence are given in ll.40-50. The tāmapaṭṭa (copper-charter) was written by the Adēśanaibandhika (Recorder of Orders) Janaka on Sunday, the 6th tithi of the dark half of Chaitra in the year 1135 (expressed in decimal figures only).

All the three dates mentioned in the present inscription are evidently of the Vikrama era. The first of them, which is the date of the accession of Sōḍhadēva's father Vyāsa, corresponds, for the Kārttikādi Vikrama year 1087 expired, to Monday, the 31st May 1031 A. C. In that year there was an intercalary Jyēshṭha. It is, however, to be noted that the eighth tithi of the bright fortnight of the second (or nija) Jyēshṭha commenced 9 h. 35 m.⁴ after sunrise on Monday. Though the tithi was not civilly connected with that day, it must have been so cited because it was current at the time of the accession. The date of the present grant regularly corresponds to Sunday, the 24th December 1077 A. C. On that day the seventh tithi of the bright fortnight of Pausa ended 16 h. 20 m. after mean sunrise, while the Uttarāyaṇa-saṅkrānti had taken place 7 h. 10 m. after mean sunrise.⁵ It will be noticed that this date of Sōḍhadēva is 46 years later than the date of his father's accession. The last date mentioned here, when the grant was actually written, corresponds for the Kārttikādi Vikrama year 1134 expired, to Sunday, the 24th February 1079 A. C. On that day the sixth tithi of ¹ Kielhorn identified this Guṇasāgara with Guṇasāgara II, but it is more probable that Guṇasāgara was another name of Bhīma. See Introduction.

² I prefer to take kaṭaka here in the sense of 'a capital', not in that of 'a camp'. The Mēdinī gives rājadhānī (a capital) as one of the senses of kaṭaka. See Kaṭako'strī nīlambō'drēr=dantīnūm danta-maṇḍantē | Samudra-lavaṇē rājadhānī-valayayōr=api ||

⁴ According to Kielhorn's calculations, the tithi commenced 9 h. 47 m. after mean sunrise.

⁵ According to Kielhorn's calculations, the tithi ended 17 h. 21 m. and the saṅkrānti took place 3 h. 35 m. after mean sunrise on that day.

the dark fortnight of the pūrṇimānta Chaitra was current at sunrise as required. It will thus be seen that the grant was reduced to writing as late as fourteen months after it was made.

The land measuring 20 nālus, which was granted by the present charter, was situated in (the sub-division of) Ṭikarikā included in the district of Guṇakala. It formed part of the fields of (the villages) Mahiāripāṭaka, Asathīpāṭaka, Thiulapāṭaka, Vaṇīpāṭaka, Duāripāṭaka and Chhiḍādāṭēmbhā. These villages were bounded on the east by Antāḍha, on the north by Ṭikari, on the south by Avaḍachana, and on the west by Chanduliā. The donees were fourteen Brāhmaṇas, of whom two received three-quarters of a nālu each, and two others one nālu each; one got three nālus together with a dwelling place, and the rest one and a half nālu each. The names of the Brāhmaṇas, their gōtras, pravaras and sākhās can be seen from the subjoined translation. The following are named as the places of their residence or origin:—Kaṭaughana, Kahalla, Kulāñcha, Ṭikari, Tālī, Nagara, Nikhatigrāma, Mahuālī, Mathurā, Sāṅkasasthāna and Hastigrāma.

As for the localities mentioned in this record, Ayōmukha,¹ is probably identical with A-ye-mu-k'a mentioned by the Chinese traveller Yuan Chwang. Cunningham identified it with Daundia-khērā on the northern bank of the Gaṅgā², but Mr. V. Smith's view that it corresponds to the Partabgarh and Rae-Bareilly Districts in Uttar Pradesh³ appears to be more probable; for this territory has to be conquered before a king of Kālāñjara could establish himself in the Gorakhpur District. The identification of Śvētapada with the Nasik District in the Bombay State, proposed by Mr. R.D. Banerji, rests on a wrong reading⁴ and has to be abandoned. A clue to its location is perhaps furnished by similarity of its name to Svētapatha (Śvētapatha) which is mentioned in some records at Sanchi.⁵ Kielhorn identified the river Gaṇḍakī in which the king had bathed before making the grant, with the Gaṇḍak or Little Gaṇḍak of Uttar Pradesh. He also pointed out that 'the river Sarayū, after which Sōḍhadēva's territory appears to have been called Sarayūpāra, most probably is the river Gogra, which in Oudh is known by the names Deoha, Surjoo or Sarayu as well as Ghogra'. He could not, however, identify with confidence any of the numerous places mentioned in the present grant. Some of these I have been able to identify with the help of large-scale maps. Dhulīāghaṭṭa, where the king was residing at the time of making the grant, is probably Dohrighāt on the right bank of the Ghogra. It is not, of course, on the Gaṇḍak or even the Little Gaṇḍak, but in view of its proximity to Kahla⁶, which is plainly identical with Kahalla mentioned in 1.45 of the present grant, the identification appears to be probable. It also raises the question if the river Gaṇḍakī mentioned here could not be the same as the Ghogra. Ṭikari still retains its name and lies about 2 m. north of Kahla. Chanduliā is probably Chandariā, 2 m. to the west of Ṭikari. Mahiāripāṭaka, Asathīpāṭaka, Thiulapāṭaka and Vaṇīpāṭaka seem to be identical with Mehdiā,

³ Watters, On Yuan Chwang, Vol. II, Appendix, p. 338.

⁵ M. S., Vol. I (Inscriptions No. 89 and 475).

Avasthi, Thathauli and Baonpār respectively, being situated within a couple of miles from Ṭikari. Of the places of residence or origin of the Brāhmaṇa donees, Kahalla is clearly Kahla where the plates were discovered. Kulāñcha, as stated elsewhere,¹ is mentioned in several records as the place of residence of Sāmavēdi Brāhmaṇas of the Sāṇḍilya gōtra and has been identified by Rao Bahadur K.N. Dikshit with Kulāñcha in the Bogra District of North Bengal. Nikhatigrāma may be Nāktauli, about a mile to the north-east of Ṭikari and Mahuālī, Mahōliā, seven miles west of Dhuriāpāra. Mathurā is of course too well-known to need identification. Sāṅkasasthāna may be ancient Sāṅkāśya now represented by the village Saṅkisa, 40 miles north-west of Kanauj. The other places I am unable to locate.

Success ! Hail !

(Verse 1) There was (born) the moon, the son of Atri, the source of nectar, and the crest-jewel of the conqueror of the god of love, who, being possessed of gentle lustre, dispels darkness. From him was born Budha possessed of greater fortune, who, being a repository of knowledge as stainless as night-lotuses, has attained the (highest) limit of eulogy in the midst of a host of planets.

(V. 2) His offspring was Purūravas, the lord of the world, the repository of lustre (and) the abode of humility, whose lotus-like feet were kissed by the crest-jewels of numerous kings, (and) who had (always) in front of him his beloved Urvaśī.

(V. 3) The wise Nahusha was born from him,⁵ who, having practised a lot of penance, deprived the god Indra of his sleep, making him falsely apprehensive of losing his position.⁶ In his race was (born) Haihaya, who bore the yoke of the earth (surrounded by) the seven oceans which he had conquered. His descendant was the king Kṛitavīrya, the guardian of the path (i.e., religion) laid down by the three Vēdas.

(V. 4) From that lord was (born) the illustrious Arjuna, the son of Kṛitavīrya, the dust of whose lotus-like feet was mingled with the lustre of the crest-jewels of the princes who were constantly bowing to them; who, being the foremost among the mighty, successively overthrew with the slightest effort, ever since his childhood, peerless princes who had the fever of arms.⁷

(V. 5) In the family descended from him there was born one, the dust of the pair of whose lotus-like feet fell on the heads of rows of kings bowing to him; who occupied Kālāñjara in order to overrun gradually and conquer Ayōmukha; and who was wild fire to the old forest which was the active army of the enemy.

(V. 6) He, the ornament of the Kalachuris, having subdued his adversaries, made over the kingdom to his younger brother. He, the illustrious Lakshmaṇarāja, in turn conquered (the country of) Śvētāpada.

⁷ I. e., who were proud of their valour.

(V. 7) In his family there was (born) thereafter that wise Rājaputra, the supporter of the world, who imprisoned Vāhali, the lord of horses ; the pride of whose arms was made manifest when he allowed no respite to the king of the East ; (and) who, (though) he gave security from fear to frightened persons and lowered the mass of fame of Kiriṭin (Arjuna) and other kings, showed no pride.

(V. 8) From him was (born) the king Śivarāja, who resembled Sibi, and destroying the enemies in battle, was sought after by both the kings.¹ From him was born the son, the king Śaṅkaragaṇa (I), who enjoyed peace, was straightforward by nature and often kind to those who sought his help.

(V. 9) His son was the illustrious Guṇāmbhōdhidēva (I) of well-known and abundant fame, the receptacle of prowess (and) the treasure of superior intelligence, who obtained (some) territory from Bhōjadēva ; who dragged the fortune of the Gauḍa (king) along the well-known and wide path of his sword which, being uneven, formed a staircase with the pearls sticking to it as it struck arrays of mighty and vehement elephants.

(V. 10) His elder wife was named the illustrious Kāñchanadēvī, (who was to him) as Lakshmi is to Viṣṇu, and was as it were his fame incarnate.

(V. 11) By him was (begotten) on her the illustrious king of blameless lustre named Ullabha, who, (like) the white-rayed (moon), overran the earth spreading his white fame, and was the barbed arrow in the hearts of multitudes of enemies' wives ; at the sight of whom the tie of the girdles of (ladies), who had tremulous deer-like eyes suddenly became loose, missiles dropped through fear from the hands of the enemies and greed for wealth disappeared from (the minds) of suppliants.

(V. 12) His² country became (happy) like the world of Brahmā. Having reached him, the princes, (who were) running away through fear, obtained security as mountains flying away from the great Indra did when they reached the ocean. He, to whose lotus-like feet, moving amidst circles of hands folded in service by feudatories, resorted the goddess of fortune, granted security impartially to the princes of both the parties by (royal charters marked with) vermilion seals and such other means.

(V. 13) He,³ who worshipped the surface of the earth with the heads of his enemies which he cut off with his famous sword in numerous battles which were dreadful with the clash of marching arrays of huge elephants, placed on the throne, through fraternal affection, Bhāmānadēva (I), who was skilful in forcibly wresting away the goddess of victory from the forces of the king of Dhārā, which were rejoicing at (the prospect of) regaining their victorious position.

(V. 14) He, the son of the illustrious Gupasāgara (I) from Madanādēvī, was the foremost among the good, the edge of the path of righteousness, the abode of glory (and) the ocean of the water of piety. Being possessed of fortune, he was kind to those who sought shelter with him, was the chief resort (of fine arts) in the midst of aversion to them due to the Kali age, (and) the abode of stability which reached the highest limit (as he was) the firm-minded lord of the earth.

(V. 15) He was a wish-fulfilling jewel to the needy, a new kalpa tree to the suppliants, the sun to the lotuses which were the learned men, and the moon to the lotus-plants which were the faces of the enemies' young wives. During his reign, tears flowed incessantly through jealousy from the eyes of the wives of the Vidyādharas owing to his contact with the goddess of fortune whom he snatched away from his enemies, the mighty aquatic animals, in the course of his fight with Vāsuki.¹

³ This and also v. 15 are relative clauses in the original.

(V. 16) His son, the wise prince (and) the lord of the earth, who by his brilliant white fame (spreading) on the surface of the earth which was pervaded by his excellences, surpassed the lustre of the moon,—the noble one who by his splendour and merits became an object of wonder even to gods,—was the illustrious Śaṅkaragaṇa² (II), the son of Dēhaṭṭadēvī.

(V. 17) That illustrious king Śaṅkaragaṇa (II) was born from the illustrious Bhāmāna, as from a raised lamp is lighted another, in the house of the kingdom won by him.

(V. 18) Of that illustrious king Mugdhatuṅga³ there was a queen named Vidyā, as moonlight is of the full moon rising from the ocean,⁴ as Lakshmi is of Viṣṇu, as Pārvatī, in respect of good fortune, is of Śiva, as a branch is of the kalpa tree,—being the kandalī plant shining with its bulbous roots which spread about through great prosperity springing from good fortune.

(V. 19) From her was born the king, the illustrious Guṇasāgara (II), the crest-jewel of princes, who resembled a mountain (in firmness); who was like an axe in cutting the creeper of incessant suffering (resting) on the tree of poverty; who was fire to the cotton-wool which was the roaring herd of elephants; who was like the god of death in destroying the host of all the neighbouring arrogant princes.

(V. 20) His beloved (wife) was Rājavā as Lakshmi is of Viṣṇu, as Rōhiṇī is of the moon, as Gaurī is of Śiva, and as Paulōmī is of Indra. She obtained a son named Śivarāja (II) who resembled Brahmā and was well-known on the earth, being the abode of the merits, (viz.) valour and generosity, and being sanctified by truthful and charming speech.

(V. 21) He, having obtained the royal position by the order of the king, became the great kalpa tree to all suppliants and the sun to the cluster of lotuses which was his family. Moreover, his enemies, who were oppressed by the rows of flames from the fire of his great prowess, did not, somehow, feel cool even after crossing the ocean.

(V. 22) The title of king, which primarily applied to Pṛithu in the Kṛita age, which became well-known in (the case of) Rāmabhadra whose enemies were destroyed in the Trēta (age), which resorted to the eldest son of Pāṇdu in the Dvāpara (age), shines,⁵ having obtained a footing in the illustrious Bhāmāna (II).

(V. 23) From him afterwards was born of Sūgalladēvī a son (named) Śaṅkaragaṇa (III), who, gladdening a multitude of elders by his specially pious conduct and being the foremost among virtuous persons, took care of (all) creatures as of his (own) life. The king was (like) Śaṅkara, capable of destroying (his) arrogant¹ foes, and was the kalpa tree to the suppliants.

(V. 24) Then there shone, on the throne of his father, Bhīma, the son of the queen Yaśōlēkhyā, (who was) like Bhīma, the son of Kuntī, being the abode of political wisdom, humility and fortune, (and) who smiling had his beautiful person bathed (at the time of his coronation) with the auspicious waters (poured) from jars as also with tears of good persons due to excessive joy.

⁵ The present tense is wrongly used for the past as the present inscription does not belong to the reign of Bhāmāna II.

(V. 25) When he lost his kingdom through (adverse) fate, there was born the illustrious Vyāsa to the queen Lāvāṇyavatī from the king, the illustrious Guṇasāgara (III)¹ as Vyāsa was born from the sage Parāśara; with whom even in his childhood, others did not attain resemblance in the multitude of excellences such as charity (and) compassion.

(V. 26) Who being established on his throne is extolled² by the people who, day after day, are conjecturing as follows:—‘Is he Bali? Or is he the son of the sun? Or is he Rāghava or Nṛiga? Or is he Yayāti?’

(V. 27) The illustrious one shines, having been installed on the throne of his father at the capital Gōkulaghāṭṭa, on the day of the moon on the eighth day (tithi) in the fortnight, very bright like plaster, in the second Jyēṣṭha in a century of years multiplied by ten together with eighty-seven (i.e., in the year one thousand and eighty-seven).

(V. 28) His son, the illustrious Sōḍhadēva, who became king through the religious merit of the people and has surpassed the deeds of Kārtavīrya by his merits, has now whitened the surface of the three worlds with his fame which is stainless like the peaks of the snowy mountain and is spread around by truthfulness, charity, discrimination, pride, political wisdom and activity.

(V. 29) (His) fame has speedily resorted to the seven oceans as if through fear of (being oppressed by) the heat of his mighty prowess; the goddess of fortune, on the other hand, has sought shelter with the feet of the illustrious Sōḍhadēva through cold due to her living in the midst of the ocean.

(V. 30) The illustrious Sōḍhadēva, the very life of the country on the other side of the Sarayū, is a brave and pious king, the foremost among learned people.

(Line 32) Hail! From (the camp) fixed at Dhuliāghāṭṭa—the Paramabhaṭṭāraka, Mahārājādhirāja and Paramēśvara, the illustrious Sōḍhadēva, a devout worshipper of Mahēśvara, who meditates on the feet of the Paramabhaṭṭāraka, Mahārājādhirāja and Paramēśvara, the illustrious Maryādāsāgaradēva, (being) prosperous, honours, informs and commands all royal officials such as the Mahārājāi, the Mahārājaputra, the Mahāsāndhivigrahika, the Mahāmahantaka,³ the Mahāpratihāra, the Mahāsēnāpati, the Mahākshapaṭalika,⁴ the Mahāsādhānika,⁵ the Mahāśrēṣṭhin,⁶ the Mahādānika,⁷ the Mahāpāñchakulika,⁸ the Saulkika,⁹ the Gaulmika,¹⁰ the Ghāṭṭapati,¹¹ the Tarapati,¹² the Viśhayadānika,¹³ the Duṣṭasādhaka,¹⁴ the Khaṇḍavāla, the Balādhira¹⁵ and others and the people of the country

⁶ The Chief Banker.

⁹ The Customs Officer.

¹⁰ ‘The Chief of a troop’ (Monier-Williams).

¹¹ The Officer in charge of landing stations.

¹² The Officer in charge of ferries.

¹⁴ The Mentor of criminals.

¹ The lexicons give makuti in the sense of ‘an edict addressed to Śūdra’. So this may be a village officer corresponding to the Police Patel in the Bombay State.

² As Kielhorn has shown, nāluka or nālu is apparently derived from the Sanskrit nalva, a measure of distance equal to 400 (or according to others, 100 or 120) cubits.

INSCRIPTIONS OF THE KALACHURIS OF RATANPUR

No. 75; PLATE LXIII

RAIPUR PLATE OF PRITHVIDEVA I : (KALACHURI) YEAR 821

THIS copper-plate was discovered somewhere in the Raipur District in the Chhattisgarh Division of Madhya Pradesh in 1945. It was sent to the Government Epigraphist for India by the Hon. Secretary, Mahākāntāra Historical Society, Raipur. I edit the inscription here from an excellent impression which I owe to the kindness of the Government Epigraphist.

This is the last plate of its set which originally probably consisted of two plates. The first plate is not forthcoming now. Such plates are usually connected by one or two rings, but the present plate does not contain any holes for such rings. A small triangular piece has been broken away from the upper right corner, but the akṣaras so lost can be supplied from the corresponding portion of the Amōdā plates.¹ In other respects the plate is in a state of good preservation. It measures 10.7" broad and 6.5" high and weighs 40 tolas.

The characters are Nāgarī. The average size of the letters is .4" except in the last line where it is reduced to .2". The record has been very carelessly written or incised, and contains several mistakes of omission and commission, pointed out in the notes to the text. As regards individual letters attention may be drawn to the following peculiarities:—The left portion of kh does not show a tail, see -sākhinē, l. 10; ṇ is without a dot, see -bhṛīṅga-, l. 15; dh does not generally show a horn on the left, see, e.g., -vudha-, l. 1, but in Gadādharah, l. 13 it has a slanting stroke at the top.

The language is Sanskrit. The earlier portion of the record which contained a description of the ancestors of the reigning king has been lost, but judging from the extant text, it was probably identical with the initial portion of the Amōdā plates of the same king, Pṛithvīdēva I. The record on the present plate is partly in prose and partly in verse. The verses are not numbered. As regards orthography, v is throughout written for b, see -lavdha-, l. 4; the dental s is used for the palatal ś in Kausika-, l. 9 and vice versa in -sahāśraika-, l. 5; finally, n is used for the anusvāra in ēkavinsati-, l. 5.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Pṛithvīdēva of the Kalachuri Dynasty. He is described in lines 4-6 as Mahāmaṇḍalēśvara, the sole lord of twenty-one thousand (villages) and the ruler of the entire Kōśala country. He was a devout worshipper of Mahēśvara and believed that he had obtained his kingdom by the grace of the god Vaṅkēśvara. This description, which is identical with that in lines 23-25 of the Amōdā plates, plainly shows that this Pṛithvīdēva is the first Kalachuri king of that name who ruled in South Kōśala in the second half of the eleventh century A. C.

The object of the inscription is to record the grant, by Pṛithvīdēva (I), of the village Asauṭhā in the *Apara (maṇḍala)*² on the occasion of the Uttarāyana-saṅkrānti. The donee was the Brāhmaṇa Jōgūka of the Kauśika gōtra, a student of the Chhandōga or Sāmavēda, who had emigrated from Srāvastī. The plates were granted at Ratnapura, which was evidently the royal capital, on Sunday, the eighth tithi of the dark fortnight of Māgha in the year 821 (expressed in numerical figures only) of an unspecified era.

The inscription names Trivikrama, Vikrama and Arjuna, who are mentioned in the next grant also, probably as witnesses of the gift. The charter was written by the owner of the village Garbha whose name has been omitted here owing to the exigencies of the metre, but who was probably Alhana mentioned in the next grant in the same capacity and as owner of the same village. The engraver was Hāsala.

The date of the present grant must plainly be referred to the Kalachuri era. It regularly corresponds, for the current year 821, to Sunday, the 18th January 1069 A.C. The eighth tithi of the dark fortnight of the amānta Māgha in that year ended at 20 h. 50 m. on that day. The Uttarāyana or Makara saṅkrānti had already taken place at 23 h. on the 23rd December 1068.¹ This date is noteworthy; because firstly, it is one of the few dates of the Kalachuri era recorded in a current year and secondly, it is the only date of that era from Chhattisgarh which is cited according to the amānta scheme. The Amōdā plates, granted only ten years later by this very king Prithvidēva I, have their date recorded in a pūrṇimānta month. The present date in an amānta month is all the more surprising, because the prevailing custom in Chhattisgarh even before the advent of the Kalachuris was to cite dates according to the pūrṇimānta scheme.² It shows, again, that the Kalachuri year must have commenced on some day before Māgha va. di. 8.

Of the geographical names mentioned in the present grant, Apara-maṇḍala, if that is the correct reading of the name, seems to have comprised the territory round Bilaspur as shown by the Amōdā plates of the same king, but I have not been able to find any place-name corresponding to Asauṭhā from the maps available to me. Śrāvastī from where the donee had emigrated, may be Sahet Mahet in the Gonda District of Uttar Pradesh. Ratnapura is modern Ratanpur, 16 miles north of Bilaspur.

¹ According to the pūrṇimānta scheme the tithi ended at 1 h. 45 m. on Saturday, the 20th December 1068 A.C. Besides, the Uttarāyana-saṅkrānti occurred after this day, not before as required. If the year is applied as expired, the tithi in the pūrṇimānta Māgha falls on Thursday (the 7th January 1070 A.C.) and in the amānta Māgha on Saturday, the 6th February, 1070 A. C. In all these cases the date will have to be regarded as irregular.

TRANSLATION

(Verse 1) [Then was born the illustrious Prithvidēva (I)], the ornamental jewel of the whole earth and the sun to the lotuses which are the minds of the wise. While the fire of his valour was blazing forth, (his) enemies together with (their) ministers, whose hearts were constantly oppressed by it, disappeared (from view) as if because their bodies were made of lac!

(V. 2) While he who is strong in political insight is protecting the earth, even wind does not take to the wrong path, who else (then would dare to do so)? As his thoughts are fixed on the path of piety, there is, indeed, no outbreak of even the slightest divine calamity.¹

(Line 4) This Mahāmaṇḍalēśvara, who shines in the midst of all kings (by his excellences) such as birth in the Kalachuri family and fervent devotion to Mahēśvara, who is the lord of the entire Kōsala country and the sole ruler of twenty-one thousand (villages) (and) who has obtained the divine grace by a (special) boon of the god Vaṅkēśvara, having bathed and worshipped the chosen (deity) Yāgēśvara, has given as a grant by (pouring) water on the (donee's) hand, after washing the lotus-like feet of the Brāhmaṇa and filling the hollow of his hand with water mixed with kuśa and sesamum, on the occasion of the Uttarāyaṇa-saṅkrānti, the village Asauṭhā in the Apara (maṇḍala) to the Brāhmaṇa Jōgūka, the son of Mahanē and grandson of Bhadrabhāṇala, who has emigrated from Śrāvastī, belongs to the Kauśika gōtra, has three pravaras, and is a student of the Chhandōga (i.e., Sāmaṇvēda) for the increase of religious merit and fame of (his) mother and father and of himself.

(L. 10) Therefore this (Brāhmaṇa), his sons, sons' sons and others should enjoy, without any interruption, (this village) by this charter as long as the moon, the sun, the earth, rivers, wind and sky would endure.

(Verse 3) The self-controlled great hero Trivikrama, Vikramarāja who is marvellous in valour, and the pious-minded and brave Arjuna—these have, indeed, pledged (their) true word.

(V. 4) Then this (minister) named Vigraharāja, Gadādhara (and) the chief Brāhmaṇa Kēśava²—these, having known the determined mind of the lord, duly pledged (their) true word.

(V. 5) The owner of the village Garbha, the bee on the lotus which is the poem of a good poet, wrote on the copper (plates) (this) composition in words, letters and sentences. That intelligent Hāsala, who is a repository of all mechanical arts, inscribed (it) in excellent lines of letters on this (set of plates).

(Line 17) (In) the year 821, (in the month) Māgha (and) the dark (fortnight), on the (lunar) day 8, on Sunday,—at Ratnapura.

No. 76 ; PLATE LXIV

AMODA PLATES OF PRITHVIDEVA I : (KALACHURI) YEAR 831

THESE copper-plates were found while digging for the foundation of a temple in May 1924 at Amōdā, a village 10 miles south-east of Jānjgir, the headquarters of a

² The minister Vigraharāja is named in the next inscription also. Kēśava is himself the donee of the grant recorded in it.

tahsil of the same name in the Bilaspur District of Madhya Pradesh. They have been edited before, with a lithograph but without any translation, by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XIX, pp. 75 ff. The record is edited here from the original plates and their ink-impressions kindly furnished by Mr. K. Natarajan, Superintendent, Government Press, Nagpur.

They are a set of two plates, each of which measures 11" broad, 8" high and .1" thick. Their rims are raised for the protection of the writing. They are inscribed on one side only, and contain at the top a round hole, .3" in diameter, for the ring which must have originally held them together. But neither the ring nor the seal which it may have carried has been discovered. The surface of both the plates has been corroded here and there, which has resulted in the loss of a few letters; otherwise the writing is in a state of fair preservation. The average size of the letters is .3" except in the last five lines on the second plate where, for want of sufficient space, it has been reduced to .2". The weight of the plates is 107 tolas.

The characters are Nāgarī. The left portion of the initial a and ā shows a curve, see ashṭādaś-, 1.8 and ādāya, 1.7; the initial i has two different forms in iti, 1.11 and iśa-, in 1.40; the palatal ś shows transitional forms; see -Tripur-iśa, 1.9, and śrīmad-, 1.28. Its modern form as the first member of the conjunct śr occurs in śrēshṭhī, 1.34; the left portion of kh shows a tail in some places, see, e.g., kehalu, 1.34, its older form being noticed in Nōmal-ākhyā 1.16; dh also shows a fully developed left limb in -dharmmaḥ, 1.35, but it has elsewhere its old form; see, e.g., dhīrō 1.13; ṇ is still without a dot; see -Vāṇkēśvar-, 1.28.

The language is Sanskrit. Except for the opening ōm namō Vrahmaṇē and some portion of the formal part of the grant, the record is metrically composed throughout. There are twenty-two verses in all, of which the first and the third occur in the earlier records of the main branch of the Kalachuri dynasty, e.g., the Banaras plates of Karṇa, while the last six, which, as usual, are benedictive and imprecatory, are found in several other grants. The present inscription was very carelessly composed and written or incised. There are several mistakes due to omission or incorrect writing of words which make the task of interpretation very difficult, especially in the formal part of the grant. As regards orthography, the sign of v is everywhere employed to denote b; see, e.g., -Vrahmaṇē, 1.2, -vibhyat-, 1.4; the anusvāra is wrongly changed to n before s and h; see tad-vansa-, 1.5, -sinhāḥ, 1.8; while the palatal ś and dental s have been confused in many places; see -Sākambharī, 1.7 and śatya-vāchaḥ, 1.34.

The plates were granted by Prithvidēva (I) of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. After the customary obeisance to Brahman, the record mentions after the sun and Manu, Kārtavīrya who imprisoned Rāvaṇa. His descendants were known as Haihayas. In their family was born Kōkkala¹, the founder of the family of the Chēdī kings. He is said to have despoiled the kings of Karṇāṭa, Vaṅga, Gurjara, Kōṅkaṇa and Śākambharī, the Turushkas and the descendants of Raghu of their treasure, horses and elephants, and erected a pillar of victory. He had eighteen sons of whom the eldest became the lord of Tripurī. He made his brothers the lords of maṇḍalas by his side. In the family of a younger brother of these was born Kaliṅgarāja. His son was Kamalarāja, who vanquished the king of Utkalā and gave his fortune to his lord

Gāṅgēyadēva. His son was Ratnarāja, who married Nōnnalā,¹ the daughter of Vajuvvarman, the lord of the Kōmō-Manḍala. Their son was Prithvidēva (I), the donor of the present grant. He is described here as the sole lord of twenty-one thousand (villages), the extremely mighty ruler of the entire Kōsala country, the Mahāmaṇḍalēśvara who had acquired the pañchamahāśabda and was a devout worshipper of Mahēśvara.

The object of the present inscription is to record the donation of the village Vasāhā in the Apara-maṇḍala² on the occasion of the construction of a chatushkikā, or a hall resting on four pillars, of the temple of Vaṅkēśvara in Tummāṇa. The donee was the Brāhmaṇa Kēśava³ of the Āṅgīrasa gōtra with the three pravaras Utathya, Gautama and Vasishṭha.⁴ He was the son of Chānda,⁵ the grandson of the Upādhyāya Thirāicha (Sthirāditya) and the great-grandson of Yaśōdēva. He had emigrated from Hastiyāmathī. The grant was made on Sunday, the seventh tithi of the dark fortnight of Phālguna of the year 831 (expressed in numerical figures only) of (the era of) the lord of Chēdi (Chēd-īśasya). The witnesses of the gift were three persons, probably officials, viṣ., Trivikramarāja, Vikrama and Arjuna. The Srēṣṭhīn Yaśa, the Mayor of Ratnapura, and the rich Dhōdhāka also made a gift of land, apparently to the same Brāhmaṇa. The charter was written by Alhaṇa, the owner of a village named Garbha. It was incised by the sculptor Hāsala.

The date of the present grant must evidently be referred to the Kalachuri era. R. B. Hiralal explained Chēdiśa used in connection with it as signifying Chhattisgarh.⁶ The latter name, which apparently means (the country of) thirty-six forts, is according to him a corruption of Chēd-īśa-gaḍha, 'the forts or districts of the lord of Chēdi'. But the derivation is fanciful. Kōsala, or Dakṣiṇa-Kōsala, not Chēdi, was the ancient name of Chhattisgarh. As Pargiter has shown,⁷ Chēdi was the name of the country along the southern bank of the Yamunā. Southwards it probably extended to the Vindhyas. Besides, chhattisa is derived from the Sanskrit śat-trimśat and not from Chēd-īśa. The reason why the era is specified here as belonging to the lord of Chēdi is that it was introduced for the first time in Chhattisgarh by a subordinate branch of the Kalachuri dynasty. The latter owed allegiance to the main house of Tripurī which ruled over the Chēdi country. The kings of Sarabhapura and those of the Sōmavarṁśī dynasty, who were ruling in Chhattisgarh before the Kalachuris, used only regnal years in dating their records. In the 11th century A.C. to which the present record belongs, the era was used in India only by the Kalachuris who were then ruling over the Chēdi country. As it was not previously current in Chhattisgarh, it had to be specified as above to prevent confusion.

The date of the present grant regularly corresponds, for the current Kalachuri year 831, to Sunday, the 27th January 1079 A. C. The seventh tithi of the dark fortnight of the pūrṇimānta Phālguna ended 7 h. 30 m. after mean sunrise on that day. In 1080 A.C., the tithi fell on a Thursday and in 1081 A.C., on a Wednesday, neither of which years would, therefore, be suitable. This is one of the few dates of the Kalachuri era citing a current year.

³ He is called a sage in l. 27. He is mentioned as a witness in the preceding grant (No. 75, l. 13).

⁷ J. A. S. B., Vol. LXIV, Part I, p. 253.

Of the geographical names occurring in the present grant, Karṇāṭa Vaṅga, Gurjara and Kōṅkaṇa are too well-known to need identification. Śākambharī, the capital of the Chāhamānas, was the name of the city near the Sāmbhar lake. Tripurī and Ratnapura have already been identified. Tummāṇa, which was the first capital of the Kalachuris in Chhattisgarh, has been satisfactorily identified with Tumān, 45 m. north of Ratanpur.¹ The present grant shows that Tummāṇa continued to receive royal attention even after the capital was shifted to Ratanpur. Kōmō-maṇḍala appears to be the ancient name of the country surrounding the village Kōmō in the Pēṇḍrā Zamindari, 25 miles north by west of Ratanpur. Vasahā, the donated village, is clearly Basahā, about 12 miles north by east from Bilaspur. The name of the maṇḍala, in which it was situated, cannot be read with certainty. Rai Bahadur Hiralal read it is Yayapara-maṇḍala and identified it with the territory round Jaijaipur, in the Jānjgir tahsil, 10 miles from Amōdā. It is however, not unlikely that the intended reading was Apara-maṇḍala² or the Western Division which may have included the territory round Basahā. Hastiyāmaṭhī, from which the donee had emigrated, is probably identical with Hāthmuḍī in the Mungeli tahsil of the Bilaspur District, about 45 miles west of Bilaspur.

³ Read -सिन्हाः.

⁷ This aksbaras is clearly sa.

⁸ The five aksbaras at the end of this line are not certain. I suggest the reading उच्चैःश्रवःप्रथित-वारुण-

TRANSLATION

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to Brahman !

(Verse 1) Adoration to that reality, Brahman, which is attributeless, all-pervasive, eternal and auspicious, the ultimate cause (of the universe) and supreme light conceivable by the mind.

(V. 2) The foremost luminary of the firmament is the sun, the Primeval Being. Then was born from him his son Manu, the first of kings. In his family there was born Kārtāvīrya on the earth.

(V. 3) There was the king, the divine and illustrious Kārtavīrya, an ornament of the earth, who threw into bondage Rāvaṇa, who had propitiated Śiva with the embrace of the daughter of the Himālaya (i.e., Pārvatī) who was terrified as he (i.e., Rāvaṇa) lifted up the mountain (Kailāsa) with ease and who (i.e., Rāvaṇa) was greatly enraged when his offerings to the three-eyed (Śiva) were washed away by the stream of the greatly flooded Rēvā which was turned back by the suddenly placed dam of his mighty arms.

(V. 4) The kings born in his family became (known as) Haihayas on the earth. In their family was born that (famous) Kōkkala, the first king of the Chaidyas.⁹

(V. 5) By that king was erected on the earth a pillar of victory after forcibly dispossessing the kings of Karṇāṭa and Vaṅga, the lord of the Gurjaras, the ruler of Kōṅkaṇa, the lord of Śākambharī, the Turushka and the descendant of Raghu,¹⁰ of their treasure, horses and elephants.

(V. 6) He had eighteen, very valiant sons, who destroyed their enemies as lions break open the frontal globes of elephants; the eldest of them, an excellent prince, became the lord of Tripurī and he made his brothers the lords of maṇḍalas by his side.

³ This pāda is lacking in one akṣara. Read यस्य.

⁵ Read —स्तान्ने. Hiralal suggested चकोरनयनो, but a Sanskrit poet would not use such an epithet with a male person, much less in his own case.

⁸ Metre: Vasantatilakā.

¹⁰ Probably the contemporary prince of the Gurjara-Pratihāra dynasty.

(V. 7) In the family of a younger brother of these was born Kaliṅgarāja who exterminated the hostile kings with the fire of (his) valour, and who was to the faces of the wives of the great warriors of (his) hated enemies even as the full moon is to the day-lotuses.¹

(V. 8) From him also was born a son, who became famous by the name of Kamalarāja, and appeared lovely with his far-spreading spotless glory. When the sun of his valour rose, the assemblages of lotuses bloomed even at night.

(V. 9) The firm-minded (prince), having vanquished the lord of Utkala, gave (his) wealth to his lord Gāṅgēyadēva, and (thus) resembled the Mandara mountain which, churning the milk-ocean, gave Lakshmi to the god² worshipped by (Bhishma), the son of Gaṅgā, and pleased gods and demons by bestowing on them precious things like Uchchaiṣravas [and wine].³

(V. 10) He begat Ratnarāja (I), who surpassed the lustre of the sun, to become an ornament to (other) princes even as the ocean produced the Kaustubha to adorn (Vishṇu) who supports the earth.

(V. 11) (He) destroyed the proud and hostile neighbouring princes as the sun dispels darkness. As if because of the heat of his valour, his enemies took shelter in the sea for coolness.

(V. 12) (His wife) named Nōnnalā was dear to him as valour is to a brave person. She was the daughter of Vajuvvarman, the lord of the Kōmō-maṇḍala.

(For a translation of vv. 13 and 14, see that of vv. 1 and 2, above, p. 401.)

(Line 21) 'This Mahāmaṇḍalēśvara (Prithvidēva I),—who shines in the midst of all kings by (his excellences) such as birth in the Kalachuri family; who is adorned with all decorations together with the entire multitude of honours; who frightens the hostile army with the noise caused by his haste in conquering the world which is filled with the sound of his two conches, who has acquired the pañchamahāśabda; who has become the great and mighty lord of the entire Kōśala (country) and the sole ruler of twenty-one thousand (villages) by the grace of Vaṅkēśvara attained by him, and who is a devout worshipper of Mahēśvara,—has given as a grant by (pouring) water on (the donee's) hand, after washing both the resplendent feet of the holy Vaṅkēśvara and filling the hollow of his hand with water mixed with kusa, whole rice-grains and gold, on (the occasion of) the dedication of a hall resting on four pillars of (the temple of) the god, the holy Vaṅkēśvara, in Tumāṇaka, on Sunday, the seventh tithi of the dark fortnight of Phālguna, the village Vasahā in the Apara-maṇḍala⁴ with its four boundaries well-determined, to the sage Kēśava, the great-grandson of Yaśōdēva, grandson of the Upādhyāya Thirāīcha and son of Chānda, who belongs to the Āṅgīrasa gōtra, has the three *pravara*s Utathya, Gautama and Vasishṭha,⁵ and is (a student) of the Bahvricha śākhā (i.e., Rigvēda) for the increase of religious merit and fame of (his) mother and father and of himself.

² I. e., to Vishṇu.

(L. 30) Therefore this (Brāhmaṇa), his sons, sons' sons and other (lineal) descendants should enjoy, without any interference, this (village) together with shares, enjoyments, taxes, (dues in) gold coins, fines for (illegal) distillation etc. as a self-contained village as long as the moon, the sun, the earth, the ocean, wind and the sky will endure.

(Verse 15) Vikramarāja (whose name is) preceded by tri (i.e., Trivikramarāja), Vikramarāja who is marvellous in valour and Arjuna, the best of warriors, who has vanquished his enemies—these have, indeed pledged (their) true word.

(V. 16) Then the minister Vighraharāja,¹ the banker Yaśa and the rich Dhōdhāka, observing the law of truth, gave land to the Brāhmaṇa Kēśava.

(Here follow five benedictive and imprecatory verses.)

(V. 22) The good poet Alhaṇa, the owner of (the village) Garbha,² who is a devotee of Īśa, wrote on the copper (plates) excellent sentences in (letters resembling) the eyes of a Chakōra. The clever Hāsala, the repository of all mechanical arts, inscribed them in splendid lines and excellent letters.

The year 831 of the lord of Chēdi.

No. 77; PLATE LXVA

RATANPUR STONE INSCRIPTION OF JAJALLADEVA I : (KALACHURI) YEAR 866

THIS inscription is incised on the beautifully polished surface of a red sand-stone which was found at Ratanpur, 16 miles north of Bilaspur, the headquarters of the Bilaspur District in Madhya Pradesh. It is now deposited in the Central Museum, Nagpur. The record was edited, with a translation and a lithograph, by Dr. Kielhorn in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. I, pp. 33 ff. It is edited here from the original stone and the lithograph accompanying Dr. Kielhorn's article.

'The inscription consists of 31 lines. The writing originally covered a space of about 2' 2½" broad by 2' 2" high. At present, a small portion of the upper proper left corner and a large portion of the lower right corner of the stone are broken away, so that from 4 to 9 aksharas are missing at the end of the first five lines and from 2 to about 25 aksharas at the beginning of the last thirteen lines.' Small portions of the stone have also been broken away at the upper right and lower left corners, which has resulted in the loss or mutilation of about a dozen aksharas. Further, some aksharas which were clearly legible in Dr. Kielhorn's time, have since been broken away from the proper right edge of the stone.³ I have, however, succeeded in reading a few aksharas from their traces on the stone⁴ which Dr. Kielhorn found illegible from the impression supplied to him.

The characters are Nāgarī. The size of the letters is about .5". The prishthamātrās are used in some places. The sign of avagraha occurs in ll. 12, 18, 24 and 29. The language is Sanskrit, and except for the introductory obeisance to Siva and the date at the end, the inscription is metrically composed throughout. There are 34 verses, all of which are numbered. In respect of orthography it may be noted that the dental ṣ is used for the palatal ś in many places; see, e. g., sapharī—, l. 1, sirasi, l. 2, = vaṁśē, l. 4, and vice versa in

² See No. 75, l. 15. This village is probably mentioned in l. 30 of the next inscription (No. 77) also.

a few cases, see -tamiśra-, l.9, titami, l.19, -śarasah, l.26; the rules of sandhi are neglected in samabhavat śrī-, l.3, mitravat śrīyā, l.20, etc.; on the other hand, the sandhis made in two places (vv. 3 and 20) do not suit the metre. The consonant following r is occasionally doubled, see, e.g., svarnnadi-, l.1, -varddhayāmāsa, l.8, prasarpita-, l.16; mvra is used for mra in l.10 and b is denoted by the sign for v except in abdhi-, l.18.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Jājalladēva (I) of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. His genealogy is traced from the moon, the mythical ancestor of the family. The first historical personage named after the legendary Kārtavīrya and his sons, the Haihayas, is Kōkalla, the lord of Chēdi. He had eighteen sons, of whom the eldest became the lord of Tripurī. He made his brothers lords of mandalas. The family of one of these younger brothers produced in course of time Kaliṅgarāja, who leaving the ancestral country,¹ conquered Dakṣiṇa Kōsala by his arms. He resided at Tummāṇa as the place was previously the capital of his ancestors. From him was born Kamalarāja who had a son named Ratnarāja (I). The latter adorned Tummāṇa with several temples such as those of the gods Vaṅkēśvara and Ratnēśvara, orchards and palatial buildings. He also founded Ratnapura and adorned it with many temples. The inscription then mentions the Srēṣṭhin Yaśa², the Mayor of Ratnapura, who, as already seen, has also been named in the Amōdā plates of Prithvidēva I. Ratnadēva (I) married Nōnallā the daughter of Vajjūka, the lord of the Kōmō-maṇḍala. She bore to him a son name Prithvidēva (I) who succeeded him. He constructed several temples such as that of Prithviśvara at Tummāṇa and excavated a large tank at Ratnapura. He married Rājallā from whom he had a son named Jājalladēva (I). The latter's friendship was sought by the lord of Chēdi. He was also honoured with presents of wealth by the kings of Kānyakubja and Jējābhukti. He defeated Sōmēśvara and imprisoned him together with his ministers and wives, but afterwards released them as desired by his mother. The kings of Kōsala, Andhra, Khimidi, Vairāgara, Lañjikā, Bhāṇāra, Talahāri, Daṇḍakapura, Nandāvali and Kukkuṭa paid annual tributes or presents to him.

Jājalladēva I seems to have founded a town named Jājallapura, where he constructed a monastery for ascetics, raised a garden, planted a grove of mango trees and excavated a tank. The object of the inscription is evidently to record the king's donation of the villages Sirulī, Arjunakōṇasaraṇa and some others, whose names are lost, to the deity installed in a temple, apparently at Jājallapura, and of a group of pāṭala trees to the monastery.

The inscription mentions Rudraśiva, a Śaiva ascetic who was Jājalladēva's spiritual preceptor. He was conversant with the logical systems of Diṇnāga and others as well as with Śaiva and other siddhāntas. Vigraharāja, the king's minister for peace and war, is next mentioned, but in what connection it is not clear.³ The name of the poet who composed the prastasti is lost, but he was in some way related to a personage of the Kāyastha caste who belonged to a Gauḍa family and was a minister of the king Karṇa. This Karṇa is clearly the well-known Kalachuri Emperor Karṇa. His Kāyastha minister is probably identical with the one who put up the Rewa stone inscription. The writer of the present prastasti may, therefore, have been his son or some near relative. If the next verse also refers to him he seems to have owned the village Garbha¹. The prastasti was written by a person who seems to have belonged to the Vāstavya family. His name which is partly mutilated ended in *-dhara*².

¹ Kielhorn, who in his text separated yēn-āyaṇi from trita-saurya in l.7, thought that Tritasaurya was the ancestral country, from which Kaliṅgarāja proceeded to conquer Dakṣiṇa Kōsala. Hiralal, following Kielhorn's reading, suggested that Tritasaurya was derived from Tritsu, the well-known Vedic tribe and that Tritasauryas were the enemies of the Kalachuris. (Ind. Ant., Vol. LXIII, pp. 269 ff.) Both these interpretations appear to be wrong. While it is possible to take Tritasaurya as the name of a country in l.7, such a construction is impossible in l.4 where also a similar expression seems to have originally occurred, but is now damaged. Besides, no such country is known from any other Kalachuri record. I, therefore, prefer to make the pada-chchēda as yēna a-yamtrita-sau(śau)rya-kōśa in both the passages. See my article in the Kane Festschrift, pp. 290 ff.

³ His name occurs also in the Raipur and Amōdā plates of Prithvidēva I (Nos. 75 and 76, above).

The inscription is dated, in the last line, in the year 866 (expressed in decimal figures only) on Sunday, the 9th tithi of the bright fortnight of Mārgaśīrsha. This date must, of course, be referred to the Kalachuri era and regularly corresponds, for the expired Kalachuri year 866, to Sunday, the 8th November 1114 A.C. On that day the 9th tithi of the bright fortnight of Mārgaśīrsha ended 20 h. after mean sunrise.³

As for the geographical names in the present record, Tummāṇa, as already shown, is identical with Tumān, 26 m. north-east of Ratanpur. Kōmō-maṇḍala has already been identified. Kānyakubja is, of course, the well-known city of Kānauj, for a long time the imperial capital of North India, and Jējābhukti is Jajjhauti, the capital of the Chandēllas. Andhra is the country between the Gōdāvarī and the Kṛishṇā. Khimiḍī is probably identical with the Zamindari named Kimiḍi in the Ganjām District. It is mentioned with Kōsala (modern Chhattisgarh) in the Dīrghāsī stone inscription.⁴ Vairāgara is, as shown by R. B. Hiralal, identical with Vayixāgaram mentioned in the Chōla records and is plainly identical with the modern Vairāgarh in the Chanda District, 80 m. north-east of Chanda. Lañjikā is clearly Lānji and Bhāṇāra Bhandara, the chief town of the Bhandara District of Madhya Pradesh. Talahāri is the name of the territory round Mallār as appears from the description in a record found at Mallār (No. 97, below). Daṇḍakapura may be the capital of Daṇḍabhukti which evidently comprised some portions of the Midnapur and Balasore Districts. The place may be identical with Dantan in South Midnapur District as suggested by Mr. R. D. Banerji.⁵ Nandāvalī and Kukkuṭa cannot be identified. Jājallapura, which was evidently founded by Jājalladēva, may be identical with Jānjgir (Jājallanagara), the headquarters of a tahsil of the same name in the Bilaspur District. Śirulī, which was donated to the temple in Jājallapura, is probably represented by Sirli, 8 m. south-west of Jānjgir. Arjunakōṇasaraṇa may be Arjuni, 14 m. west of Jānjgir. Two other place-names Garbha and Haladī are mentioned in l. 30 of the present record. Of these, the former is also mentioned in the Raipur and Amōdā plates of Prithvidēva I and may be identical with Gōbrā in the Jānjgir tahsil, while the latter is perhaps Haldi in the Bilaspur tahsil, 35 m. south-west of Jānjgir.

TRANSLATION

[Ōm! Adoration to Siva!]

(Verse 1) May that Īśa (Śiva) grant (you) well-being!—he, (about the object) on whose head (various doubts are entertained, such as)—Is it the crescent portion of the moon, [or, is it] not [a piece of mother-of-pearl] lying on the bank of the celestial river, the waters of which are augmented by the flood of the nectar-fluid....or is it, oh, a fish....gone to heaven.....!

(V. 2) 'This highest light, dispelling darkness, which has the lustre of the eye of the three worlds—(the people) call it the Being who is a mine of nectar....(who is) not the last from whom (proceeded) a line of universal sovereignty, the progenitor of the Kshatriyas;—in his race was born on the earth the illustrious Kārtavīrya.

(V. 3) In his race (there) was Haihaya, from whom were born the Haihayas.... being the beloved of [Ādi]tyasēna (?).

(V. 4) In the race of those Haihayas was born that ruler of Chēdi, the illustrious Kōkalla, an image of the god of love, in whom the whole world found delight—(he), who with his unimpeded valour, [treasure and might], sent forth his own glory to measure how much the universe was above (and) below the earth.¹⁰

³ The missing letters were evidently नृपस्य.

⁹ The mātrā on ज appears to have been cancelled.

¹⁰ Kielhorn, who made the pada-cchēbēda as yēna ayam Tritasaurya, translated, 'by whom, (being) on earth, in order to measure his own fame; how much it might be, this.....of(?) Tritasaurya was sent up high into the universe.' But the construction ayam.....prēshitam is grammatically indefensible. I would, therefore, take the words as yēna a-yam trita-sau(rya)-; see above, p. 410, n. 1.

(V. 5) He had eighteen sons who destroyed his enemies as lions slay elephants (and) who augmented [the treasury of their family]. The eldest of them afterwards became the lord of Tripurī. He made the remaining brothers the lords of maṇḍalas.

(V. 6) The race of one of these younger brothers obtained, in the course of time, the matchless son, Kaliṅgarāja, a tree of prowess grown large by the water of the eyes of the wives of his enemies ; who, in order to augment his unimpeded prowess and treasure,¹ left his ancestral country and acquired by his two arms the country of Southern Kōśāla.

(V. 7) Since Tummāṇa had been made a capital by his ancestors, he, residing there and destroying his enemies, increased his fortune.

(V. 8) As the moon (was produced) from the ocean, so was born here from him Kamalarāja, lovely by his wide-spread spotless fame ; who destroyed hostile people and augmented the splendour and beauty of men's minds even as the moon dispels blinding darkness and makes the night-lotuses look more lovely.

(V. 9) As the ocean (produced) the Kaustubha for the decoration of the supporter of the earth² (Vishṇu), so he begat Ratnarāja (I), who surpassed the radiance of the sun to be an ornament of kings.

(V. 10) Tummāṇa, with its temples of the holy Vaṅkēśa and other (gods) and also (those of) Ratnēśvara and others, with a garden containing innumerable flowers and good fruits and a beautiful high mango-grove and crowded with mansions and decorated with charming beauty, was made, by Ratnēśa, delightful to the eyes, when viewed by the people.

(V. 11) This extensive and glorious Ratnapura which Ratnēśvara established has its fame known in (every) quarter ; with a great lord residing (in it), it resembles the city of Kubēra (occupied by Mahēśa, i.e., Śiva); being decked with many-coloured wonderful jewels, it looks like the ocean, and decorated as it is with many temples, it appears like heaven (graced by many families of gods).

(V. 12) On all sides this Ratnapura says: "Since Ratnarāja ordered me to be established on the earth, and since the banker Yaśa³ has been in charge of me, may the fame of these two spread in the three worlds on account of me !"

(V. 13) Nōnallā, the famous daughter of Vajjūka, the ruler of the Kōmō-maṇḍala was married by Ratnarāja together with royal fortune.

(V. 14) From her was born Pṛithvīśa (I), endowed with the qualities of righteousness and valour. He led to heaven his relatives by (his) righteousness and his enemies by (his) valour in fighting.

(V. 15) When Ratnarāja, who by his valour and other (qualities) vanquished his enemies, had gone to heaven for work in heaven, his son Pṛithvīdēva (I), the royal hero, became king after him. He was a guardian of the world with his hundreds of excellent qualities, the foremost of which were his lordly nature, munificence and valour. The frightened princes bowed to him since he was (verily) a god on the earth.⁴

(V. 16) With Pṛithvīdēva (I) ruling over it, the earth became heaven itself. This marvel was clearly manifest since (the earth) was everywhere occupied by heroes, spread

² There is a play on the word mabibharti.

⁴ Pṛithvīdēva, the king's name, literally means 'a god on the earth'.

over with abundant fortune, and covered with a hundred sacrifices ; since it had a splendid great lord and was (in consequence) firm ; since the wise men living on it caused joy to all people ; since it had extensive mansions and was matchless (*even as heaven is resorted to by valiant men, looks splendid, is chosen by Indra, has the Sun, Mahēṣa and Achyuta, and (also) Budha who delights the world, and is inhabited by the moon, the abode of nectar who moves about, in it*¹).

(V. 17) For religious merit and fame, (the temples of) Pṛithvidēvēśvara and others were erected at Tummāṇa and a tank resembling the ocean was excavated by him at Ratnapura.

(V. 18) He married Rājallā, who by her loveliness looked resplendent like the moon, who was steadfast in her love like Lakshmi (who loves Achyuta, i.e., Viṣṇu), and who by her happy wifehood resembled Pārvatī.

(V. 19) As Indra (begat) Jayanta on Sachi, and the ocean the moon in the beauty of heaven, even so Pṛithvidēva (I) begat the famous Jājalla (I) on her.

(V. 20) What a wonder ! His fame, shining like the lustre of the cool-rayed (moon), rendered in every direction a hundred women red² and the world white, while it made the enemies black (with shame). The illustrious Jājalladēva, who rises up as a hero day by day, was, on account of the abundance of his prowess, induced to become his (intimate) friend by the lord of Chēdi forming an alliance of princes.³

(V. 21) As he was valiant, he was, on account of his prowess, honoured like a friend with (presents of) fortune by the king of Kānyakubja and the ruler of Jējābhuktika.

(V. 22) He who is possessed of all the seven kinds⁴ of fortune ; (by whom) was seized in battle Sōmēśvara was burnt by him after slaying (his) immense army ; and by whom was captured and then released at his mother's words, the group of (his) ministers and wives ;—say, have you seen or heard of (another) such prince on earth ?

(V. 23) To whom the princely rulers of these maṇḍalas, viz., [Dakshi]ṇa-Kōsala, Andhra, Khimiḍī, Vairāgara, Lañjikā, Bhāṇāra, Talahāri, Daṇḍakapura, Nandāvalī (and) Kukkuṭa—some out of friendship, some in order to please, gave him fixed year after year.

(V. 24) While he is shining, the sole umbrella held over his head, while causing coolness to (his) people, strange (to say), may well oppress the hearts of his enemies !

(V. 25) “Nobility, valour, serenity . . . are in him.”—Thus has the Earth proclaimed with her uplifted excellent arms in the form of the temples of gods extremely white like his fame !

(V. 26) “Is this that god of love possessed of a lovely⁵ form who has not been seen by the eye of the three-eyed (Śiva) ? Is it [the god of] Vaikuṇṭha (i.e., Viṣṇu) [joined] by Srī (the goddess of fortune) ? Is this the sun on account of his radiance, (or) the moon by his mighty splendour, (or) the bestower of wealth (Kubēra) dear to suppliants ?” —The people, thus reflecting, came to know him as Jājalladēva after a long time.

¹ There is a play on several words, in consequence of which the several adjectives of lōka-sthiti can also be construed with svarga.

² There is a play on the word rakta which means also ‘fallen in love’.

⁵ See above, p. 413, n. 17.

(V. 27) That famous Jājallapura....a monastery for ascetics; a mango grove with a garden; a beautiful lake equal to the lake of heaven, which the illustrious Jājalladēva caused to be made. May that be lovely like (his) fame !

(V. 28) His religious preceptor was the holy Rudraśiva who knew the authoritative works of Diñnāga and others and knew the established doctrines of his own and others' (systems).

(V. 29) His minister for peace and war also was Vigraharāja

(V. 30) To the god the king Jājalla gave the excellent village of Sirulī (and) to the monastery a groups of pāṭalā (trees) as a perpetual gift.

(V. 31) Arjunakōṇasaraṇa

(V. 33) The lord of the village Garbha has brought his spotless merits into the eulogy....of the excellent Haladī [village?].....

(V. 34) the learned [Kīrti]dhara, the younger brother of [him who was] born in the Vāstavya (family) wrote (this) eulogy which has reached all directions.

Nos. 78-81 ; PLATE LXVB¹

PALI STONE INSCRIPTIONS OF JAJALLADEVA I

THESE inscriptions were discovered in 1904 by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar who published his transcripts of them in the Progress Report of the Archaeological Survey of Western India for 1903-4, p. 52. They are edited here from inked estampages taken under my direction.

The inscriptions which are four in number² are incised on a wall, a door-way and a pilaster of the maṇḍapa of an exquisitely carved Siva temple at Pāli, 12 miles to the north-east of Ratanpur in the Bilaspur District of the Chhattisgarh Division in Madhya Pradesh.

The characters of all the inscriptions are of the Nāgarī alphabet. The form of the palatal f which closely resembles that in the Ratanpur stone inscription of Jājalladēva I³ (dated K. 866) indicates that the inscriptions belong to the beginning of the 12th century A.C. The size of the letters in the first three inscriptions is about 1.4" and that in the fourth one is .5". The language is Sanskrit. Each inscription consists of a single line in prose. Except in the fourth inscription, even that line is not free from gross mistakes of grammar and orthography.

The object of the inscriptions is to record an unspecified kīrti (meritorious work) of Jājalladēva. This Jājalladēva must, of course, be referred to the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. There are two kings of this name known from inscriptions, of whom the first was ruling in K. 866 (1114-5 A. C.) and the second in K. 919 (1167-68 A.C.).¹ The palæography of the inscriptions leaves no doubt that they must be referred to the reign of Jājalladēva I.²

What was this work of Jājalladēva I, which is recorded in so many places? It could not have been the construction of the sanctum of the temple; for there is an inscription in three parts incised over three recesses in the architrave of the door-way of the garbhagriha, which records the construction of the structure by Vikramāditya, the son of the Mahāmaṇḍalēśvara Malladēva. As the names Malladēva and Vikramāditya occur in the dynastic lists of Bāṇa kings, Dr. Bhandarkar made the ingenious suggestion that this Vikramāditya may have been one of the Bāṇa kings.³ He could not definitely identify him at the time; because no such Vikramāditya, the son of Malladēva, was then known. From the Udayēndiram plates which had been published by Dr. Kielhorn,⁴ two Vikramādityas of the Bāṇa dynasty were known, but neither of them was a son of Malladēva. About the chronology of the Bāṇa kings also, there was considerable doubt. Dr. Kielhorn at first referred the second Vikramāditya mentioned in the Udayēndiram plates to the middle of the 12th century A.C.,⁵ but later on he identified his friend Kṛishṇarāja mentioned in the Udayēndiram plates with Kṛishṇa II of the Rāshtrakūta dynasty and thus referred Vikramāditya II of the Udayēndiram plates to the end of the 9th century A.C.⁶ The discovery of the Guḍimallam plates⁷ has placed the genealogy of the Early Bāṇa kings on a sound basis. As Dr. Hultzsch has shown, there were three Vikramādityas⁸ in the Bāṇa dynasty, of whom the first, called also Jayamēru, was the son of Malladēva. He is identical with Bāṇa-Vidyādhara mentioned in the Udayēndiram plates. As his son Vijayāditya-Prabhumēru was ruling in Saka 820⁹ we can place Vikramāditya (I) in the last quarter of the 9th century A.C. The Pāli inscription shows that he was ruling in Dakṣiṇa Kōsala or Chhattisgarh before the advent of the Kalachuris.¹⁰

Jājalladēva I was not thus the builder of the sanctum. He did not also probably erect the maṇḍapa of the temple, but may have repaired it. As Mr. Cousens has already noticed,¹¹ the maṇḍapa has been partly rebuilt, the additional walls across the corners to support the roof making it look as if it were originally octagonal in shape. And it is noteworthy that it is on one of these walls, the rebuilt door-way and an additional pilaster inserted to support a broken beam¹² that the following inscriptions are engraved. As a period of more than two hundred years separates the Bāṇa king Vikramāditya I from Jājalladēva I, it is not unlikely that the temple had fallen into disrepair during the time of the latter. Jājalladēva I seems, therefore, to have only repaired the maṇḍapa of the temple where the inscriptions are found.

SHEORINARAYAN PLATES OF RATNADEVA II : (KALACHURI) YEAR 878

THESE plates were found in the possession of Pandit Ramchandra Trivedi, the head priest of the main temple at Shēorinārāyaṇ, a well-known place of pilgrimage on the left bank of the Mahānadi, 38 miles south-east of Bilaspur in the Jānjgir tahsil of the Bilaspur District in Madhya Pradesh. They were first brought to notice by Pandit Lochan Prasad Pandeya of Balpur, who has edited them with lithographs, but without a translation, in the Indian Historical Quarterly, Vol. IV, pp. 31-34. I edit the record here from the original plates which were kindly procured for me by the Curator of the Central Museum, Nagpur.

They are a set of two copper-plates held together by a ring .3" thick, the central portion of which is flattened into a round seal, 2.4" in diameter. The ring was not cut when the plates reached me. The seal contains the legend Mahārāṇaka-śrīmad-Ratnadēvaḥ, inscribed in two lines. Each plate measures 9.5" broad, 5.9" high and .1" thick and is inscribed on one side only. There are twenty-six lines in all, thirteen being inscribed on each plate. The letters are deeply engraved, but not well-formed. Their size is .25."

The characters are Nāgarī. The letters a, ṇ, bh, ś and s show transitional forms; see, e.g., a in api, l.23 and āsīt=, l.6; ṇ in -pūrṇa-pāṇiḥ, l.19; bh in =bhūbhritām=, l.4 and bhuvah,

² As the repairs were done in several places, the plural number of kīrti has been used.

³ Expressed by a symbol.

⁵ The akṣara व, which was at first omitted, is written below the line.

l.7; ś in śasinō-, ll.3-4 and yaśo-ti-, ll.17-18; ś in -śūnur-, l.9 and -śamślēsha-, l.6. The sign of avagraha occurs in ll.4 and 20. The language is Sanskrit. Except for ōm namō Vrahmaṇē in the beginning and the date at the end, the record is in verse throughout. In respect of orthography it may be noted that the consonant following r is doubled in a few places, e.g., in Kārttavīryō-, l.4; the dental ś is used for the palatal ś in śasi-, l.3; =Dasāsyam, l.6, Parāsara-, l.15 etc.; the dental n is employed for the lingual n in punya-, ll.17 and 21 and pratigrihnāti, l.20, and vra written for mra in tāvram, l.22.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Ratnadēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it is to record the grant, by Ratnadēva II, of the village Tiṇērī, situated in the viśaya of Anarghavallī, on the occasion of a lunar eclipse. The donee was Nārāyaṇaśarman, the son of Tribhuvanapāla and son's son of Śilāditya, who was a student of the Sāmavēda and belonged to the Parāśara gōtra with the three pravaras, Vasistha, Sakti and Parāśara.

The genealogy of Ratnadēva II down to his father Jājalladēva (I) is given here as in the latter's Ratanpur stone inscription.¹ It may, however, be noted that the relation of Kaliṅgarāja to a younger son of Kōkalla I, who is called here 'the lord of Vaṅkō-Tummāna' is not explicitly stated in the present record, but from the manner in which his name is introduced he seems to be referred to as his son. Jājalladēva's victory over a king named Bala is alluded to by means of a double entendre in verse 8. This Bala is clearly Bhujabala, the lord of Suvarṇapura, whose defeat by Jājalladēva I is explicitly mentioned in the Kharōd stone inscription² of K.933.

The inscription is dated in the year 878 (expressed by decimal figures only) on the 5th tithi of the bright fortnight of Bhādra (i.e., Bhādrapada), on Sunday. According to the epoch of 247-48 A.C. this date regularly corresponds, for the expired Kalachuri year 878, to Sunday, the 14th August 1127 A.C. On that day the aforementioned tithi ended 8 h. 50 m. after mean sunrise. The date of the present inscription, like that of the Rewa stone inscription of Malayasimha,³ clearly shows that with the epoch of 247-48 A.C., the Kalachuri year could not have commenced on Bhādrapada śu. di. 1 as was once supposed by Dr. Kielhorn.⁴

As stated before, the grant recorded in the present inscription was made on the occasion of a lunar eclipse. The nearest lunar eclipse which occurred before the aforementioned date is the one which took place on the full-moon day of Jyēṣṭha, the corresponding Christian date being the 27th May 1127 A.C.⁵ The grant was, therefore, reduced to writing more than two months after it was made.

Of the place-names mentioned in this record, Tripurī has already been identified. Vaṅkō-Tummāna is identical with Tumān in the Bilaspur District as shown before. The place was so called on account of the well-known shrine of the god Vaṅkēśvara which is mentioned in other records also. Anarghavallī probably corresponds to the modern Jānjgir tahsil, though no place of that name can now be traced in it. Tiṇērī, the donated village, also cannot now be identified.

⁴ Ind. Ant., Vol. XVII, p. 215.

⁵ It is not necessary to identify the lunar eclipse with that which occurred as far back as the 10th January 1126 A. C. as is done by Hirralal. (See his Inscriptions in C. P. and Berar, second ed. p. 128). It is also not necessary to suppose with him that 'a lunar eclipse was of greater importance to a scion of the lunar dynasty than a solar one'.

TRANSLATION

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to Brahman !

(Verse 1) Obeisance to that most noble Brahman which is existence, which is the highest cause, without beginning or end, which is designated as the unmanifest, eternal and great, and independently of which, nothing exists.

(V. 2) In the race of the moon there was the king Haihaya, the foremost of rulers and an ornament of the three worlds. His descendant was Kārtavīrya ;—

(V. 3) He who defeated the ten-faced (Rāvaṇa), who had pleased Siva by making Bhavānī embrace his body (when she was) terrified by his lifting up of the Kailāsa (mountain), and whose rage was increased by the washing away of his offerings to Siva on account of the flooding waters of the Rēvā, sportively checked by the dam of his arms.²

(V. 4) In his race was the king Kōkala³, an ornament of the earth. He had eighteen proud sons, irresistible in battle.

(V. 5) The eldest of them, having become the lord of Tripurī, made, by his prowess, all his younger brothers the lords of maṇḍalas.

(V. 6) A younger brother of the lord of Tripurī, who was the king of Vaṅkō-Tummāṇa, had Kaliṅgarāja (as his son?⁴) and his son was the king Kamalarāja.

(V. 7) His son Ratnaraja (I) begat Prithvidēva (I). His son, who was adorned with valour, was Jājalladēva (I).

(V. 8) Of this victorious Jājalladēva (I), who destroyed Bala⁵ even as Indra killed Vṛitra, (and) who exterminated the allies of all kings as Indra clipped the wings of all mountains, there is the son, the illustrious Ratnadēva (II), a king who in form resembles Jayanta, (the son of Indra).

(V. 9) He,—who by his excessive prowess has oppressed all kings, whose sovereignty has extended to the farthest ends of the earth, who by his radiance has completely eclipsed the lustre of (other) kings and destroyed Vṛitra,⁶—has become manifestly and fit-

³ Elsewhere the name appears as Kōkalla.

⁴ In Nos. 76 and 77 above, Kaliṅgarāja is said to have been born in the family of a younger son of Kōkalla.

⁵ I. e., Bhujabala, the lord of Suvarṇapura; see above p. 420. The words jishṇu, paksha and bhūbhṛit have each a double entendre.

⁶ Vṛitra is, in the Rigveda, the name of Indra's enemy who is also called Vala. As we have seen, the poet has used Vala (or Bala) in l. 11 to signify Jājalladēva's enemy Bhujabala, the king of Suvarṇapura. Vṛitra in the present verse is, by double entendre, probably intended to signify the same king. (Vv. 10-13) The king Ratnadēva (II), whose hand was full of whole rice-grains and kuśa, gave, with (a pouring out of) water, on the holy occasion of a lunar eclipse, for the increase of the religious merit and fame of (his) mother and father and of himself, the village Tiṇērī (situated) in the district of Anarghavallī, the boundaries of which are well-marked, together with all taxes, to Nārāyaṇaśarman of the Parāśara gōtra with the three pravaras, Vasishṭha, Sakti and his son (i.e. Parāśara), who belongs to the Sāma vēda and is conversant with the work of the Udgātri (priest) and who is the son of the learned Tribhuvanapāla, and the son's son of Silāditya, who has studied and mastered the six Vēdāṅgas.

No. 83 ; PLATE LXVII

SARKHO PLATES OF RATNADEVA II : (KALACHURI) YEAR 880

THESE plates were found in 1916 in a tank called Gadhia in Sarkho,² a village 4 miles north of Jānjgir in the Bilaspur District of the Chhattisgarh Division in Madhya Pradesh. Pandit Lochan Prasad Pandeya, Honorary Secretary of the then Chhattisgarh Gaurava Prachāraka Maṇḍalī (now Mahākōsal Historical Society), came to know of them in 1925 and took immediate steps to acquire them for his Society. They are now in the possession of that Society at Bilaspur. The record was first published by Mr. Pandeya in the Hindi Monthly Mādhuri of Lucknow (Vol. V, pp. 317-22) and was subsequently edited with a lithograph by me in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XXII, pp. 159 ff. It is edited here from the original plates and their ink-impressions kindly supplied by the Government Epigraphist for India.

The inscription is on two substantial copper-plates, measuring 13.5" broad and 8.6" high. They are 1" in thickness. The first plate weighs 174 tolas and the second 181½ tolas. There is a hole, .6" in diameter, at the centre of the top of each plate for the ring which must have originally held them together. But no ring or seal is forthcoming now. The edges of the plates are raised into rims for the protection of the letters. There are 36 lines in all, 18 being inscribed on the inner side of each plate. The letters on the first plate were not deeply engraved and have been somewhat damaged by rust. There are also depressions here and there on its inscribed surface. There is, however, no uncertainty in the reading anywhere.

The characters are Nāgarī. The letters are beautifully written and carefully engraved. Their average size is .25". The form of the initial i is made up of two curves with a instance of a human enemy being referred to as a demon, see the Thāṇā plates of Aparājita dēva, dated Śaka 1049 (J. B. B. R. A. S., Vol. XXI, pp. 505 ff.) which speak of Chhittuka, the enemy of Aparājita, as an Asura. This Chhittuka was the Kadamba king Jayakēśari II, as shown by K. B. Pathak.

² Indra is described in the Ṛigvēda, as releasing the sun after slaying Vṛitra. So Vṛitra may be said to be the enemy of the sun also. He represents darkness.

looped or hooked end, turned in opposite directions and placed one below the other;¹ see, e.g., iti in ll.9 and 16 and iha in l.20. Prishṭhamātrās are generally used to denote medial diphthongs. The sign of v is generally used to denote b except in the forms babhiṭvur- and -babhiṭva, ll. 7 and 21 and the conjunct bdha of -labdhā- in l.17. The language is Sanskrit. Except for ōṃ namō Vrahmaṇē in the beginning, the record is metrically composed throughout. There are 35 verses, all of which are numbered. Of these, verses 1-3, 5-7 and 9, which bring the royal genealogy down to Prithivīdēva I, occur in the earlier Amōdā plates of Prithivīdēva I. Some of the benedictive and imprecatory verses, again, are common to the two records. In respect of orthography we may notice that the dental s and the palatal ś are confused, see, e.g., sahasrēṇa for sahasrēṇa, l.33, and that y is used for j in Vāyapēya, l.33 and possibly in Yāmvavat=², l.18, and vice versa in jātē, l. 23.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Ratnadēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it is to record the royal grant of the village Chiñchātalāī situated in the maṇḍala of Anarghavallī to a Brāhmaṇa named Padmanābha, on the occasion of a lunar eclipse. The record was written on the plates by Kirtidhara,³ the owner of the village Jaṇḍēra in the same maṇḍala of Anarghavallī.

The genealogy of Ratnadēva II down to his grand-father Prithivīdēva I is given here as in the latter's Amōdā plates, most of the verses descriptive of the kings being identical in both the records.⁴ The inscription then mentions Jājalladēva I, the son of Prithivīdēva I and Rājalladēvī and his son and successor Ratnadēva II, who made the present grant. The description of these princes also is merely conventional.

The pedigree of the donee Padmanābha begins in v. 11. His great-grandfather Mahasōṇa, a Brāhmaṇa of the Vatsa gōtra and five pravaras,⁵ hailed from Sōṇabhadra in Madhyadēśa (Middle Country). He had mastered all the Vēdas and Āgamas as well as the six Sāstras. He observed a fast unto death for fifty days at the holy place (tīrtha) Jāmbavat.⁶ His son was Sōmeśvara, who had a son named Kulachandra. The latter's son was Padmanābha. He was proficient in astrology and knew two Siddhāntas.⁷ In the presence of all astronomers in the assembly of Ratnadēva II, Padmanābha asserted that there would be a total lunar eclipse when three quarters of the night had passed and the moon was in the asterism Rōhiṇī on Thursday, the paurṇimā (fifteenth tithi of the bright fortnight) of Kārttika in the expired year 880. When the eclipse occurred at the predicted time, the king became pleased and donated the aforementioned village Chiñchātalāī to Padmanābha.

The foregoing particulars of the occasion on which the present grant was made clearly show that the other astronomers of Ratnadēva's court were using older methods of astronomical calculations. Their predictions of eclipses were not accurate and did not therefore come true. Padmanābha appears to have discovered the mistakes in their methods and making the necessary bīja-saṃskāras, correctly calculated the time of the particular lunar

³ He may be identical with the writer of the Ratanpur stone inscription of Jājalladēva. See above, p. 411, n. 2.

⁴ The verses descriptive of Kōkkala and Ratnarāja I are different. Those which occur here are repeated in the later records of the dynasty.

eclipse.¹ The date of the present grant must evidently be referred to the Kalachuri era. In 1128 A.C. (corresponding to the expired Kalachuri year 880) the Kārtika-paurṇimā ended at 50½ ghaṭikās (20 h. 10 m.) after mean sunrise on the 8th November. As stated in the present inscription, the week-day was Thursday and the nakṣatra Rōhiṇī which began at 13 h. 30 m. after mean sunrise. There was also a lunar eclipse on that day. According to Dr. K. L. Daftari of Nagpur, who has kindly calculated for me the time of the eclipse, the moon was totally eclipsed between 48 ghaṭikās, 42 palas and 52 ghaṭikās, 54 palas after mean sunrise at Ratanpur. Three quarters of the night were over at Ratanpur at 52 ghaṭikās and 34 palas when, as stated above, the moon was totally eclipsed. The date and the time of the eclipse can thus be completely verified.

As for the localities named here, Chiñchātalāi, the donated village, is probably Chichōlā (long. 82° 39' E., lat. 22° 10' N.) on the left bank of the Hasdo in the Jānjgir tahsil of the Bilaspur District. It is only 8 miles north by east of Sarkho. Jaṇḍēra, the village owned by the writer Kīrtidhara is probably identical with Jondrā (long. 82°, 21' E. and lat. 21°, 44' N.) on the left bank of the Seonāth river, about 4 miles outside the south-west limit of the Jānjgir tahsil. The maṇḍala of Anarghavallī in which both Chiñchātalāi and Jaṇḍēra were situated, is roughly represented by the present Jānjgir tahsil. Sōṇabhadra from which the donee hailed was situated in Madhyadēśa. It is probably identical with Śravaṇabhadra, to which two Brāhmaṇa donees of the Gaonri plates² of Vākpati-Muñja dated V. S. 1038 belonged. It is noteworthy that like the donee of the present grant, both of them belonged to the Vatsa gōtra and had five pravaras. Śravaṇabhadra is also mentioned in the Tilakwāḍā plates of Bhōja and as the family of Surāditya mentioned in those plates is said to have come from Kanauj, Rao Bahadur K. N. Dikshit has conjectured³ that Śravaṇabhadra was situated somewhere near Kanauj. Jāmbavat, where the great-grandfather of Padmanābha fasted himself to death, was a tīrtha. It is perhaps identical with the Jambutīrtha mentioned in the Padmapurāṇa,⁴ where there was a Siva-liṅga called Jāmbavantēśvara which is said to have been established by the lord of bears Jāmbavant, who helped śrī-Rāmachandra. From the context it appears to have been somewhere in the vicinity of the river Svabhramatī (modern Sābarmatī).

¹ K.L. Daftari conjectures that Padmanābha may have used for his calculation, the Rājyamṛigāṅka a karana work ascribed to king Bhōja of Dhārā in which the bijasaṃskāras seem to have been fixed after actual observation of planets. This work, though composed in Śaka 964 (1042 A.C.), i.e., 86 years before the date of the present plates, may not have been known to the other astronomers of Ratnadēva's court. Padmanābha could, therefore, score an easy victory over them. Cf. Sh. B. Dikshit's History of Indian Astronomy (Marāṭhī), second ed., p. 238.

Success ! Ōm Adoration to Brahman !

(Verse 1) Adoration to that reality Brahman, which is attributeless, all-pervasive, eternal and auspicious, the ultimate cause (of the universe) and supreme light conceivable by the mind !

(V. 2) The foremost luminary of the firmament is the sun, the Primeval Being. Then was born from him his son Manu, the first of kings. In his family there was Kārtavīrya born on the earth.

(V. 3) There was the king, the divine and illustrious Kārtavīrya, an ornament of the earth, who threw into bondage Rāvaṇa who had propitiated Śiva with the embrace of (Pārvatī) the daughter of the Himālaya, who was terrified as he (i.e., Rāvaṇa) lifted up the (Kailāsa) mountain with ease, and who (i.e., Rāvaṇa) was greatly enraged when his offerings to the three-eyed (Śiva) were washed away by the stream of the greatly flooded Rēvā which was turned by the suddenly placed dam of his mighty arms.

(V. 4) The kings born in his family became known on the earth as Haihayas. An ornament of their family was that illustrious Kōkkala (I) endowed with all excellences, who laid the fire of distress in the minds of (his) enemies; who accumulated fame after (amassing) the fortune of religious contemplation, (and) who was always dear to good people (as) one who made them happy.

(V. 5) He had eighteen very valiant sons, who destroyed their enemies even as lions break open the frontal globes of elephants. The eldest of them, an excellent prince, became the lord of Tripurī and he made his brothers the lords of maṇḍalas by his side.

(V. 6) In the family of a younger brother of these there was born Kaliṅgarāja who exterminated hostile kings with the fire of his valour and who was to the faces of the wives of the great warriors even as the full moon is to day-lotuses.²

(V. 7) From him also there was born a son who became famous by the name of Kamalarāja (and appeared) lovely with his far-spreading spotless glory. When the sun of his valour rose, the assemblages of lotuses bloomed even at night.

(V. 8) Thereafter he begat Ratnarāja (I), whose face was like the moon, and who acquired a mass of religious merit by obliging the (whole) world; (and) who, destroying (his) enemies by the valour of the pair of his arms, spread (his) fame in the three worlds.

² i.e., he made them look pale when he killed the warriors.

(V. 9) (His wife) named Nōnallā was dear to him as valour is to a brave person. Their son was Prithvidēva (I), the best of kings.

(V. 10) The son of the queen Rājallā, begotten by Prithvidēva (I), was the brave king Jājalladēva (I), the wish-fulfilling tree, bearing the fruit of fortune, which yielded their desired objects to good people,—(he) who was wont to worship all gods; who was (annoying like) a thorn to his fierce foes, and the god of love incarnate to the extremely lovely ladies who saw him.

(V. 11) His son was the illustrious Ratnadēva (II), a treasure on earth to those who served him; whose lovely form was an ornament of the whole Kōsala country; who snatched away the fortune of all kings; and whose feet were served by the heads of all kings.

(V. 12) In the midst of Ilāvarta and other countries (the country of) Bhārata is the best. There also Madhyadēśa is the best where there is that (well-known) Sōṇabhadra.

(V. 13) There was (a man) born in the family of the twice-born known by the name of Mahasōṇa, who sprang from the Vatsa gōtra, had five pravaras and emigrated from the famous Sōṇabhadra.

(V. 14) He was proficient in the group of six systems of philosophy and arts, knew, like Brahmā, all the Vēdas and Āgamas, and was always respected by all people. Being skilled and conversant with the settled doctrines of the Vēdānta (system), he obtained liberation of life after fasting for fifty days at the holy place (called) Jāmbavat at the time of death.

(V. 15) His son was Sōmēśvara, well-known in the world—(he) who was a treasure of wisdom (and) the foremost among all persons versed in the Vēdas; whose intellect was purified by the performance of various sacrifices and whose glory was an ornament to the Brāhmaṇa community.

(V. 16) Thereafter there was his son Kulachandra, whose character was in conformity with (his) sacred learning, who was conversant with the principles of the Āgamas; who appeared like (the sage) Vyāsa among the people, having an infinite collection of excellences, and who was able to curse or favour (people as he liked) here in (this) world.

(V. 17) A son of him, who was possessed of all excellences and had a holy nature, was the intelligent and illustrious Padmanābha, who is an auspicious abode of wisdom; whose study of all Āgamas causes wonder; who is virtuous by nature, adept in the religious duty, namely, the performance of sacrifices, and proficient in astronomy; and whose mind has become pure by (his) repeated meditation on Brahman.

(V. 18) He knows two Siddhāntas, has crossed the ocean of astrology, and being versed in the tenets of the Saṃhitās and sacred writings, is like Varāhamihira.

(V. 19) He,—declaring in the assembly of the illustrious king Ratnadēva [II], in the presence of all astronomers that when the year eight hundred increased by eighty had passed, on the day of the lord of speech (i.e., Thursday), on the full-moon day of Kārttika, during the third quarter of the night when (the moon would be in) the constellation of Rōhinī, there would be a complete eclipse of the moon,—crossed the river of assertion.

(V. 20) Then releasing the moon (from the eclipse), the king, who was pleased, gave him as a grant the village Chīñchātalāī in the maṇḍala of Anarghavallī together with all taxes.

(Here follow fourteen benedictive and imprecatory verses.)

(V. 35) In the same (maṇḍala of) Anarghavallī, the wise and illustrious Kīrti-dhara, the lord of the village (called) Jaṇḍēra, wrote (this charter) charming with letters.

No. 84; PLATE LXVIII

AKALTARA STONE INSCRIPTION OF RATNADEVA II

THIS inscription was first briefly noticed by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar in the Progress Report of the Archaeological Survey of Western India for 1903-4, pp. 51-2. His account has been generally followed by R. B. Hiralal in his Inscriptions in the Central Provinces and Berar.¹ The record is edited here for the first time from the original stone which I examined in situ and from inked estampages taken under my supervision.

The stone which bears this inscription was found at Kōṭgaḍh, a small village, a mile and a half north of Akaltarā, in the Jānjgir tahsil of the Bilaspur District in Madhya Pradesh. It was brought down to Akaltarā by the Malguzar and built into the plinth of the temple of Siddhēśvara Mahādēva in the back-yard of his house at Akaltarā.² The inscription consists of 19 lines, of which the last is only one-third of the rest in length. The writing covers a space measuring 3' 6" broad and 1' 5" high. The stone has suffered considerably about the middle of the first three lines at the top and on both the sides of ll. 8-14. Besides, some aksharas here and there have been damaged or rendered illegible by the effects of the weather. In many cases the missing aksharas can, however, be supplied by conjecture or from three other records of the same chief, viz., the Raipur Museum, Kugdā and Ratanpur stone inscriptions,³ with which the present inscription has several verses in common. It has thus been possible to restore almost the whole text of the record, except for the maṅgala-ślōkas in the first two lines. Nothing of historical importance has, therefore, been lost.

The characters are Nāgarī. The aksharas are neatly and carefully written and deeply incised. The average size of the letters is .6". As regards individual letters, attention may be drawn to the initial ri in ritavaḥ, l. 14, the sign of the guttural nasal ṇ which shows a dot attached to the left limb, as in -mātaṅga-, l. 12, the proper sign for b which occurs only in babhūvar-, l. 2, and the flat-topped ś as in śaila-, l. 10. The language is good and correct Sanskrit. Except for the introductory obeisance to Siva, the record is metrically composed throughout. The verses, of which there are twenty-six, are all numbered. The usual orthographical peculiarities such as the use of v for b and the confusion of the palatal and dental sibilants are noticed here also. The dental nasal has been wrongly used for the anusvāra in -vatansaḥ, l. 1, -rājahansaḥ, l. 2 and -dhvansa-, l. 9, and for the palatal nasal in panch=āpi, l. 14.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Ratnadēva II⁴ of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it is to record the construction of a temple of Rēvanta and the excavation of a tank, evidently at Kōṭgaḍh, by Vallabharāja, a feudatory chief of Ratnadēva II. The prafasti, as the inscription is called in the last verse, was composed by

³ Nos. 85, 87 and 95, below.

⁴ D.R. Bhandarkar (P.R.A.S.W.I. for 1903-4, pp. 51-2) and following him, Hiralal (I.C.P.B., second ed., p. 121) refer this inscription to the reign of Prithvidēva II. The former wrongly took prithvipati in v. 12 to refer to Prithvidēva (II). The word has there only the general sense of 'a king' and refers to Ratnadēva II. Had the inscription been incised during the reign of Prithvidēva II, the genealogy of the Kalachuri rulers, who were the suzerains of Vallabharāja and his ancestors, would have been brought down to that king in the introductory part of the prafasti, while, as shown here, it stops with Ratnadēva II.

Dēvapāṇi. It is not dated, but it is evidently earlier than Vallabharāja's Kugdā inscription¹ of the Kalachuri year 893 (1141-42 A.C.) which belongs to the reign of Prithvidēva II.

By way of introduction the inscription traces the genealogy of the Kalachuri rulers of Ratanpur from Ratnadēva I down to Ratnadēva II. Verse 8 mentions Lāchchhalladēvi who was the wife of Jājalladēva I and the mother of Ratnadēva II. Otherwise, the description of these princes is quite conventional and altogether devoid of historical interest.

The inscription next traces the genealogy of Vallabharāja. A feudatory chief of the Vaiśya lineage, named Dēvarāja, was a devoted servant of the ancestors of Ratnadēva II. His son was Rāghava who served his liege-lord as his councillor. His son was Harigaṇa who is described as the principal support of the Kalachuri throne in the attainment of victory. Harigaṇa's son, Vallabharāja, is next glorified in seven verses. He is said to have helped his lord in humbling the king of Gauḍa, the lord of elephants, and to have used his capital like the Vindhya tract for the capture of elephants. The next three verses (18-20) described a fierce battle in which Vallabharāja distinguished himself. We then have, in verses 21-24, a description of the temple of Rēvanta, the son of Saptāśva or the Sun, which Vallabharāja built, and the tank he excavated with a palace of pleasure in the middle of it² on the outskirts of the town. By erecting the former, Vallabharāja is said to have adorned, as with an ornament, the earth which was the crowned queen of his lord, the king. Verse 24 contains an interesting comparison, based on double entendre, of the tank with the Buddhist doctrine (Saugata-mata).

As shown above, the present inscription was incised during the reign of Ratnadēva II. The fierce battle in which Vallabharāja distinguished himself was probably that in which Anantavarman-Chōḍagaṅga was defeated. It seems to have been fought towards the close of Ratnadēva II's reign. Two other inscriptions of Vallabharāja refer themselves to the reign of Prithvidēva II. Vallabharāja seems, therefore, to have flourished towards the close of the reign of Ratnadēva II and in the beginning of that of Prithvidēva II from circa K. 880 to K. 915.

There are no places mentioned in the present record,³ but from the Ratanpur inscription of Vallabharāja we know that both the temple of Rēvanta and the tank were situated in Vikarṇapura, which was probably identical with Kōṭgaḍh.

² Even now at Kōṭgaḍh there is a large oval-shaped tank, in the middle of which projected from the west there is a raised earthen spot which was probably the site of this pleasure-mansion. Cousens took it to be the site of the temple of Rēvanta (P. R. A. S. W. I. for 1903-4, p. 30.)

ear-ornament of the excellent lady of the night, the abode of the highest principle of love, a swan in the Gaṅgā flowing through the matted hair of the destroyer [of Tripura] (i.e., Siva), whose loveliness crushes the pride of . . . , a true friend of the night-lotuses, and the tap-root of the intense joy of the people!

(V. 4) In the race of this [very] (Moon), there occurred many sub-divisions of the family in former times. Among them was a lineage named Kalachuri, adorned with excellences, in which were born kings possessed of the greatness of Indra, who with the plaster of their immense fame whitened the temples of the three worlds.

(V. 5) From the milk-ocean of that Kalachuri family was born Ratnarāja (I), the home of the good actions of royal personages, an incarnation of the law of truth, a royal road among the paths of morning remembrance,¹ a wise man of well-known greatness like Māṇdhātā (and) an object of veneration to princes.

(V. 6) From him was born the king Prithvidēva (I), who was to the Kali age what an elephant is to a lotus-plant;² who was possessed of well-known fame and of renowned greatness through veracity and liberality; who was virtuous in conduct and resembled the sun in lustre, being (himself) piety incarnate and a grown-up tree, supporting the creepers of good deeds, and like Prithu, an object of veneration to the world.

(V. 7) From him was born the king Jājalladēva (I) who, by the mighty valour of his bolt-like arms, destroyed the fortune of his enemies, even as fire destroys a large forest; who was possessed of glory, brilliant and white like the autumnal moon, a kimda (flower), snow, a pearl-necklace (and) a night-lotus.

(V. 8) He had (a wife) named Lāchchhalladēvī, whose hand he grasped (in marriage), as Purushōttama (i.e., Vishnu) had Lakshmi. She became a co-wife of the Earth.

(V. 9) His son was³ the illustrious Ratnadēva (II) by name, an elephant dexterous in fighting, who completely crushed the conceit of the heroic princes, (and) who set his heart on giving away in charity the wealth which he had collected by the unbounded valour of his arms.

(V. 10) "This is no world, but Kailāsa; these are no ordinary men, but (Siva) the lord of Parvati; all these rivers are the Gaṅgā; this is no autumn, but it is the laughter of that moon-crested (Siva)."—In the three worlds, thus do the people know (all objects of) the world as connected with Siva while the mass of fame of that best of men is rolling on.

(V. 11) An able (and) devoted feudatory of the illustrious ancestors of that king was Dēvarāja of the Vaiśya lineage, who, by the great mass of his lustre, resembled the mid-day sun; who was like the wish-fulfilling celestial tree to poor people and who, being lovely by (his) fame, placed on his head the dust of Siva's feet.

(V. 12) As from the milky ocean was produced the cool-rayed (moon), nourishing the clusters of night-lotuses, so from him (i.e., Dēvarāja) was born a son named Rāghava, a famous minister of kings, who (like the moon) removed the oppression of the people, and had (knowledge of) arts (as the moon has digits), (who was) a unique habitation of truth and valour, illustrious and intelligent, a receptacle of incomparable greatness, and the foremost among the mighty.⁴

² I.e., he destroyed the evil influence of the Kali age.

⁴ The epithet ugr-śpariṣṭha can also be applied to the moon which is placed on the head of Ugra (Siva).

(V. 13) From him was born here a son named Harigaṇa, who was the foremost faultless instrument of (the acquisition of) the goddess of victory for the throne of the kings of the Kalachuri family; who (used to be) in the fore-front of battles and destroyed the mighty army of the enemy even as the sun dispels darkness.

(V. 14) From him was born a son named Vallabharāja who is well-known in the assembly of good persons,—the cool-rayed (moon) to the lotuses of the faces [of] and who is (a source) of courteousness as a peak of the Himālayas is of the Gaṅgā.

(V. 15) The illustrious great king, whose power is well-known on the earth, makes good men mistake him for Kumāra (Kārttikēya); (for) he is possessed of great prowess (as Kārttikēya is of a powerful missile); he is clever in removing the impediments of learned persons (as Kārttikēya is in destroying the enemies of gods); and appears splendid with his mighty and spreading fire-like prowess (as Kārttikēya looks beautiful with the proud stepping of his peacock).¹

(V. 16) Having not seen a suitable illustration, and having not heard of one in (this) Kali age, in (respect of) horse-riding, acquaintance with numerous and various (branches of) knowledge, healing and appreciation of a multitude of noble qualities, the crowd of poets observed silence in eulogising him.

(V. 17) Being vehemently fond of the sport of capturing elephants on earth, he has made the whole Vindhya forest devoid of elephants and having humbled, through (his) lord, the king of Gauḍa who like Indra was the lord of elephants, the valiant (Vallabharāja) day by day turned the enemy's city into a Vindhya tract for the capture of (his) elephants.

(V. 18) Having killed his enemies he made an extraordinary lake which had the water of blood which appeared resplendent with the lotuses [of heads], (and) charming with the fishes of the rows of flags; which, with the locks of hair on the heads (of the men killed in the fight), was full of lines of moss; which was furnished with tortoises, namely, the frontal globes of elephants cut off (in the battle) and crowded with crocodiles in the form of horses.

(V. 19) In the towns of the enemies of him who deprived (the enemies' wives) of the beauty of (the mark of) the thick and shining red lead² in that battle with the four-membered army, all the five seasons (besides the monsoon) were full of rain, as the clouds of the eyes of brave warriors' wives poured down the water of (their) tears incessantly.

(V. 20) Like the sun there rose on the earth his sword which caused a decrease in the kingdoms of all kings as the sun by its rays sucks up the moisture of the whole earth; which is fond of increasing his fortune as the sun is of multiplying lotuses; which is bright and refulgent, with running away through fear.

(V. 21) He, who is clever in politeness and rich in fame, has, through devotion, provided the Earth with this ornament in the guise of a temple of Rēvanta, (which is) an object of enjoyment to the eyes, taking her to be the crowned queen of his lord, the king.

(V. 22) Spreading his exceedingly white fame by constructing (this) wonderful work of the best temple of the son of the seven-horsed (Sun), he has now surprised even the glorious Viśvakarman together with the proud people rich in fame.

² Owing to the loss of several letters at the end of l. 13, I am not certain about the interpretation of the first half of this verse.

(V. 23) With (his) wealth, he caused to be excavated here near the outskirts of the town¹ an excellent tank, the mirror of the three worlds, (which appears) beautiful with lovely lotuses and magnificent with the wonderful work of a pleasure-house (in the middle of it).

(V. 24) Like the Buddhist doctrine, shines this tank (called) Vallabhasāgara, which causes loss of time of all (people attracted by it) (as the Buddhist doctrine comprises the tenet of the continual destruction of all things), which is incomparable (as the Buddhist doctrine rejects the notion of generality) and looks charming with its appropriate dimensions (as the Buddhist doctrine does with proofs).²

(V. 25) So long as this earth rolls on the back of the tortoise, so long as Murāri (Vishnu) receives the goddess of wealth on his breast, so long as the moon dwells on the head of Sambhu and so long as the sun shines in the world—may this meritorious work³ endure!

(V. 26) The intelligent Dēvapāṇi has composed this eulogy resembling a lotus-plant,—which is charming and an object of enjoyment to good persons, as the lotus-plant is to the bees; which is the sole object of pleasure to learned men, as the lotus-plant is to gods; which is excellent with letters as the lotus-plant is with colours; which increases the delight of the minds of crowds of poets and is full of sentiments as the lotus-plant is of juice.

NO. 85 ; PLATE LXIX

RAIPUR MUSEUM STONE INSCRIPTION OF PRITHVIDEVA II

THIS inscription was discovered by Sir Alexander Cunningham's Assistant, Mr. Beglar, who refers to it in the Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. VII (1873-74), p. 211. It has subsequently been noticed by several scholars, e.g., by Dr. Kielhorn who transcribed a few names of historical importance occurring in it in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XX, p. 84; by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar in the Progress Report of the Archæological Survey, Western India for 1903-4, p. 52 and finally by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in his Inscriptions in the Central Provinces and Berar.⁴ Though noticed several times, the inscription has not been edited anywhere. I edit it here from the original stone which I personally examined in the Raipur Museum.

The polished slab of red sand-stone, on which this inscription is incised, was found at Kōṭgaḍh⁵ from where the Malguzar removed it to his own house at Akaltarā.⁶ It was lying there for some time and has recently been removed to the Raipur Museum. The inscription is fragmentary. The preserved portion consists of 26 lines, all of which except the last are incomplete. The writing covers a space 2' high. The length of the

² There is a play on the words kṣaṇa, sāmānya and pramāṇa in consequence of which the adjectives in the first hemistich are intended to be construed with both the tank and the Buddhist doctrine.

³ Kīrti here refers to the tank and perhaps also to the temple of Rēvanta.

⁴ First edition p. 111, second ed. p. 123.

⁶ It was lying near the Malguzar's house at Akaltarā in 1903. See P. R. A. S. W. I. (1903-4), p. 52.

lines gradually increases from 10" in the 1st line to 1' 4½" in the 22nd and then gradually decreases to 1' 3½" in the 25th. The last line, in which the record ends, measures 1' long. The stone is broken on the proper left side only, its top, bottom and right side being intact. When entire, the inscribed surface must have measured about 3' broad. The extant writing is in a state of good preservation, only one or two aksharas here and there being partly damaged. The letters are carefully and beautifully formed. Their size varies from .6" to .8".

The characters are Nāgarī. Attention may be drawn to the initial ai which is formed by adding a prishthamātrā to the sign for ē (see Airāvata, I. 17), the proper sign for b as distinguished from v, which occurs in babhūva, II. 6 and 7, dh which shows a horn at the top on the left, as in -dhvansāya, I. 11 and the flat-topped ś as in Sivāya, I. 1. The language is Sanskrit, and except for the opening obeisance to Śiva and the name of the sculptor at the end, the record is metrically composed throughout. There are, in all, thirty verses, all of which except the last are numbered. The prafasti, as the inscription is called in line 25, was composed by Dēvapāṇi, and engraved by the sculptor Pālhūka. Dēvapāṇi was also the author of the Akaltarā and Ratanpur inscriptions of Vallabharāja. The present inscription has consequently several verses in common with those two records, especially with the latter. Thus, verses 4-21 of the present inscription occur in the same order in that record. The orthography shows the same peculiarities as the Akaltarā stone inscription.

As stated above, the present record is fragmentary and though it has a considerable portion in common with three other inscriptions¹ of Vallabharāja, the latter also, with the exception of the Akaltarā stone inscription, have suffered too much to be of much use in the restoration of its lost text. It is not, therefore, possible to give here a connected and complete account of its contents. After the usual maṅgala-sloka in praise of Sambhu, the inscription seems to have mentioned the Kalachuri family and described two or three princes of it in verses 2-4. The name of the last one only, viz., Ratnadēva (II) has been preserved at the beginning of line 4. Like the Akaltarā stone inscription, the record then seems to have turned to the ancestors of Vallabharāja, who, as feudatory chiefs, served the predecessors of Ratnadēva II. Verses 5-7 apparently eulogised Dēvarāja, Rāghava and Harigaṇa, but the name of only the last one occurs in the preserved portion. Harigaṇa's wife was described in the next verse (8), but her name is lost. The glorification of their son Vallabharāja commenced in line 7, though his name does not occur in the extant portion till line 16. Verses 10-15 extol his proficiency in the healing art, his appreciation of merits, his capture of elephants in the Vindhya mountain, the fierce fight in which he distinguished himself, his raid in a distant country which was commended by his suzerain, and finally his fame and charity. Verse 16 seems to show that he was looked upon as an adopted son by Lāchchhalladēvī whom we know from the Akaltarā stone inscription to be the mother of Ratnadēva II. Verse 18 described a city founded by Vallabharāja, which is said to have resembled the city of Kubēra (i.e., Alakā). The next three verses, two of which occur in a complete form in the Akaltarā record, described a tank which Vallabharāja excavated in the same city. Verse 22 probably referred to some charitable or religious works of Vallabharāja, one of which, a garden, is mentioned in the beginning of line 19. In the next verse Vallabharāja is said to have loyally assigned to the king Ratnadēva (II) half of the religious merit which accrued to him on account of the aforementioned benefactions. Verse 24 records that he made a request to Ratnadēva (II) for some donation for the worship of Śiva, which seems to have been readily granted; for the final word in the next verse which occurs in the beginning of line 22 refers to a royal order. Verse 26 describes a beloved son, probably of Ratnadēva (II)¹, but his name has not been preserved. The next verse mentions his younger brother Jayasimha.² The name of the poet Devapāṇi, who composed the prastuti, is preserved in line 25, while that of the writer which must have occurred in the same line is lost. The last line contains the name of the sculptor Pālhūka who incised the present record.

The foregoing account will show that the object of the inscription was to record the construction, by Vallabharāja, of a temple of Śiva evidently at Kōṭgaḍh and certain donations made by royal order for the worship of the deity. The present inscription is not dated, but as it mentions both the excavation of the tank Vallabhasāgara and the erection of the afore-mentioned temple of Śiva, it is evidently later than the Akaltarā stone inscription which mentions only the former. It is again earlier than the Ratanpur inscription which names many more benefactions of Vallabharāja and his wife and was incised, as expressly stated at the end of it, during the reign of Ratnadēva II's son and successor Prithvidēva II.

The extant portion mentions no place-name.³ Haṭṭakēśvarapurī in l. 16, which Rai Bahadur Hiralal took to be the name of an important place, means Alakā, the city of the lord of wealth (Kubēra).⁴

² Beglar found the name of Jayasimha in an inscription on the gateway of the fort at Kōṭgaḍh and he has recorded the tradition which ascribes the building of the fort to Jayasimha, a petty chieftain subject to the Rājās of Ratanpur (C. A. S. I. R., Vol. VII, p. 212). But, as shown above, Jayasimha was probably a younger brother of Prithvidēva II.

TRANSLATION

Om! Adoration to Siva!

(Verse 1) May that dust of Sambhu's feet lead to your prosperity!

(V. 2) [There was (the king) Jājalladēva (I)] who equalled the sun's lustre, who was a ruby in the chaplet on the head of the Kalachuri [lineage (and) the charm of whose whole body was caused by the envious side-glances, (clearly) manifested by the graceful play of the eye-brows of the goddess of victory during fighting].

(V. 3) (This verse is completely lost.)

(V. 4) There was born from him the illustrious Ratnadēva (II) the multitude of hostile kings moving on the border of the battle-field [who was the moon to the ocean of friendly persons, who was the resting place of courteous conduct and whose feet were caressed by the heads of a crowd of princes].

(V. 5) In the family of the kings, his ancestors, who were versed in politics⁴.

(V. 6) the home of the joy of Jānakī, the humbler of the pride of those who hated his lord,

(V. 7) He⁵ had a son, Harigaṇa by name, a swan to the lotus plant which was the service of the feet of Hari and Hara

(V. 8) He had a modest wife who was like the goddess of fortune and like Satī in her husband's home in the midst of prosperity in all matters

(V. 9) On her [was begotten (by him) a son, Vallabharāja by name], who robbed off lustre from the clusters of lotuses which were the families of his foes

(V. 10) [Having not seen a suitable illustration and having not heard of one in (this) Kali age, in (respect of) horse-riding,] acquaintance with numerous and various (branches of) knowledge, healing and appreciation of a multitude of noble qualities, the crowd of poets observed silence while eulogising him.⁶

(V. 11) [Being vehemently fond of the sport of capturing elephants] on earth, [he has made] the whole Vindhya forest devoid of elephants [and having humbled] through (his) lord [the king of Gauḍa who, like Indra, was] the lord of elephants, [the valiant (Vallabharāja) day by day turned the enemy's city into a Vindhya tract for the capture of (his) elephants].

(V. 12) [While his lord was looking on, Vallabharāja dealt blows(?)] on the hostile king [from behind and] before and adorned his lord (?) with pearls scattered from the temples of rutting elephants just then cut off in the large arena of the battle-field . .

(V. 13) [He who was praised through poetry], who advanced a long distance for the destruction of the redoubtable and mighty (enemy), who was congratulated by the gracious lord [the valiant one whose fortune shines as if because it has obtained a footing of valour]

(V. 14) While his fame is roaming at will in every direction, the world shines [appearing lovely as it were at all times], as though because it has bathed in the milky ocean, (or) has been carved out of the stones of the crystal mountain (Kailāsa)

(V. 15) When he confers wealth on suppliants in this world, [the Kalpa tree engages itself in fetching water and other (things)].

(V. 16) Lāchchhalladēvī¹ [treated Vallabharāja as her own son] as Yaśōdā treated Kṛishṇa, and Pārvatī, Guha (Kārttikēya).

(V. 17) Having heard that [the Kailāsa mountain] had formerly its rocks rent asunder by the forest of arms of Paulastya (i.e., Rāvaṇa),

(V. 18) [Beautiful] is that well-known city of the lord of gold (i.e., of Kubēra) in heaven. Having, however, seen this city established by Vallabharāja in (this) mortal world

(V. 19) Like Airāvata which is resting on the bank, having sported in the water of the Mānasa (lake)

(V. 20) [With (his) wealth] he caused men to excavate [here near the outskirts (of the town) an excellent] tank, the mirror of the three worlds, (which appears) beautiful with lovely lotuses [and magnificent with the wonderful work of a pleasure-house (in the middle of it)].

(V. 21) [Like the Buddhist doctrine, shines this tank (called) Vallabhasāgara], which causes [a loss of time of all (people attracted by it) (as the Buddhist doctrine comprises the tenet of the continual destruction of all things), which is incomparable (as the Buddhist doctrine rejects the notion of generality), and looks charming with its appropriate dimensions (as the Buddhist doctrine does with proofs)].

(V. 22) a garden pleasing to the eye, which has dispersed the light of the sun with the mist of the mass of pollen scattered by wind

(V. 23) A half of the religious merit which he acquired (by erecting the temple) the grateful [Vallabharāja], wise on account of (his) excellent discrimination, loyally [assigned] to the illustrious king Ratnadēva (II)

(V. 24) The king Ratnadēva (II) being requested (to make a donation) for the worship of (Śiva) who has the crescent moon as his crest-jewel, for (the acquisition of) infinite religious merit and fame as long as the sun and the moon will endure

(V. 25) by the royal order

(V. 26) Now there rises this beloved son² of him, whose extensive fame is well-known immediately him who is happy with various things

(V. 27) His younger brother is Jayasimhadēva, wise and grateful, who is an abode of victory, being fond of youthful valour

(V. 28) [May this work endure] as long as the Gaṅgā rests like a chaplet on the head of Śiva (and) as long as the glory of Śiva on account of his victory over Tripura is sung in the three worlds

(V. 29) The illustrious Dēvapāṇi has composed this large prasaṣti (eulogy) which is beautiful with the spray of the water of nectar

(V. 30) [has written it] in clusters of aksharas delightful to the mind.

Engraved by the sculptor Pālhūka.

No. 86; PLATE LXX

DAIKONI PLATES OF PRITHVIDĒVA II: (KALACHURI) YEAR 890

THESE plates were discovered in 1944 at Daikōni, 7 miles almost due north of Jānjgir, in the Jānjgir taluk of the Bilaspur District in the Chhattisgarh Division of Madhya Pradesh. They were procured from the owner by the Deputy Commissioner, Bilaspur, who sent them to the Government Epigraphist for India for decipherment. The inscription is edited here for the first time from an excellent ink impression which I owe to the kindness of the Government Epigraphist.

They are two copper-plates inscribed on one side only. They measure 11.7" broad and 6.8" high, and have their rims slightly raised for the protection of the writing. They are strung together by a circular ring which passes through a hole, .6" in diameter, at the top of each plate. The ring is soldered to the bottom of a circular seal about 2.5" in diameter. The surface of the seal is divided into two parts. In the upper part appears as usual the figure of Lakshmi with an elephant on either side pouring water over her head. The lower part contains the legend Rāja-srīmat-Prithvidēvaḥ in relief, engraved in two lines. The seal has for its border a circle of knobs. The two plates weigh 224 tolas and the ring with the seal 37 tolas.

The characters are Nāgarī. The letters are beautifully formed and are deeply incised. They closely resemble those of the Sarkhō plates of Ratnadēva and were probably written by the same scribe Kīrtidhara who is mentioned in the latter plates.¹ The language is Sanskrit. Except for ōm namō Vrahmaṇē in the beginning and the date at the end, the inscription is metrically composed throughout. There are, in all, 18 verses, all of which are numbered. Of these, the first eleven are repeated from earlier records of the dynasty such as the Sarkhō plates of Ratnadēva II. The five verses that follow describing the donor, the donee, the occasion and the object of the gift are new. Finally, the record ends with two benedictive and imprecatory verses of the usual type. In respect of orthography, we may notice that ś and s are occasionally confused and v is usually written for b except in the forms babhūva and babhūvaḥ; see sasvat, l. 6 and Vrahmaṇē, l. 1.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Prithvidēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The first eleven verses which trace the royal genealogy from the mythical king Kārtavīrya through Kōkkala of Tripurī down to Ratnadēva II are common to several earlier and later records of the dynasty. Verse 12 describing Prithvidēva II is new, but the description it gives of that king is quite conventional.

The object of the inscription is to register the grant, by Prithvidēva II, of the village Budukunī situated in Madhyadēśa or the central part of his dominion. The donee was the Brāhmaṇa Vishṇu, the son of Sivadēva and grandson of Srōttama, who belonged to the Vatsa gōtra with five pravaras. The grant was made on the occasion of a lunar eclipse, on the fifteenth tithi of the bright fortnight of Kārttika. The plates were issued on Sunday, the 11th tithi of the dark fortnight of Mārgaśīrsha in the year 890 (expressed in decimal figures only) of an unspecified era.

The date must plainly be referred to the Kalachuri era. It regularly corresponds, for the expired Kalachuri year 890, to Sunday, the 30th October 1138 A.C. On that day the 11th tithi of the dark fortnight of the pūrṇimānta Mārgaśīrsha commenced 9 h. 10 m. after mean sunrise.² This tithi was not current at sunrise that day, but it is cited here probably because it was current at the time of the issue of the plates. There was a lunar eclipse on the preceding Kārttika pūrṇimā (the 19th October 1138 A.C.), as stated in the present grant.

¹ Kīrtidhara seems to have died some time before K. 896, the date of the Bilāgarh plates (No. 89, below), which were written by his son.

² If the year is applied as current, the tithi in the pūrṇimānta Mārgaśīrsha falls on Thursday (the 11th

There is only one place-name mentioned in this record, viṣṭ, the village Budukunī which was granted to the Brāhmaṇa. It is evidently identical with Daikōni where the plates were found. The old place-name has lost its first syllable in course of time. Budukunī was situated in the Madhyadēśa which was probably identical with the Madhyamaṇḍala mentioned in both the sets of the Amōdā plates issued by this very Pṛithividēva some years later.

TRANSLATION

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to Brahman !

(Verse 12) This son of his, the king Prithvidēva (II) of great and resplendent valour, rules the earth with excellent political wisdom.

(V. 13) In the gōtra of Vatsa there was here a Brāhmaṇa named Srōttama who had five pravaras, and who, like Brahmā, was conversant with all Sāstras, Āgamas and Vēdas.

(V. 14) He had a venerable son named Sivadāsa who, having a priceless store of excellences, imitated his father in the multitude of all his merits.

(V. 15) From him was born an eminent son, well-known by the name of Vishṇu, who resembled (the god) Vishṇu, was the foremost among the learned, was well-versed in the three Vēdas, and had a charming disposition on account of his knowledge of all Sāstras and Āgamas.

(V. 16) To this Brāhmaṇa Vishṇu, the king Prithvidēva (II) donated the extremely beautiful village Budukunī (situated) in the Madhyadēśa, with all rights, having poured water on his hand with great reverence on the fifteenth tithi of Kārttika when (the moon) the ornament of the night, was devoured by Rāhu.

KUGDA STONE INSCRIPTION OF PRITHVIDEVA II: KALACHURI YEAR 893

THIS inscription was first brought to notice by Sir. A. Cunningham's Assistant, Mr. Beglar, in the Archaeological Survey of India Reports, Vol. VII, p. 211. It was subsequently noticed by Dr. Kielhorn who drew attention to a few historical names mentioned in it and especially to its date in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XX, p. 84. It is edited here from inked estampages¹ kindly furnished by Mr. M.A. Suboor of the Central Museum, Nagpur.

The inscription is incised on a stone lying detached at Kugdā near Bachhaudgaḍh in Jānjgir taluk of the Bilaspur District. It is fragmentary. The extant portion covers a space about 2' broad by 1' 11" high and contains twenty-five lines. Nothing is lost at the top and the bottom. Again, on the proper left side, the stone is complete down to line 20. Below this, a large piece has been broken away, which has resulted in the loss of several aksharas in lines 21-25. Again, on the proper right side, a large fragment measuring about 1' 2" broad has been broken away, causing a loss of from 27 to 37 aksharas at the beginning of each line. The extant writing also has become for the most part illegible owing to the wearing away of the surface of the stone.

The characters are Nāgarī and the language Sanskrit. Except perhaps the opening obeisance to some deity and the date at the end, the whole record was metrically composed. There were about twenty-nine verses, all of which were numbered.² The orthography shows the same peculiarities as the Akaltarā stone inscription of Prithvidēva II.

The inscription, being fragmentary, does not admit of a connected and complete account of its contents. It seems to have several verses in common, with two other inscriptions³ found at Kōtgaḍh and another discovered at Ratanpur.⁴ These inscriptions also are unfortunately very much damaged. The present record was apparently put up by Vallabharāja, a feudatory chieftain of the Kalachuri king Prithvidēva II. It mentions the Kalachuri dynasty in line 1 and Lāchchhalladēvī in line 2. The latter we know from other records to be the queen of Jājalladēva I. The name of Ratnadēva (II), the son and successor of Jājalladēva I, is partially preserved at the end of line 3. Vallabharāja is mentioned in line 7. His exploits and charity, the town he settled and the lake he excavated appear to have been described in lines 8-19. The next four lines are completely effaced. It is not, therefore, possible to say what the present inscription was intended to record.

The inscription is dated in the year 893 (expressed in decimal figures only) without further specification of the month, fortnight or tithi. The date does not, therefore, admit of verification. But the chief interest of it lies in this that it expressly refers itself to the Kalachuri era and to the reign of the illustrious king Prithvidēva. The year 893, if expired, would correspond to 1141-42 A.C. Prithvidēva, during whose reign the inscription was put up, was evidently Prithvidēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur.

RAJIM STONE INSCRIPTION OF PRITHVIDEVA II : KALACHURI YEAR 896.

THIS inscription is incised on a stone slab let into the left wall of the maṇḍapa of the temple of Rājīvalōchana¹ at Rājīm, a village 29 miles south-east of Raipur in the Mahāsamund tahsil of the Raipur District. Rājīm stands on the right bank of the Mahānadi at the confluence of the Pairī with that river and is a well-known place of pilgrimage in Chhattisgarh. The present record was first brought to notice in 1825 when Sir Richard Jenkins presented to the Asiatic Society of Bengal a copy of it, together with a translation prepared with the assistance of the Pandits, from which Prof. H.H. Wilson published a Dēvanāgarī transcript and a kind of translation, in the Asiatic Researches, Vol. XV, page 512 ff.² It was subsequently referred to by Sir A. Cunningham in his Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. VII, p. 152 and Vol. XVII, p. 18. It was finally edited, without any translation or lithograph, by Dr. Kielhorn in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XVII, pp. 135 ff. I edit it here from the original stone which I examined in situ and from the estampages of it taken under my direction.

The record consists of 19 lines. It is inscribed on a countersunk surface measuring 2' 3½" broad by 1' 1" high. It is in a state of good preservation, but many of its letters are so choked up with oily dust that they do not show clearly in the lithograph. The record can, however, be read clearly on the original stone. The letters are not well-formed. Their size varies from .4" to .5". The characters are Nāgarī. Attention may be drawn to the form of ñ which appears without a dot (e.g., in prāñ-mukhā-, 1.8), that of th, the upper loop of which is open (see yathā-, 1.8) and of dh the left limb of which is still undeveloped, (see -dharma-, 1.6). The prishṭhamātrās have been used to denote the medial diphthongs. The language is Sanskrit. Except for the opening obeisance to Nārāyaṇa, the description of Sāhilla, an ancestor of the donor, in ll.1-2, that of a person named Muktātman, the owner of the temple, in 1.15 and the particulars about the composer, the scribe and the date in ll.17-19, the record is metrically composed. There are, in all, twenty-six verses, all of which are numbered. The prastuti, as the inscription is called in 1.18, was composed by the Thakkura Jasānanda, the son of the Thakkura Jasōdhara in the Ayōdhyāpuriya family and was written as well as engraved by the artisan Ratnapāla.

The composer of this prastuti had a very poor knowledge of Sanskrit; for the record abounds in mistakes of orthography, genders, sandhis, declensional and conjugational forms, compounds, syntax, nominal and verbal derivatives etc. As regards orthography, we may notice that the dental n is used for the guttural ṇ in -ālankṛita-, 1.1, for the palatal ṇ in satyan=cha-, 1.10, and for anusvāra in -hansa-, 1.2, ēkavinsa-, ll. 4-5 and -vansā-, 1.13; v is used for b throughout except in -mahāsabha-, 1.1; the dental s has wrongly taken the place of the palatal ś in -dēsa-, -mahāsabha-, -kalasa-, -samkāsa-, all in 1.1, sāntā-, 1.6, sara-samghātāḥ-, 1.7; jya is employed for dya in bhayāj=yasya-, 1.7, prāñ-mukhāj=yasya-, 1.8; kshya for khya in vikshyātā-, 1.5 and gh for h in simghēn=eva-, 1.8. As instances of wrong sandhis we may notice the elision of the visarga in trāsītā sūrāḥ-, 1.2, pattanai saha-, 1.4 etc., the change of ah to o in Vāsudēvō tath=āpi-, 1.3, anujō putrō, 1.5, etc. and that of n to ṇ in punar-ṇavē, 1.12. On the other hand, we have the superfluous addition of visarga in Sāhilla-nāmāḥ, 1.2., sarvadāḥ 1.14, satya-dharmma-ratāḥ (qualifying bhāryā), 1.14, etc. The composer's ignorance of the genders of Sanskrit words is betrayed by the use of -putram for -putraḥ, 1.3, nava-sataḥ for nava-satam, 1.4, -dēsam for -deśaḥ, 1.4, prāsādam for prāsādaḥ, 1.14, etc. Mistakes of declension are seen in such forms as Jagasiṃha-nāmam, 1.10 and dhavinō=pi for dhavinām=api, 1.7, and those of conjugation in bhavēj= for abhavad= in 1.2, niḥanyēt for nyahan in 1.7. The writer has not dropped the anusvāra and visarga of the first members of compounds in sindūram-āṅgu=, 1.9, śrī-Ratnadēvaḥ-nriṣa-rājya=, 1.9, ripavaḥ-kshaya-kāriṇam 1.3. We have finally to notice the blunders of syntax śrōtā vai Bharat-ādihbiḥ, 1.13, Rāmāyaṇa-mukhāḥ sarvē vaktā 1.13, ēbhiḥ putrō, 1.6, simhēn=ēva (for simhasy=ēva), 1.8, etc.

This plethora of mistakes makes it very difficult to interpret the record in several places and as Dr. Kielhorn has remarked, 'the difficulty is increased by the loose way in which the several sentences or portions of sentences are connected with each other and by the omission of important statements'.¹ Dr. Kielhorn has already drawn attention to the ambiguity about the relation of the Ṭhakkraṇī Udayā, the mother of Jagapāla, to the brothers Jayadēva and Dēvasiṃha mentioned before. We may also mention that the holy person Muktātman is abruptly introduced and as abruptly passed over in 1.15 without any definite statement as to how he was concerned in the present grant.

The object of the inscription is to record the construction of a temple of Rāma² and the grant of the village Sālmaliya for the purpose of the naivēdya or offerings of food to the deity by Jagapāla (called Jagatsiṃha in line 10). It is specifically dated in the Kalachuri year 896 (expressed in decimal figures only) on Budha-dina or Wednesday, the eighth tithi, called rath-āshṭamī, in the bright fortnight of the month Māgha. This date regularly corresponds, for the expired³ Kalachuri year 896, to Wednesday, the 3rd January 1145 A.C. On that day the eighth tithi of the bright fortnight of Māgha ended 10 h. 45 m. after mean sunrise.⁴ It is, however, not clear why the tithi should have been called rath-āshṭamī; for, it is the preceding tithi (viṣ., the seventh tithi of the bright fortnight of Māgha), that is now called *ratha-saptamī*⁵ while the eighth tithi of the same fortnight is called Bhīṣm-āshṭamī.

After the customary obeisance to Nārāyaṇa (Vishṇu), the inscription traces the genealogy of the donor Jagapāla from the Ṭhakkura Sāhilla. The latter was the spotless ornament of the family of Rājamāla and gave delight to the Pañchahaṃsa family. He had acquired the pañchamahāśabda. He had emigrated from the country of Vaḍahara and was furnished with a banner, the flag of which was adorned

² There is another much-defaced record on the same wall of the maṇḍapa, incised in the proto-Nāgarī characters of about the beginning of the 8th cen. A. C., from which we learn that a king of the Nala dynasty originally built the temple of Vishṇu. See Ep. Ind., Vol. XXVI, pp. 49 ff. Jagapāla seems, therefore, to have only repaired or rebuilt the temple.

³ At first Kielhorn took the year as current as he held the view that the Kalachuri era commenced in 249 A. C. (see Ind. Ant., Vol. XVII, p. 215), but later on he corrected himself in his article on the era in the Festschrift an Roth, p. 54, when he came to the conclusion that the era was started in 248 A. C.

⁴ According to Dr. Kielhorn's calculations, the tithi ended 10 h. 59 m. after mean sunrise on that day (Ind. Ant., Vol. XVII, pp. 136 and 216).

⁵ The tithi is so called in the Prince of Wales Museum plates of Dadda III, dated K. 427 (No. 121, below).

with a silken cloth representing an umbrella (red) like an indragōpa insect over a golden jar.¹ He made brave kings tremble in a great war and brought the Vivarabhūmi under his sway. This Sāhilla is not known from other records. Rājamāla, in whose family he was born, may be identical with the king Rājamalla who is described in a grant of the queen Tribhuvana-mahādēvī of the Kara dynasty as an ornament of the southern regions. He was the father of the queen and had given his valuable support to re-establish the power of the Karas in a great crisis in their history after the death of their ruling prince who was perhaps his own son-in-law.² If the proposed identification is correct, Sāhilla seems to have emigrated from the eastern coast to seek his fortune in Chhattisgarh. Vaḍahara, from which he emigrated, may be identical with the district of Vōḍā mentioned in the Antirigām plates of Yaśabhañjadēva.³ The Vivarabhūmi which Sāhilla conquered appears to be another name of Pātāla or the nether world. We know from the Navasāhasāṅkacharita of Padma-gupta⁴ that Chhattisgarh was so designated by Sanskrit poets of the 11th cen. A.C.

The inscription next states that Sāhilla had a younger brother named Vāsudēva and three sons Bhāyila, Dēsala and Svāmin. They conquered the Bhaṭṭavila and Viharā countries. Jayadēva, the elder son of Svāmin, acquired (the country of) Dāṇḍōra containing 2100 villages, while the younger son Dēvasimha took the Kōmō maṇḍala. We are next told that the Ṭhakkurājñī Udayā, who, as already observed, must have been the wife of one of the two last-named brothers, was the mother of Jagapāla.

The next six lines (7-12) describe the achievements of Jagapāla. The Māyūrikas and Sāvantas, dreadful enemies as they were, submitted to him. Of these the Māyūrikas may refer to the contemporary rulers of the Bhañja dynasty while the Sāvantas have been identified by Rai Bahadur Hiralal with the aboriginal tribe of the Sāontas in the Bilaspur District.⁵ For his lord Jājalladēva, who is evidently the first prince of that name in the Ratanpur branch of the Kalachuri dynasty, Jagapāla conquered the Tamanāla country, together with Rāṭha and Tēra.⁶ During the reign of Ratnadēva (II) he acquired the name of Jagatsimha (the Lion of the world) by his heroic deeds in the Talahāri country.⁷ But his exploits were still greater during the reign of Prithvidēva (II). He took the strong forts of Sarahrāgaḍha and Machakā-Sihavā and conquered the countries of Bhramaravadra, Kāntāra, Kusumabhōga, Kāndā-ḍōṅgara and Kākayara. He established the town of Jagapālapura in the newly acquired territory. He had three younger brothers, Gājala, Jayatsimha and Dēvarāja,⁸ of whom the last one occupied a prominent position during the reigns of the three princes mentioned above. With the help of these three brothers, Jagapāla is said to have won the earth.

As has been already observed by Cunningham and Kielhorn, Sāhilla seems to have come as a military adventurer to Chhattisgarh where we find his descendants settled down

² J. B. O. R. S., Vol. II, p. 422.

⁵ J. C. P. B., (second ed.), p. 107.

⁶ I am not certain about the names of these countries. They are not met with elsewhere, though R. B. Hiralal has conjecturally placed them to the north of the former Raigarh State.

⁷ This was perhaps during the invasion of the country by Anantavarman Chōḍagaṅga.

as feudatories or generals of the Kalachuri princes of Ratanpur whom they helped to extend their territories.

Of the localities mentioned in the present record, Vaḍahara as shown above, was probably situated in the country under the rule of the Bhaṇjas. R.B. Hiralal, however, thought that Vaḍahara was identical with Baḍahara, south of Mirzapur, and Bhaṭṭavila with Baghelkhaṇḍa. But the ancestors of Jagapāla seem to have come from the east, rather than from the north. Dāṇḍōra may be identified with the former State of Sargujā which was once called Bāis Dāṇḍōr as it included twenty-two zamindaris. Kōmō has been already shown to correspond to the Pēṇḍrā Zamindari. Talahāri was the name of the southern portion of the Bilaspur tahsil, including Mallār and the surrounding territory.¹ Saraharāgaḍha was shown by Dr. Kielhorn to be the ancient name of Sāraṅgarh, formerly a feudatory state in Chhattisgarh. Machakā-Sihavā is probably Mēchakā-Sihavā south of Dhamtari, as suggested by R.B. Hiralal. Bhramaravadra may be identical with the Bhramarakōṭya maṇḍala in the former Bastar State.² Kākayara still retains its old name in the form Kāṅkēr, formerly a feudatory state in Chhattisgarh. Kāntāra may be some forest tract not far from it. Kusumabhōga is perhaps identical with Kusmurra in the Dhamtari tahsil, 18 m. south by west of Rājim. Kāṇḍā-ḍōṅgara may be the southern portion of the former Bindra-Navagadh Zamindari, where a range of hills still goes by the name of Kāṇḍā. Finally, Śālmaliya, granted for the naiṇēdya of the deity, is said to be now deserted and in lieu of it the village Rōhaṇa situated not far from the ancient site of Śālmali was subsequently granted. It lies 10 miles south-east of Rājim in the Mahāsamund tahsil and is still appropriated to the worship of Rājivalōchana.

TRANSLATION

Om! Adoration to Nārāyaṇa! Hail! (There was) the Ṭhakkura, the illustrious Sāhilla, the spotless forehead-mark of the family of the illustrious Rājamāla, who gave delight to the Pañchahaṁsa family; who had emigrated from the country of Vaḍahara; who was delighted by the attainment of the pañchamahāśabda; who was possessed of the distinguishing mark of a banner adorned with a silken cloth representing an indragōpa-like⁵ royal umbrella over a golden jar.⁶

(V. 1) Who terrified valiant kings and became the lord of the Vivarabhūmi which he acquired in a great battle.

(V. 2) He had a younger brother (named) Vāsudēva and had a son (named) Bhāyila and also Dēsala who destroyed (his) enemies.

(V. 3) The third (son) was named Svāmin who exterminated (his) enemies. They conquered the Bhaṭṭavila country, inclusive of towns.

(V. 4) Again, (they) conquered, with their prowess and might of arms, the country called Vihārā, containing nine hundred and fifty-six hundred villages.

(V. 5) The son of Svāmin, Jayadēva by name, a great warrior, acquired Dāṇḍōra including twenty-one hundred villages.

(V. 6) Such was also his younger son, the matchless Dēvasimha who won the Kōmō maṇḍala (containing) seven hundred and fifty (villages).

(V. 7) (There was) the well-known and noble queen, the Ṭhakkurājñi Udayā, who was devoted to truth and piety, was of a quiet nature and increased the joy of her family.

(V. 8) Their son was the strong-armed Jagapāla who made the Kshatriyas, who were (previously) ready for fighting, turn their faces away.

(V. 9) Through fear of him, the formidable foes,—the Māyūrikas and the valiant Sāvantas,—the lords of maṇḍalas, completely submitted to him.

(V. 10) Just as the Kshatriya Rāma, (the best) of the warriors destroyed the families (of the demons), even so did this (Jagapāla) kill the forces of his enemies with multitudes of arrows.

(V. 11) Horsemen, elephants, men and horses⁷ fled away from his presence even as elephants do before a lion.

(V. 12) With his nēṅgillas (?), bow and shield, he (i.e., Jagapāla) taking a sword in hand, like (the goddess) who leads warriors, killed in battle a multitude of enemies.

(V. 13) In the interest of the kingdom of his lord, the illustrious Jājalladēva (I), (fought) Jagapāla who was to his foes what the scent-elephant is (to ordinary elephants), and who by his heroic deeds acquired the Tamanāla country together with Rāṭha and Tēra(?)⁸

³ Kielhorn read [क]लचुरि, but the name is clearly as given here.

⁸ See above p. 454, n. 28.

(V. 14) During the reign of the king, the illustrious Ratnadēva (II), he had his body red like vermillion in the land of Talahāri. By his very valiant deeds he fulfilled his vow and indeed acquired the true name of Jagatsimha (the Lion of the world).

(V. 15) He made greater (exploits) during the reign of the king Prithvidēva (II). He captured Saraharāgaḍha, the great fort (pre-eminent among all) inaccessible fortresses.

(V. 16) Jagapāla is to his enemies as the scent-elephant is (to ordinary elephants),— (he) who again took the fort of Machakā-Sihavā and the country of Bhramaravadra and achieved prowess by his arm;

(V. 17) Who conquered with ease Kāntāra (the forest-country), Kusumabhōga, Kāndā-dōngara and the country of Kākayara.

(V. 18) Bearing the splendour of Rāma in the absence of Rāmadēva(?)¹ (he) established Jagapālapura in the new country.

(V. 19) Resembling the son of Kuntī (i.e., Yudhisṭhira) in religious merit in the Kali age, Jīmūtavāhana in (adherence to) truth, Rāma in valour, and the son of the Sun (i.e., Karṇa) in liberality;

(V. 20) Conversant with the duty of a Kshatriya, truthful, reverent to Brāhmaṇas, god and fire, listening to (the recitations of) the Purāṇas, Āgamas and Sāstras such as the Bhārata and others;

(V. 21) Reading all (works) such as the Rāmāyaṇa, (being) the support of living beings, self-respecting, conferring gifts on Brāhmaṇa families for their learning;

(V. 22) Such is Jagapāla. He has caused this beautiful temple to be constructed for manifesting the splendour of Rāma.

(V. 23) He has granted a village named Śālmaliya to provide for offerings of food (to the enshrined deity). Those who will become kings (in the future) will always preserve (this gift).

(Line 15) The owner of this temple is the holy and illustrious Muktātman, who is engaged in practising self-control, vows, the study of the sacred texts and meditation.

(V. 24) The younger brother of Jagapāla (is) Gājala, a valiant archer and destroyer of the wicked, (who is) dreadful to the hosts of (his) foes.

(V. 25) His younger brother, born after him, is Jayatsimha by name, a warrior and archer of the type of Arjuna, who has destroyed (his) foes.

(V. 26) There is also another (brother)² Dēvarāja by name, who has been prominent during the three reigns. With the help of these (three) adherents, Jagapāla has subdued the earth.

(Line 17) Here ends the prafasti (eulogy) composed by the Thakkura, the illustrious Jasānanda, a devout worshipper of Mahēśvara and Viṣṇu, who belongs to the family hailing from the city of Ayōdhyā, who has devoted himself to the service of Brāhmaṇas, gods, and (religious) teachers, who is a wise man possessed of devotion and who, (though) possessed of no (poetic) talent, is a servant of great poets.

And this (eulogy) has been written and also incised by the artisan, the illustrious Ratnapāla.

(L. 18) Written on Wednesday on the (tithi called) rathāshṭamī in the bright fortnight of the month Māgha in the Kalachuri year 896.

¹ I am not certain about the meaning of the first half of this verse.

No. 89 ; PLATE LXXII

BILAIGARH PLATES OF PRITHVIDEVA II: (KALACHURI) YEAR 896

THESE plates were discovered in 1945 at Bilaigarh, the chief town of the former Bilaigarh Zamindari, in the Raipur District of the Chhattisgarh Division in Madhya Pradesh. They were sent by the Commissioner of the Chhattisgarh Division to the Government Epigraphist for India. They are edited here for the first time from an excellent impression kindly supplied by the Government Epigraphist.

They are two copper-plates measuring 11.8" broad and 6.5" high. They weigh 137 tolas. They have their rims raised for the protection of the writing and contain marginal decorative designs on three sides. They were strung together by means of a ring, about 1.8" in diameter. The central portion of the ring was flattened into a round disk to serve as a seal of the plates. The upper half of this seal contains the figure of Gaja-Lakshmī in relief while the lower half has the legend Rāja-śrīmat-Prithvidēvaḥ engraved in two lines. The record consists of 36 lines, 18 being inscribed on the inner side of each plate. The average size of the letters is .25".

The characters are Nāgarī. Worthy of note are the forms of the following letters:—Initial i consists of two curves with a looped end, turned in opposite directions and placed one below the other; see iti, l. 9; dh is in a transitional form; its top does not yet show a horn, but the vertical stroke is slightly bent to the left; see -nirādhīpa-, l. 16; the left limb of ś has become separated from the vertical on the right; see śūra-, l. 12. The avagraha is used to indicate the elision of a in lines 3, 10, 17, 20 and 29.

The language is Sanskrit. Except for ōm namō Vrahmaṇē in the first line and the date in the last, the whole record is metrically composed. The verses, of which there are twenty-four, are all numbered. The orthography shows the usual peculiarities, viz., the use of v for b except in the form babhūvuh; see vrahmaṇē, l. 1; of s for ś as in sasvat-, l. 4, and vice versa in -sahasrēṇa, l. 28, and the reduplication of the consonant following r; see nirggūṇam, l. 1.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Prithvidēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it is to record the royal grant of the village Paṇḍaratalāi situated in the Ēvaḍi-maṇḍala to a Brāhmaṇa named Dēlhūka on the occasion of a solar eclipse. The plates were granted in the year 896 of an unspecified era.¹ The record was composed by Malhaṇa,² the son of Subhāṅkara. The copper-plates were prepared by Vāmana and the charter was written on them by a son of Kīrti. The writer's personal name is not mentioned in the present inscription due to the exigencies of the metre, but he may be identical with Sūpaṭa, the son of Kīrtidhara, who wrote a grant of this very king Prithvidēva II in the following year K. 897.³ The record was incised by an unnamed son of Lakshmīdhara. Lakshmīdhara incised the Sarkhō plates⁴ of Ratnadēva II, dated K. 880 and the Amōḍā plates⁵ of Prithvidēva II, dated K. 900. His son, who incised the present plates, may have been Dharaṇīdhara, mentioned in the grant of K. 897.

The date of the present inscription must evidently be referred to the Kalachuri era. No details of the solar eclipse mentioned in it are given, but supposing that it occurred in the same year in which the plates were issued, as seems probable, we get some data for verification. According to the epoch of 247-48 A.C., there were two solar eclipses in the expired Kalachuri year 896, one of which occurred in the pūrṇimānta Māgha (on the 26th December 1144 A.C.) and the other in the pūrṇimānta Āshāḍha (on the 22nd June 1145 A.C.), while there was none in the current Kalachuri year 896. The plates were therefore granted some time in the year 1144-45 A.C.

The genealogy of Pṛithvidēva II down to his father Ratnadēva II is given here in verses 3-10 which are repeated verbatim from the earlier grants of the dynasty¹ as the prafasti had then become stereotyped. Verse 11 which describes the reigning king is, however, new and occurs only in the present grant. It gives the interesting information that Pṛithvidēva II filled the contemporary Gaṅga king with anxiety when he devastated Chakrakōṭa, as the Gaṅga king realised that the only way to save his life was to cross the ocean. Chakrakōṭa has been identified with the central portion of the former Bastar State.² The Gaṅga adversary of Pṛithvidēva II is not named, but as the devastation of Chakrakōṭa had taken place some time before 1144-45 A.C. when the present grant was made, it must have occurred during the reign of Anantavarman-Chōḍagaṅga.³ This mighty Gaṅga Emperor had invaded the Kalachuri kingdom towards the close of the reign of Ratnadēva II, but he suffered an ignominious defeat. Soon after his accession Pṛithvidēva II seems to have attacked and devastated Chakrakōṭa. The Rājim stone inscription, dated in the same year as the present grant, viz., K. 896, states that Jagapāla conquered Kākayara, modern Kāñker, which borders the former Bastar State on the north, during the reign of Pṛithvidēva II.⁴ The Kalachuri kings were often at war with the Nāga rulers of Chakrakōṭa. Pṛithvidēva II's grandfather Jājalladēva I had taken the Nāga king Sōmēśvara prisoner and released him only at the intercession of his mother.⁵ The history of the Nāga kingdom of Chakrakōṭa is still enveloped in obscurity. Sōmēśvara was succeeded by Kanharadēva who was reigning in 1111 A.C.⁶ His successor, whose name is still unknown, must have been the adversary of Pṛithvidēva II.

Pṛithvidēva II's devastation of Chakrakōṭa is said to have struck terror in the heart of Anantavarman-Chōḍagaṅga, who ruled over the neighbouring kingdom of Kaliṅga. The Kalachuri king does not seem to have attacked the Gaṅga kingdom on this occasion. Jagapāla's inscription also does not mention any victory over the Gaṅga king though it mentions the conquest of Bhramaravadradēśa which was probably identical with the Bhramarakōṭyamaṇḍala in the Nāga kingdom. Pṛithvidēva invaded the Gaṅga territory later on during the reign of Jaṭeśvara alias Madhukāmārṇava, the son and successor of Anantavarman.⁷

The pedigree of the donee begins in verse 12. His grandfather was Hāpūka who belonged to the Vatsa gōtra. He was famous for his knowledge of the Vēdas. His son was Jīmūtavāhana and the latter's son was Dēlhūka to whom the present grant was made. He is eulogised as proficient in the Vēdānta philosophy and the Śākambharī vidyā.¹ Verse 15 tells us that Brahmadēva, the well-known feudatory who obtained an easy victory by means of the Śākambharī vidyā which he had learnt from Dēhūka, considered him as an equal of Bṛihaspati, the preceptor of gods. From the Ratanpur stone inscription of K. 915 we know that Brahmadēva was the chief feudatory (māṇḍalik-āgrāṇī) of Prithvidēva II.² The latter had called him specially from Talahāri maṇḍala and entrusted the government of the kingdom to him. He seems to have fought in the battle of Chakrakōṭa and obtained an easy victory which he ascribed to his knowledge of the Śākambharī vidyā.

Of the geographical names which occur in the present grant, Kōsala has already been shown to be the ancient name of Chhattisgarh and the adjoining territory to the east. Paṇḍaratalāi, the village granted may be identical with that mentioned in the Shēorinārāyaṇ inscription of K. 919, where Āmaṇadēva, a scion of a collateral branch of the Kalachuri family, made some benefactions. There are several villages of the name Peṇḍri or Peṇḍriā in Chhattisgarh, but the one nearest to Bilaigarh and Shēorinārāyaṇ is Peṇḍriā, about 7 miles north-west of the latter place. Ēvaḍi, the head-quarters of the maṇḍala of the same name, cannot be identified.

TRANSLATION

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to Brahman !

[For a translation of verses 1—10, see above, pp. 428 ff.]

(Verse 11) His son Prithvidēva (II) of well-known fame, who has planted his lotus-like foot on the rows of hostile princes' heads, has become the lord of kings—(he) who, by devastating Chakrakōṭa, overwhelmed the illustrious Gaṅga king with anxiety in regard to the crossing of the ocean which was the sole means (of saving his life).

(V. 12) In the family of the sage Vatsa there was born formerly a Brāhmaṇa named Hāpūka of great renown who, being foremost among those learned in the Vēdas, became dear to the world and possessed blameless prosperity; being smeared by whose glory, which in colour was as it were akin to powdered camphor and liquid sandal paste, the surface of the firmament shone all round.

(V. 13) He had a well-known son named Jīmūtavāhana, who by his life sanctified the earth, and attracted prosperity by his merits, and in whose case the goddess of fortune herself gave up her natural fickleness.

(V. 14) To him was born a wise son named Dēlhūka who has an intellect proficient in Vedāntic principles and matchlessly radiant in regard to Smṛitis. Clever and noble as he is, his greatness is for obliging the (whole) world.

(V. 15) Having learnt (from him) the *Sākambharī vidyā*¹ which is incomparable in all the worlds and having defeated his enemies with ease in the forefront of the battle, Brahmadēva, the well-known feudatory (of Prithvidēva II) regards him highly as the sole match for (Bṛhaspati) the preceptor of gods.

(V. 16) Prithvidēva (II) granted him the village Paṇḍaratalāi in the Ēvaṇḍi maṇḍala on the occasion of a solar eclipse.

(V. 17) Those, who will be born in this family, should confirm this copper (charter) so long as the serpent (Śēsha) supports the earth with a thousand pillar-like hoods.

(V. 18) Whoever may hereafter be a king or a minister also should protect with care this religious gift of mine.

(Here follow four benedictive and imprecatory verses.)

(V. 23) This prafasti incised on copper (plates) was composed by the illustrious Malhaṇa, the son of the illustrious Śubhaṅkara, who, being well-read, is a bee on the lotuses in the form of poets and has used words with splendid significance in a large number of prabandhas (works).

(V. 24) These excellent copper (plates) were prepared by Vāmana, written by a son of Kīrti and incised by a son of Lakshmīdhara.

No. 90 ; PLATE LXXIII

KONI STONE INSCRIPTION OF PRITHVIDEVA II : (KALACHURI) YEAR 900

THIS inscription was discovered by Dr. B. Ch. Chhabra, Government Epigraphist for India, in January 1946 at Kōni, a small village on the left bank of the Ārpā, about 10 miles south by east of Bilaspur, the chief town of the Bilaspur District in the Chhattisgarh Division of Madhya Pradesh. The site is described in the following note kindly supplied by Dr. Chhabra:—

‘The site of the inscription, with a black granite Siva-liṅga prominently standing in the centre, lies about $\frac{1}{4}$ mile west of Kōni. At that point the river Ārpā takes a graceful bend towards the south, thus providing an excellent site for a sanctuary. The one that stood here in the 12th century was a Śiva temple, as indicated by the surviving liṅga. The temple is referred to in the inscription by the special designation of the type Sivapañchāyatana. The site consists of a small mound strewn over with brickbats. The protruding bricks had attracted the attention of some villagers who started digging there and lay bare the liṅga, the inscribed slab and a number of sculptures. Among the latter, I saw two images, one of Viṣṇu and the other of Sūrya, and a couple of lintels each with a figurine of Gaṇeśa in the centre and some carving on either side.’ The record is edited here from an excellent ink impression which I owe to the kindness of the Government Epigraphist.¹

The inscription is incised on a stone measuring 3' 5" broad and 1' 10" high. It consists of 28 lines, each of which is 3' 3.2" long, except the last one which measures only 1.2" long. The record is in a good state of preservation except in the last three lines where a few akṣharas here and there are now damaged. Most of these akṣharas can, however, be restored conjecturally from the context as well as from the traces left behind.

The characters are Nāgarī. The record is well written and engraved, but both in writing and engraving a few mistakes have remained unnoticed.² The average size of the letters is .4". As shown below, the present inscription was incised only twenty years after the Sarkhō plates were issued by Ratnadēva II in K. 880, but its characters in some cases show considerable development over those of the latter record.³ As regards individual letters, attention may be drawn to the form of the initial i consisting of two curves, one below the other, which are still unconnected; the upper one is as in the Sarkhō plates, but the lower one is shaped differently; see iha, l. 12 and idam =, l. 24; initial ē has a form similar to that of p with this difference that its vertical stroke on the right is not lengthened below the base; see ētat =, l. 23; medial u is, in some cases, indicated by a curve attached to the middle of the vertical and turned downwards; see sahasra-dyuti =, l. 26; medial ē and ō are generally indicated by prishthamātrās, but in the case of ai and au one of the mātrās appears on the top; in such akṣharas as ku, kṛi and kṛī, k has an unlooped form; see ā-kunṭha =, l. 2; -a-sakrit =, l. 2; and -krīdā =, l. 25; subscript g of the conjunct gg appears almost like n; see -ggāmbhīrya, l. 16; n is still without its dot, see -ōttuṅga-raṅgat =, l. 2; the conjunct nn is indistinguishable from ll; see vinirṇaya =, l. 17; subscript th is placed horizontally exactly like subscript chh; see -kar-ōdarastham =, l. 3; dh has developed a horn on the left which now clearly distinguishes it from v, but it is still without the horizontal stroke at the top and the two horizontal strokes of dhā are still joined by a bar in the middle; see dharmma-mūrttiḥ, l. 6 and sudhā-sṛiṣṭiḥ, l. 10; v and b are written alike in all cases not even excepting the form babhūva; the left limb of the palatal ś has now assumed the modern Nāgarī form; see Sivāya, 1.1. The avagraha is used to denote the elision of a in kartta'tha, 1. 19 and manyē' mushmin, 1.23. The vertical dash is used at the end of several lines to denote an incomplete word.

² Some mistakes were corrected subsequently; see, e.g., that the anusvāra on nā in durjanānām =, l. 6 has been cancelled and the akṣharas daṇḍa, which were at first omitted, were incised subsequently in ll. 19-20.

The language is Sanskrit. Except ōm namah Sivāya in the beginning and the mention of the date and the ruling king at the end, the record is metrically composed throughout. There are, in all, 38 verses, all of which are numbered. The record is composed in a verbose style full of hyperbolical expressions, well-known from the records of later periods. The poet shows considerable command over the language, though here and there one comes across a grammatical solecism or a metrical irregularity; see, e.g., adhirōpyatu in 1.21 for adhyarōpyata-. Lakhamā in 1.15 should be Lakhmā to suit the Mālinī metre of the verse. As regards orthography, the consonant following r is reduplicated in many cases; see, e.g., -karṇṇa-, 1.2; the dental s is occasionally used for the palatal ś as in sikhara, 1.2; y is used for j in -paurusha-yushām 1.15; n is used for ñ in pañchāyatanam-, and for anusvāra in -vidhvansa-, both in 1.23. As stated before, v is used for b throughout. Finally, in nīhkaṇṭakam 11.18 and 19, the visarga takes the place of sh.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Prīthvīdēva II who belonged to the Ratanpur branch of the Kalachuri Dynasty. The object of it is to record the construction of a five-shrined temple of Śiva by Purushōttama, a minister plenipotentiary (Sarvādhikārin) of Prīthvīdēva's father and predecessor Ratnadēva II, and the grant of some land in honour of the gods installed in the temple.

The record is dated in the year 900 (expressed in decimal figures only) of an unspecified era, without any further details such as month, fortnight, tithi and week-day. The date must evidently be referred to the Kalachuri era which was current in that period in Chhattisgarh. It falls in the reign of Prīthvīdēva II whose dates range from K. 890¹ to K. 915.² Verse 35 mentions a solar eclipse on the occasion of which Prīthvīdēva II granted a village to the minister Purushōttama. No year is mentioned in connection with this eclipse, but supposing that it occurred in the same year in which the present record was put up, we get some data for verification. According to the epoch of 247-48 A.C., the year 900 mentioned in the present inscription will have to be taken as current; for there was a solar eclipse in the current Kalachuri year 900 (corresponding to 1147-48 A.C.), which occurred on the pūrṇimānta Vaiśākha *amāvāsyā*³ (20th April 1148 A.C.), while in the expired Kalachuri year 900 (1148-49 A.C.) there was no solar eclipse at all. The date may therefore be said to be regular.⁴ This is one of the few later dates of the Kalachuri era, mentioning a current year.

After four *maṅgala-sloka*s in praise of Śiva, his Nandi, the goddess of speech and Gaṇapati, the author states in one verse the importance of having a poetical record of one's achievements. He then proceeds to state the pedigree of the ruling king Prīthvīdēva II

from his great-grandfather Prithvidēva I who is called the lord of Tummāṇa.¹ The description of this king as also of his son Jājalladēva I and grandson Ratnadēva II is mainly conventional. The only historical event referred to is the defeat which a king of Kālīṅga suffered for the first time at the hands of Ratnadēva II. The reference is evidently to the defeat which that Kalachuri king inflicted on the mighty Gaṅga king Anantavarman-Chōḍagaṅga and which is mentioned in several records of his descendants.²

With verse 14 begins the genealogy of Purushōttama who erected the temple of Siva recorded in the present inscription. His ancestor Sōḍhadēva belonged to a Brāhmaṇa family which served the Kalachuri princes for several generations. Sōḍhadēva was appointed Minister by Prithvidēva I (v. 15). His son was Nimbhadēva. He and his wife Lakhamā (Lakshmi) are glorified in three verses (vv. 16-18). Their son was Purushōttama who was appointed to the post of Sarvādhikārin (Minister Plenipotentiary) by Ratnadēva II. He is eulogised in as many as eight verses. We are told that all kings having been subdued by the policy or prowess of this minister, the king Ratnadēva II was able to rule without any trouble.

Verse 26 mentions the exploits of Purushōttama. He conquered the Khimmiṇḍi maṇḍala, made the Talahāri maṇḍala attractive, punished Daṇḍapura, subjugated Khijjiṅga, killed Haravōhu and threatened the ruler of Daṇḍabhukti. It may be noted that some of these countries are also mentioned in a fragmentary verse eulogising the Kalachuri king Jājalladēva I, which occurs in his Ratanpur stone inscription, dated K. 866.³ Jājalladēva is said to have received annual tributes from the rulers of Dakṣiṇa Kōsala, Andhra, Khimiḍi, Vairāgara, Laṅjikā, Bhāṇāra, Talahāri, Daṇḍakapura, Nandāvali and Kukkuṭa. It will be noticed that Khimiḍi, Talahāri and Daṇḍapura are common to the two lists of countries. It may therefore be conjectured that Purushōttama took a prominent part in the expeditions of Jājalladēva I against the rulers of these three countries. The present inscription no doubt states that Purushōttama was made Sarvādhikārin by Ratnadēva II, but that does not necessarily imply that he first came into prominence during that king's reign. He may have held the office of a minister under Jājalladēva I also, and may have distinguished himself during that king's wars. Of these three countries, Talahāri maṇḍala was probably the name of the southern portion of the Bilaspur taluk and the adjoining portion of the Jānjgir taluk. Jājalladēva's conquest of Talahāri is mentioned in some other records of the period.⁴ Khimmiṇḍi or Khimiḍi may be the former Kimēḍi Zamindari in the Ganjam District. Jājalladēva I's expedition against this country, which probably owned the suzerainty of the Eastern Gaṅgas, may have provoked Anantavarman-Chōḍagaṅga into launching his invasion of the Kalachuri kingdom during the reign of Jājalladēva's son and successor Ratnadēva II. Nothing is known about the expedition against Daṇḍapura. This town may have been the capital of Daṇḍabhukti.

The remaining three events mentioned in v. 26 may have occurred during the reign of Ratnadēva II. The first two of these, viḥ, the subjugation of Khijjiṅga and the slaying of Haravōhu are not known from any other source, but the third one, viḥ, the intimidation

of the lord of Daṇḍabhukti may have happened during the expedition against the Gauḍa king which Ratnadēva II launched probably soon after inflicting a crushing defeat on Anantavarman-Chōḍagaṅga. This expedition is mentioned in several records¹ of Vallabharāja who was a feudatory of both Ratnadēva II and Pṛithvidēva II. Vallabharāja is said to have fought valiantly in the presence of his lord (Ratnadēva II) and captured many elephants in the enemy's city. This invasion of the Gauḍa kingdom is also probably referred to in the Rāmācharita of Sandhyākaranandin. From v. 133 of Canto IV of that kāvya we learn that Madanapāla drove back to the Kālindī (which flowed near his capital) the vanguard of the forces that had destroyed a large number of soldiers on his side.² The invader, who is not named in Sandhyākaranandin's kāvya, was probably Ratnadēva II. Like Vallabharāja, Purushōttama also seems to have distinguished himself in this expedition, in the course of which he intimidated the ruler of Daṇḍabhukti.

Purushōttama was probably an old man when the present inscription was put up. Verse 27 states that he had four sons Madhusūdana, Lakshmīdhara, Yaśōdhara and Gaṅgādhara, all of whom turned out to be very able statesmen. The eldest of them Madhusūdana is said to have attained great renown. He may have been appointed a minister, though not Sarvādhikārin by Pṛithvidēva II.³ Nothing is known about the other three sons of Purushōttama.

Verse 29 states that being convinced that human life is transitory and full of sorrows and that wealth is very unsteady, Purushōttama became intent on acquiring religious merit. He raised several groves, erected many maṭhas and maṇḍapas (temples) and excavated a deep tank at Ratnapura. He also built the five-shrined temple of Śiva where the present inscription was put up, and planted a pleasure garden near it. From v. 35 we learn that Pṛithvidēva (II) donated the village Salōnī to Purushōttama on the occasion of a solar eclipse.

Verse 37 eulogises Kāśala, the poet who composed the present prasasti. He is said to have been proficient in various arts and sciences including those of medicine and elephants. He had also mastered the āgamas of the Buddha and others. The description is interesting as it clearly indicates that though Buddhism, which was once flourishing in that part of Chhattisgarh ceased to have any followers there, its religious and philosophical works continued to be studied in Dakṣiṇa Kōśala down to the 12th century A.C. It may be noted that the earlier Ratanpur stone inscription of Jājalladēva I, dated K. 866, also mentions a Śaiva ascetic named Rudraśiva as proficient in the works of Dinnāga and others.⁴

The last verse (38) records two gifts, one of four plough-measures of land made to the gods installed in the temple and the other of two plough-measures made to the Brāhmaṇa Vāsudēva, who was evidently a priest of the temple.

As for the localities mentioned in the present prasasti, Tummāṇa has already been identified.⁵ Khimmiṇḍi may be identical with the former Kimeḍi Zamindari in the Ganjam District. Talahāri seems to have comprised the country round Mallār in the Bilāspur and Jānjgir tahsils. Its ancient name seems to have been Taradāmsaka-bhukti mentioned in an old copper-plate grant¹ of Mahāśivagupta-Bālārjuna, found near Mallār. Khijjiṅga and Daṇḍapura cannot be identified. Daṇḍabhukti is mentioned in several old records and probably comprised parts of Midnapur and Balasore Districts.² Finally, Salōnī, the village granted to Purushōttama, may be identical with Saraoni which lies only about a mile and a half south by west of Kōni where the present record was discovered.

² See History of Bengal, pub. by Dacca University, Vol. I, p. 170.

³ Pṛithvidēva II's Sarvādhikārin seems to have been his Māṇḍalika Brahmadēva whom he specially called from the Talahāri maṇḍala and made his Chief Minister as stated in the Ratanpur inscription, dated K. 915 (No. 96), l. 20.

Success ! Om ! Obeisance to Siva !

(Verse 1) May the terrific and violent tāṇḍava of the god Siva always protect you !—(the tāṇḍava) which bewildered the guardians of the quarters by the dashings of his shining arms against the mountains on the borders as he whirled them violently, while the earth sank under his steps⁵, and in which the brahmāṇḍa was pierced by the sharp points of his khaṭvāṅga which struck against it !

(V. 2) May the Bull⁶ of Siva grant you the attainment of your desired object !—(he) who frequently torments the brahmāṇḍa by the hard and dreadful rows of hair (on his body) ; who, by the noise of his thunder-like unchecked bellowing, causes intense pain to the ears of elephants (stationed) in the different quarters; who, by his very high-jumping hoofs, bruises the hoods of the lord of serpents; who destroys the splendour of enemies' cities; and who is adored by the three worlds !

(V. 3) We bow to that Speech who makes the practical life in the three worlds possible; who causes the attainment of the imperishable goal; and by attaining whose favour, good people regard the past, present and future as (placed) on the palm of their hand.

(V. 4) May that god of two mothers⁷ (i.e., Gaṇēśa) increase your welfare !—(the god) who threatens, as it were, a large multitude of obstacles by the humming of bees intoxicated by the drinking of the limpid rutting juice as it gushes forth with force at the commencement of his dance !

(V. 5) (People) may perform hundreds of glorious deeds on battle-fields, exterminate a host of enemies and bestow (plenty of) wealth; but all that would, in course of time, be like dancing in pitchy darkness⁸ in case it is not recorded by poets.

(V. 6) Formerly there was, in the family of the Kalachuris, a king (named) Pri-thvidēva (I), the lord of Tummāṇa, of spotless and abundant fame, who, by his administration of justice, made the whole world always seek refuge in righteous deeds; who was the sun to the darkness in the form of arrogant kings, and an ornament of the earth.

(V. 7) From him of holy lustre was (born) an illustrious son namely the king Jājalladēva (I) who was possessed of superhuman virtues and an excellent nature; whose

⁶ Generally the word grihṭi is feminine and signifies 'a cow that has had only one calf'. When masculine, the word means 'a boar'. Here it is used in the sense of 'Siva's bull'.

⁸ I.e., it would remain hidden from the people.

pro prowess spread in the (whole) world; (and) who, being intent on the welfare of his subjects, was indeed an incarnation of righteousness.¹

(V. 8) While he, who conferred obligations on all people, spread the mass of his fame, and destroyed the advancing lordly elephants of his enemies, was ruling the earth, there were nowhere (to be seen) the arrogance of any kings, the fever-like anxiety, due to poverty, of suppliants, the affliction, due to terror, of the person who sought protection, and also the habitation of wicked persons.

(V. 9) To him was (born) a son (named) Ratnadēva (II), the king well-known in the three worlds, who was the first to teach humiliation to the flourishing lord of Kalinga; who had an extremely developed and spreading fame; who had full knowledge of thirty-six sciences of weapons and the pride of fully developed arms; (and) who was the great magical incantation for the destruction of evil spirits, namely, the rising kings on (this) earth.

(V. 10) Does that illustrious Ratnadēva (II) need to be praised—(he) whose sole delight at all places and times was in the festivity of battle whether he was followed by a host of armies or was alone, and the great noise of whose dreadful marches incessantly hovers over (other) kings, proudly rebuking them as it were and challenging them to fight again and again?

(V. 11) When he, possessed of boundless, dreadful and mysterious prowess, was about to invade the circle of quarters, the highest mountains all round, with the resounding and dreadful reverberations of the sound of his war-drums, were, as it were, calling out to the lords of regions, uttering terrific cries, being apprehensive as regards the support of the earth burdened with his large marching hosts.

(V. 12) From that king was born (a son) named Prithvidēva (II), the offshoot of gems in the head-dress of the lords of the earth,² even as the sun rises from the slope of a mountain, as the moon was produced from the ocean, as Pradyumna was born from Purushōttama, Hari from the illustrious cowherd Nanda and Skanda from the moon-crested (Siva).

(V. 13) How many warriors did he not vanquish? What good people did he not please? At the doors of what panegyrists did he not keep lordly rutting elephants tied? How many princes did he not protect when they sought refuge on the battle-field? What excellences of the victorious Prithvidēva (II) are not attractive?

(V. 14) There was Sōḍhadēva like a jewel adorning a family of Brāhmaṇas, who received the hereditary ministership of these kings that bore the burden of all good qualities, (and) who was verily a wish-fulfilling tree to suppliants;

(V. 15) Who, being an abode of greatness, crossed the ocean of excellences; whose great fame adorned the world; and whom, possessed of many and marvellous qualities, that (famous) king Prithvidēva (I) of known valour made his hereditary minister.

(V. 16) His son was Nimbādēva, who in his personal form surpassed the god of love; who looked attractive with all (kinds of) learning; (and) who was a wreath on the crown of good people, the heavenly abode of wealth and fame, an ornament of the royal assembly and a friend of good persons.

(V. 17) Who was the dwelling-place of pleasing speech, the abode of religious merit, the resting place of compassion, the resort of good people, the hermitage of wisdom, the support of modesty, a large shrine of steadiness, the residence of wealth, the dwelling of beauty, the house of contentment and the sole receptacle of glory.

² This suggests that his feet were bowed to by the heads of these kings.

(V. 18) He had a wife named Lakhamā who was, as it were, his own body, the sole receptacle of all virtues, who resembled Rati in lovely form and Arundhatī in righteous deeds and who, being religious-minded, was the desired object of the prosperity of her house.

(V. 19) He had a son (named) Purushōttama who bore his name significantly;¹ who was the sole resting place of a multitude of excellences such as boundless self-control and forgiveness, an ornament of the family of earthly gods (i.e., Brāhmaṇas), the foremost among statesmen, the performer of blameless deeds and the first among wise persons possessed of great and attractive prowess;

(V. 20) Who adopted exaltation from the celestial mountain (Mēru), serenity from the ocean, munificence from (Karṇa) the son of the Sun, vigorous lustre from the sun, great prowess from the lion, bright mass of fame from (Rāma) the exterminator of Rāvaṇa, learning from Bṛihaspati and an excellent and beautiful form from the god of love.

(V. 21) O Wish-fulfilling Tree, be happy, getting rid of all exhaustion! O Mēru, you also are now free from the fear of being wounded²! That celestial Cow also may now repair to her calf! May that Purushōttama be long-lived in (this) world!

(Vv. 22-23) Having seen him whose intellect was adept in deciding doubtful matters of royal policy, who had an excellent nature on account of his use of the three royal powers, who was free from pride because of the great religious merit accruing to him by the use of the six measures, whose good character was tested by all kinds of tests³ and who was endowed with the multitude of ministerial qualities, Ratnadēva (II), the lord of Kōśala, gave him the unique post of Sarvādhikārin and ruled without any trouble for a long time.

(V. 24) Though he was elevated to the position of Sarvādhikārin, he became famous on the earth as one who bore the burden of the four (purushārthas).

(V. 25) The multitude of princes being vanquished by his policy as well as by his weapon, the king ruled on the orb of the (whole) earth without any trouble.

(V. 26) He (i.e., Purushōttama) captured the Khimmiṇḍi maṇḍala and made the Talahāri (maṇḍala) attractive. He had a fierce arm in subduing Daṇḍapura and was clever in overcoming Khijjiṅga. He killed Haravōhu (and) his valour was invincible in threatening the lord of Daṇḍabhukti.

(V. 27) His son was Madhusūdana; (then) was born his younger brother Lakshmīdhara and the blessed Yaśōdhara and another meritorious one named Gaṅgādhara. That wise (Purushōttama) had these four sons well-versed in statecraft, who were, as it were, the four objects of human life⁴ incarnate, moving about on the orb of this earth.

(V. 28) Among them this Madhusūdana, who had a multitude of all noble qualities, infinite prowess and modesty and who is an abode of sport, has attained great fame whereby his father has been placed in the forefront of all fathers.

(V. 29) Having realized that human life is unsteady like the flapping of the elephant's ears and is subject to innumerable sorrows, and that wealth, being momentary, is

¹ I.e., he was the best of men.

² The wounds of Mēru are caused by the gifts of gold from the slopes of the mountain.

³ For the various upadhās or tests of honesty, see Kauṭilya's Arthaśāstra (second ed. by Shama Sastri), p. 16.

⁴ These are dharma (religious merit), artha (wealth), kāma (enjoyment of pleasures) and mōksha (liberation).

extremely disagreeable, the mind of that illustrious Purushōttama which had become purified by the constant study of the various Sāstras, Purāṇas and Vēdas, became solely intent on the acquisition of religious merit.

(V. 30) Having been adorned all round by various kinds of groves and meritorious works of monasteries and temples erected by him,¹ the earth has attained marvellous splendour.

(V. 31) He made a lake at Ratnapura which is deep, contains many creatures, is clear, extremely beautiful and fit to be used by all people, (and thus) resembles his heart (which is serene, very courageous, pure, very fine and fit to be resorted to by all people).

(V. 32) This faultless and beautiful five-shrined temple of Śambhu has been erected by him with a view to dispel the mass of darkness (i.e., ignorance) of the three worlds. Having made his abode here, even (Śma), the sole lord of the whole universe, does not, I fancy, think at all of Kailāsa on account of the excellent offerings of worship (here).

(V. 33) This five-shrined temple² also of him (i.e., Śambhu) has been raised by him from water—(the temple) which, by its forms, makes itself identical with Dvārakā on the earth.³

(V. 34) He himself, shining with valour, has raised this pleasure-garden of the conqueror of Muru (Śiva), in which beautiful bees disport themselves, which has hundreds of beautiful blossoming creepers, which contains various flowers and fruits, which resounds with the warbling of innumerable joyful birds and which has covered the space in the sky with rows of strange trees and creepers.

(V. 35) While the sun was in the mouth of Rāhu,⁴ Pṛithvidēva (II) gave as a grant this village Salōnī to the wise Purushōttama.

(V. 36) As long as the moon with its stain washed away by the river flowing from the head of Śiva is wakeful, as long as the resplendent sun sanctifies the world with its rays, as long as the lord of serpents supports very firmly the orb of the earth on the top of his hoods—even so long may this glorious temple, honoured in the three worlds, last on this circle of the earth!

(V. 37) The illustrious, clever and compassionate Kāsala, who is skilled in the sciences of arms, who has attained proficiency in numerous and varied arts, who is conversant with the science of elephants and that of medicine, who is a swan (sporting) among lotus-plants which are the entire poetic arts, who knows the three *ratnas*⁵ and whose intellect is well-known in (expounding) the multitude of the āgamas of Śrīghana (the Buddha) and others, has composed this praśasti.

(V. 38) He (Purushōttama) gave four plough-measures of land to gods and two plough-measures (of land) to the learned Brāhmaṇa Vāsudēva.

The year 900, during the reign of Pṛithvidēva (II).

² The temple is called pāñchāyatana, because the main structure was surrounded by four small shrines dedicated to Durgā, Gaṇapati, Sarasvatī, etc. For another such temple of a slightly earlier period see the Rewa stone inscription of Kaṇa (No. 53, above).

⁴ I.e., at the time of a solar eclipse.

No. 91; PLATE LXXIV

AMODA PLATE (FIRST SET) OF PRITHVIDEVA II : (KALACHURI) YEAR 900

THIS set of two copper-plates was discovered together with three others¹ in May 1924, while digging for the foundation of a temple at Amōdā, a village situated 40 miles south by east of Bilaspur, in the Jānjgir tahsil of the Bilaspur District in Madhya Pradesh. The inscription on them has been edited with lithographs, but without a translation, by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in the Indian Historical Quarterly, Vol. I, pp. 405 ff. It is edited here from the original plates which are deposited in the Central Museum, Nagpur.

The plates are inscribed on one side only. They measure from 11.9" to 12.1" broad, from 7.3" to 7.7" high and .15" thick. Their ends are slightly raised for the protection of the writing. The second plate is in a state of good preservation, but the surface of the first is damaged in several places by verdigris. As the initial portion of the record is repeated from earlier inscriptions of the family, the damaged aksharas can be easily supplied. At the top of each plate there is a hole, .6" in diameter, for the ring which held the plates together. This ring bears a circular seal, 7.9" in diameter, containing the figure of squatting Lakshmī with an elephant on either side, pouring water on her head with his uplifted trunk, and the legend Rāja-śrīmat-Prithvidēvaḥ in two lines below. The weight of the two plates is 267½ tolas and that of the ring and the seal is 15 tolas.

The characters are Nāgarī. The letters are deeply incised, but not neatly formed. Their average size is .3". The form of the initial i appears 'like an arrow-head with a parallel stroke below'; see iti in ll. 10 and 32; the left portion of kh shows a curve at the top like that of s; see, e.g., sākhā, l. 21; the upper loop of th is closed in some places and open in others; see Prithvidēva-, l. 19 and -kari-yūtha-, l. 20; b is denoted by its proper sign only in the forms babhūvur- and babhūva, ll. 6 and 14; in other cases it is not distinguished from v; the sign of the avagraha occurs in ll. 3, 8, 11, 20 and 32. The language is Sanskrit. Except for ōṃ namō Vrahmaṇē in the first line and the name of the engraver in the last, the whole inscription is in verse. There are, in all, twenty-one verses, all of which are numbered.² The record contains several mistakes owing to the carelessness of the writer or the engraver; see, e.g., apṭādaś- for asṭādaś-, l. 6, -ānan-ābhōruḍa- for ānan-āmbhōruha-, l. 9, etc. The final consonant is not so marked in many places. As regards orthography, the consonant following r is often reduplicated; see, e.g., Kārttavīryaḥ, l. 3, -karmamāṇau, l. 29; the dental s is used for the palatal ś in -sasvat-, l. 5, =saurya-, l. 7, etc., and the dental n for the lingual ṇ in pratigrinhāti, l. 28.

The inscription is one of Prithvidēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. His genealogy down to his father Ratnadēva II is given here exactly as in the latter's Sarkhō plates. In fact the text of the present inscription down to verse 10 is, with the omission of one verse, identical with that of the Sarkhō plates. Verse 11, descriptive of Prithvidēva II, appears here for the first time, but the description in it is quite conventional.

The object of the inscription is to record the grant, by Prithvidēva II, of the village Avalā situated in the Madhya-maṇḍala on the occasion of a lunar eclipse in the month of Chaitra. The genealogy of the donee is given in verses 12-14. There was a Brāhmaṇa named Mihiraśvāmin of the Vājasaneyā śākhā and the Chandrā-trēya gōtra with the three pravaras Chandra, Atri and Sāvana.¹ His son Dēvaśarman, who emigrated from the village Ṭakārī, had three sons, Silaṇa, Pithana and Lashaṇū. Silaṇa, the eldest of them, was the donee of the present grant.

² The last verse is marked 20 by mistake.

The charter was written on the plates by the illustrious Vatsarāja, the son of the illustrious Kīrtidhara of the Vāstavya family. It was engraved by Lakshmīdhara.

The inscription is dated in the year 900 (expressed in decimal figures only) of an unspecified era. The date must, of course, be referred to the Kalachuri era. It corresponds, for the expired Kalachuri year 900, to 1148-49 A. C. During this period there was a lunar eclipse on the full-moon day of Chaitra, the corresponding Christian date being Friday, the 25th March 1149 A. C.

As for the geographical names occurring in this inscription, the Madhyamaṇḍala was taken by R.B. Hiralal to correspond to 'the tract owning the capital of the king'. The Amōdā plates of Pṛithvidēva I show, however, that the latter was included in the Aparā (Western) maṇḍala.² The village should rather be looked for in the vicinity of Amōdā where the present plates were found. In the reign of the Pṛithvidēva II, the Kalachuri rule extended to Sāraṅgaḍh in the east.³ The territory roughly corresponding to the Jānjgir tahsil must, therefore, have been included in the Madhya maṇḍala. As remarked by R.B. Hiralal, Avalā is a corruption of the Sanskrit āmalaka, which is the name of the tree emblemic myrobalan. There are several villages in the Jānjgir tahsil named after this tree such as Aorai Kala, Aori Khurd, Aoradi, etc. Of these, the nearest to Amōdā is Aoradi which lies only 4 miles to the east. Ṭakārī, from which the donee's father had emigrated, is probably identical with Ṭakkārikā, Ṭakkarikā, Takkāri or Tarkāri, mentioned in several grants⁴ as the original home of Brāhmaṇa donees. In one of them it is said to be situated in the Madhyadēśa. There is a village of that name, 16 m. north-west of Gayā.⁵ Jaḍēra is obviously identical with Jaṇḍēra mentioned in the Sarkhō plates of Ratnadēva II, which has been already identified⁶ with Jōndrā on the Seonath river, just outside the south-west limit of the Jānjgir tahsil.

⁴ See, e. g., the Kaṭak plates of Mahābhavagupta and Mahāśivagupta, Ep. Ind., Vol. III, p. 348 and p. 353 respectively; the Kalas-Budruk plates of Bhillama III, Ind. Ant., Vol. XVII, p. 121; the Banda District plate of Madanavarmadēva, ibid., Vol. XVI, p. 208 (where Dhakāri is a mislection for Ṭakārī); the Nanyaura plates of Dēvavarmadēva (where also the reading should be Ṭakārī), ibid., Vol. XVI, p. 205; the Māndhātā plates of Dēvapāla and Jayavarman, Ep. Ind., Vol. IX, pp. 103 ff; the Kōḷagallu inscription of Khōṭṭiga, ibid., Vol. XXI, p. 265; the Salimpur stone inscription of Jayapāladēva, ibid., Vol. XIII, p. 290, etc. In the third inscription referred to above, the place is called bhaṭṭa-grāma and is described as situated in the Madhyadēśa, while in the last it is said to have been included in Śrāvastī. Perhaps there were more than one place of that name, as there was a Śrāvastī in Bengal also. See Kāmarūpaśāsanāvalī, p. 155. See also Ind. Ant., Vol. XLVIII, pp. 208 ff; Vol. LX, pp. 14 ff. Ṭakkārikā was the original home of the Vāstavya family of the Kāyasthas also. See Ep. Ind., Vol. I, p. 333.

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to Brahman !

[For a translation of verses 1—10, see that of verses 1, 2 and 4—11, above, pp. 428-29.]

(Verse 11) From him was born Prithvidēva (II), as a cub is from a lion; who, having the strong body of a lion, destroyed his enemies like a troop of elephants.

(V. 12) In the gōtra of Chandrātrēya with the three pravaras Chandra, Atri and Pāvana,⁸ there was an excellent Brāhmaṇa bearing the name Mihirasvāmin.

³ Metre of verses 11—20: Anuṣṭubh.

⁵ Read शंखो.

⁶ Read छत्रं. Hiralal reads the first akṣara as छ, but it is clearly च्छ. For the form छ, see वाङ्मिता—,

⁷ Metre: Vasantatilakā.

⁸ Pāvana means 'fire.' The moon was a son of Atri who was himself born from fire.

(V. 13) (He belonged to) the śākhā called Vājasanēya and had emigrated from the village Ṭakārī. Of him, who was like Brahmā, there was a son named Dēvaśarman.

(V. 14) To him three sons were born. Of them the eldest was Sīlaṇa, his younger brother was Pīthana and thereafter was (born) Lashaṇū.

(Vv. 15-16) To this Brāhmaṇa, the illustrious Sīlaṇa, this village Avalā, well-known in the Madhya-maṇḍala together with all taxes was granted by the king with (an offering of) sesamum, kuśa, water and rice-grains, after washing his feet with devotion on (the occasion of) a lunar eclipse in (the month of) Chaitra.

(Here follow four benedictive and imprecatory verses.)

(V. 21) Here lived the wise and illustrious Kīrtidhara, the moon who made the night-lotus of the Vāstavya family bloom (and) who owned the village Jaḍēra. His beloved son, (known) as the illustrious Vātsarāja, wrote (on these plates of) copper.

GHOTIA PLATES OF PRITHVIDEVA II: (KALACHURI) YEAR 1000 (?) (900)

THESE copper-plates were found by a cultivator in his field at Ghōṭiā, a village 10 miles due south of Balōdā Bazār, the head-quarters of a tahsil of the same name in the Raipur District of Madhya Pradesh. They were brought to notice by Rai Bahadur Hiralal who discussed their contents in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. LIV, pp. 41 ff. His article was accompanied by negative facsimiles of the plates and the seal. The plates are now deposited in the Central Museum, Nagpur.

The copper-plates, two in number, are in a state of excellent preservation, each measuring 13½" broad and 8½" high. They were held together by a ring passing through a hole, .6" in diameter, at the top of each plate. The central portion of the ring is flattened into a circular seal, which contains a representation of the goddess Lakshmī, sitting cross-legged, with an elephant on either side pouring water over her head. Below is the legend Rāja-śrīmat-Prīthvidēva in two lines. The weight of the plates together with the ring is 294 tolas.

The characters are Nāgarī. As shown below, the present record is probably a very incorrect copy of a genuine charter, made by an ignorant scribe who could not read the original properly. He has left lacunæ in several places, where he could not clearly see the letters on the original plates, which may have been either damaged by rust or choked up with dust. We find him writing d for v, g for m, r for n, j for kri, v for r, h for bh and so forth. But even in this extremely incorrect copy we can notice some palæographic peculiarities of the original he copied from; e.g., the original seems to have had b denoted by its proper sign in babhūva, l. 11.

The language is Sanskrit. Except for the opening obeisance to Brahman and the particulars about the engraver and the date at the end, the inscription is metrically composed throughout. It consists of 26 verses, all of which are numbered. The first eleven verses in the eulogistic portion occur in the Amōdā plates (first set) of Prīthvidēva II. The twelfth verse, which is in praise of Prīthvidēva II, occurs also in the Daikōṇi plates of the same king. Besides, four benedictive and imprecatory verses and a verse about the scribe Vatsarāja¹ are common to the Amōdā plates (first set) of Pṛithvidēva II, dated K. 900. The orthography does not call for any special notice.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Pṛithvidēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. It purports to record the royal donation of the village Gōṭhadā in the Sāgatta (Sāmanta?) -maṇḍala on the occasion of an unspecified saṅkrānti. The donee was the Brāhmaṇa Gōpāla, the son of Rihila and grandson of Hari, who belonged to the Ālavāyana gōtra with the three pravaras, Vasishṭha, Maitrāvaruṇa and Kaundinya.²

The genealogy of the donor Pṛithvidēva II is given here as in the Amōdā plates of the same king. There is nothing new in the description of him and his ancestors as all the verses are repeated from the earlier grants.

The record purports to have been written by Vatsarāja, the son of Kīrtidhara, of the Vāstavya family, who owned the village Jaḍēra. Both Kīrtidhara and Vatsarāja are known from other records. The former, who is mentioned as the lord of the Jaṇḍēra village, wrote the Sarkhō plates of Ratnadēva II, while the latter was the scribe of the two sets of Amōdā plates (dated K. 900 and 905) of Pṛithvidēva II. The present charter is said to have been incised by Chāndāka who is plainly identical with Chāndārka, the engraver of the Amōdā plates (second set) of the same king Pṛithvidēva II.

The present grant purports to be dated in the year 1000 on Thursday in the bright fortnight of Bhādra[pa*]da. There is sufficient space left for cutting the tithi in the beginning of the last line, but as in so many other cases, the lacuna has not been filled up. The era, to which the year 1000 refers, is also not specified. It cannot evidently be the Kalachuri era; for the date would, in that case, be about a hundred years later than those of the aforementioned two sets of Amōdā plates of Pṛithvidēva II himself. Nor can the date be referred to the Vikrama or the Śaka era; for in either case it would make Pṛithvidēva II flourish earlier than even Ratnadēva I, his great-great-grandfather. It is clear, therefore, that there is some mistake here, as in so many other places in the present record, due to the carelessness and ignorance of the copyist and it may be conjectured that the original date was 900 which he wrongly copied as 1000. As the tithi has not been specified the date does not admit of verification, but if we suppose that the plates were issued on the same day on which the grant was made, i.e., on the occasion of a saṅkrānti, we get some basis for calculation. Even then the date appears to be slightly irregular. With 247-48 A.C. as the epoch of the Kalachuri era, the month Bhādrapada would fall in 1148 A.C. if the year 900 was current, and in 1149 A.C. if it was expired. There was no doubt a saṅkrānti (viṣṭi, Kanyā) in the bright fortnight of Bhādrapada in 1148 A.C., but it occurred 12 h. 45 m. on Friday (Bhādrapada śu. di. 11, corresponding to the 27th August 1148 A.C.) and not on Thursday as required. In 1149 A.C. there was no saṅkrānti in the bright fortnight of Bhādrapada at all. Similar slight discrepancies in respect of the week-day of a saṅkrānti are not unknown from absolutely genuine records.³ Overlooking the discrepancy of one day we may, therefore, take the date of the grant to be Friday [the 11th of] the bright fortnight of Bhādrapada of the current Kalachuri year 900, corresponding to the 27th August 1148 A.C.

¹ Viṣṭi, vv. 17-19, 21 and 26. All the first eleven verses occur in the same order in the Amōdā plates (second set) of Pṛithvidēva II also.

² It may be noted here that though Ālavāyana is a branch of the Vasishṭha gōtra, its pravaras are usually given as Vasishṭha, Ābharadvasu and Indrapramada. Hirālal took the correct reading to be Āśvalāyana, but even then the pravaras do not agree. According to many authorities, Āśvalāyana has only one pravara, viṣṭi, Vasishṭha. Āpastamba, of course, gives its pravaras as three, but according to him they are the same as for Ālavāyana, viṣṭi, Vasishṭha, Indrapramada and Ābharadvasu. See Gōtrapravaranibandhakadamba, p. 126.

³ See, e.g., the date of the Khairhā plates of Yaśaḥkarṇa, No. 56, above.

Though the names of the writer and the engraver tally, it is quite clear that these are not the original plates issued by Prithvidēva II; for the two grants of Prithvidēva II, which were written by Vatsarāja, show that he was a fairly careful writer and left no lacunæ in his writing. R. B. Hiralal took the present plates to be spurious. He thought that it was the donee who made use of his great learning in committing the forgery about a hundred years after the death of Prithvidēva II, i.e., about the middle of the 13th cen. A.C. To give the record the sanctity of great antiquity, he antedated the grant by 300 years and intended to refer the date to the Vikrama era which was prevalent at the time. This view of R.B. Hiralal does not, however, appear to be convincing; for whoever may have forged the grant, he would naturally have taken care to see that it contained no lacunæ or glaring mistakes, in order that it should pass as a genuine record. That the present grant contains too many lacunæ and mistakes has been shown above. It may again be noted that some of these mistakes occur in the verses descriptive of the donee and the occasion of the grant, where they would be least expected in a forged record. It seems, therefore, that the present inscription was copied from the original genuine plates long after the time of Prithvidēva II when some letters on the original plates were damaged by rust or were rendered illegible by dust. We have two more instances of such incorrect and absolutely unreliable copies of old inscriptions made by later writers who could not decipher the originals correctly.¹ The date of the present plates, if interpreted as shown above, does not appear to be improbable.

As for the localities mentioned in the present grant, Sā[ma]nta- maṇḍala appears to have comprised the outlying districts of the kingdom. Gōṭhadā, if this is the correct name of the donated village, may be identical with Ghōṭiā where the present plates were found.

GHOTIA PLATES OF PRITHVIDEVA II: (KALACHURI) YEAR 1000 (?) (900)

(V. 12) This son of him (i.e., of Ratnadēva II), the king Prithvidēva (II) of great and resplendent valour, rules the earth with great political wisdom.

(V. 13) There was a holy Brāhmaṇa named Hari, the ocean of the rivers, namely, the Vēdas. From him was born (a son) named Rihila who was like a wish-fulfilling tree to suppliants.

(V. 14) From him was born (a son) named Gōpāla, an ornament of the orb of the earth, who, being occupied with the study of the Vēdas, Smṛitis (and) Purāṇas, was like Druhiṇa (Brahmā).

(V. 15-16) On the occasion of a Saṅkrānti, (the king) donated a village named Gōṭhadā in the Sāmanta-maṇḍala¹ to the illustrious Gōpālaśarman of the Ālavāyana² gōtra with the three pravaras Vasishṭha, Maitrāvartuṇa and Kaundinya, after having washed the pair of his lotus-like feet.

NO. 93; PLATE LXXVI

RATANPUR STONE INSCRIPTION OF PRITHVIDEVA II : (VIKRAMA) YEAR 1207.

THIS inscription is incised on a slab of polished black stone which is said to have been discovered within the fort of Ratanpur⁵ and is now deposited in the Central Museum, Nagpur. The inscription was referred to by Sir Alexander Cunningham's Assistant, Mr. Beglar in the Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. VII (1873-74), p. 215. It has been edited before, first by Dr. Rajendralal Mitra in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XXXII, pp. 277-87, and again by Dr. Kielhorn in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. I, pp. 45 ff. The record is edited here from the original stone.

The inscription consists of 24 lines. The writing originally covered a space of about 2' 5½" broad by 1' 1" high; at present, a portion of the proper left side, all the way down, and the lower right corner of the stone are broken away, so that altogether about ninety aksharas are missing.⁶ The stone evidently was less injured when Dr. Rajendralal's rubbing was taken. The final aksharas, again, in ll. 10, 14, 17 and 19 of Dr. Kielhorn's transcript have been broken away since estampages were supplied to him. Except for one or two aksharas, here and there, which are slightly damaged, and a crack which cuts across ll. 14-24, the extant portion of the record is well-preserved. The size of the letters is about .4". The characters are Nāgarī. The medial ṃ appears in some cases as a curve turned

⁴ The figure of the tiṭhi has not been engraved.

⁶ Ep. Ind., Vol. I, p. 45.

downwards and added to the middle of the vertical stroke ; see, e.g., -vidyud-, 1.18 ; medial diphthongs are expressed by prishṭhamātrās in many cases ; k shows two forms, one in combination with the vowel ṛi and consonants and the other in other cases, see krīti and kāla-kramēṇ-, 1.8 ; ṇi has developed a dot, see -śaśāṅka-, 1.6 ; the left limb of dh is seen developed in a few cases, but the earlier form is predominant ; see nidhi-, 1.5, -rudha-, 1.11, etc. The sign of the avagraha occurs in ll. 5, 9, 11, 13, 16 and 21 and that of the jihvāmūliya in 1.17. The language is Sanskrit and except for the introductory obeisance and the date at the end, the record is metrically composed throughout. The verses are all numbered and total 30. They were composed by Dēvagaṇa, the son of Ratnasimha. The record was written by Kumārāpāla¹ and incised by Sāmpula. As regards orthography, we may notice that v is written for b everywhere and the dental s for the palatal ś in some places ; see, e.g., -pravōdhana-, 1.2, supṇā-, 1.2, Sach-īva, 1.10 ; the dental n wrongly takes the place of anusvāra in -karṇ-āvatansaḥ, 1.4 and of the palatal ṇ in chancharikah, 1.11, kin-ch-, 1.13, -chakran-cha-, 1.23 ; finally, m has not been changed to anusvāra in dhavalam-vilōkya, 1.12 and -idam=vidagdho-, 1.20, in violation of Pāṇini's rule (VIII, 3, 23).

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Prithvīdēva, who, as we shall see below, was the second prince of that name in the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it is to record the erection of a temple of Śiva at the village Sāmbā by one Dēvagaṇa.

After the customary obeisance to Śiva, the inscription has two verses in praise of Śiva and Gaṇapati. It then states that in the race of the moon was born Jājalladēva (I). His son, whose name is lost,² is described as the submarine fire to the ocean of the invincible army of the Chēdi king. He is also said to have destroyed, like Rāhu devouring the full moon, the brave warriors of the proud Chōḍagaṇga.³ This last-named prince is evidently the well-known Gaṅga king Anantavarman who was called Chōḍagaṇga, because he was the son of a Gaṅga king by a Chōla princess. The son of Jājalladēva whose victory over Chōḍagaṇga is spoken of here is, therefore, Ratnadēva II. This victory of Ratnadēva II, though not referred to in his own records, is mentioned with pride in several records of his successors.⁴ His defeat of Chēdi forces, however, is not alluded to elsewhere. The contemporary Chēdi king was probably Gayākarna who, we know, was ruling in K. 902.⁵ The present inscription next mentions Prithvīdēva (II), the son of Ratnadēva II, during whose reign it was set up.

After this introductory account of the Kalachuri dynasty, the record devotes as many as fifteen verses to the glorification of Dēvagaṇa who erected the afore-mentioned temple of Śiva, his ancestors, wives and children. His great-grandfather Gōvinda of the Vāstavya family had come down to Tummāṇa from the Chēdi country. He had two sons, Māmē and Rāghava. The former had, from his wife Rambhā, a son named Ratnasimha who was the father of Dēvagaṇa. We are next told that Dēvagaṇa had two wives Prabhā and Jāmhō, two sons Jagatsimha and Rāyarasimha and a daughter Bhōpā. Next are mentioned Vālhū and Dēvadāsa, whose relation to

² The name śrī-Ratnadēva was clear when Rajendralal's rubbing were taken. See below, text, p. 486, n. 6.

Dēvagaṇa is, however, not clear. The temple of Siva under the name of Bilvapāṇi, which Dēvagaṇa erected at Sāmbā, is described in verses 23-24. As stated before, it was Dēvagaṇa himself who composed this prastuti.

The date of the inscription, which is expressed in decimal figures only, was read as Samvat 1207 by Mr. Beglar¹ and Dr. Rajendralal Mitra² and as Samvat 1247 by Dr. Kielhorn. As remarked by Dr. Kielhorn, the figures are scratched on the stone, rather than properly engraved. The date must, of course, be referred to the Vikrama Samvat. As this is the only Kalachuri inscription of the time from Chhattisgarh which is dated in this era, it seems probable that the figures were substituted in later times in the place of the original date in the Kalachuri era.³ Reading the present date as 1247, Kielhorn at first referred the inscription to the reign of Prithvīdēva III whom he supposed to be the successor of Ratnadēva III, but later on he corrected himself.⁴ As we have seen, Prithvīdēva of the present inscription was the son of Ratnadēva II who won a victory over Anantavarman-Chōḍagaṅga. This Ratnadēva is, therefore, identical with the homonymous prince mentioned in the Mallār inscription,⁵ who also is credited with the same achievement. The Mallār inscription gives the (Kalachuri) year 919 (1167-68 A.C.) as a date for Ratnadēva II's grandson and Prithvīdēva II's son and successor, Jājalladēva II. The date of the present inscription, which was put up in the previous reign, cannot, therefore, in any case be carried beyond 1167-68 A.C. Consequently, Kielhorn's reading of the date, viz., (Vikrama) Samvat 1247 (1189-90 A.C.) is impossible. The first, second and fourth figures of the date are clearly 1, 2 and 7 respectively. As Prithvīdēva II's date cannot be carried beyond K. 919 or V. 1225, it is clear that the third figure of the date which is indistinct must be either 0 or 1. It is certainly not the latter. We have, therefore, to take the date to be 1207 (1149-50 A.C.) as read by Beglar and Rajendralal. It remains to add that the Pēṇḍrābandh plates,⁶ dated K. 965, show that Ratnadēva III was followed not by Prithvīdēva III, but by Pratāpamalla.

Sāmbā, where the temple of Siva was erected, still remains unidentified.

³ As Kielhorn has observed, the first akṣhara of the word samvat which precedes the figures of the date appears to have been put in the place of the figure 9. The next two akṣharas also seem to be scratched in the place of two ciphers. If the original date was K. 900 it would correspond to V. 1207. The latter seems to have been substituted for it when the Kalachuri era ceased to be current in Chhattisgarh.

TRANSLATION

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to Siva !

(Verse 1) May Rudra protect you !—(he), who at [the time of] sexual enjoyment is engrossed in persuading (thus) the daughter of the mountain (i.e., Gaurī)—‘How can the lord of serpents who uses his eyes as ears be able to see us ? And [how can] this crescent moon also which is in the state of infancy [know of it] ?’ !

(V. 2) May the leader of the Gaṇas (i.e., Gaṇapati) grant you prosperity !—(he) the surface of whose unique frontal globes is smeared with large masses of the powder of excellent vermilion ; who, with the violent dance of his trunk, adorns the [extensive] pavilion of all the regions of the sky (and) who is engaged in the sport of uprooting multitudes of trees !

(V. 3) [Glorious] is the white-rayed god (i.e., the Moon) who covers the circles of the regions with the multitude of his rays flowing with streams of nectar ; who has the beauty of a large mirror for the army of the king Madana as he marches forth for the conquest of the three worlds ; who is the jewelled ear-ornament of heavenly damsels and whose loveliness completely removes haughtiness from the hearts, resembling mountain caves, of mature women.

(V. 4) In his race was (born) the king Jājalladēva (I), a unique jewel-ornament of the world, who conquered the regions of the three worlds by the pride of his round massive arms, (and) attained the position of the lord of the host of gods the favourite husband of his wife, the earth, surrounded with the girdle of the [seven] oceans.

(V. 5) From him there was born a son [the illustrious king Ratnadēva (II)] who was the fierce submarine fire to the matchless ocean of the arrayed hard-to-be-subdued hosts of the Chēdi king ; who was Rāhu in seizing and swallowing the large lunar orb of the mighty warriors of Chōḍagaṇga, haughty with self-conceit ; and the marvels of whose great valour had no end on the orb of the earth.

(V. 6) There was born on the earth his son, the illustrious king Pṛithvidēva (II), the source of increasing fame, white like the spreading lustre of the full moon ; the rising sun of extremely fierce valour; [the ocean] of excellent royal [duty]; a wish-fulfilling jewel to hosts of panegyrist, come from (various) quarters.

(V. 7) In the reign¹ of this very prince, which follows the path of (good) policy, and causes joy to the people, which is unattended by contact with troubles—

(V. 8) In the course of time the learned Gōvinda [the moon of the Vāstavya race] came to the country of Tummāṇa from the Chēdi maṇḍala.

(V. 9) He had an elder son named Māmē, an ocean of the affection of the people, an ornament to a royal assembly and the sun to the day-lotuses which were learned men; who, an ornament of the earth, was, as it were, a pearl-necklace to adorn [his own spotless] family (and) was well-known on the earth as a unique bee in the matchless lotuses which were the feet of (Śiva) the destroyer of Tripura.

(V. 10) His younger brother was the illustrious Rāghava, an ocean of excellences; being cultured, he, an ornament of the expanse of the world, shone like the sun.

(V. 11) Radiant is the son of the illustrious Māmē, the illustrious Ratnasimha, the poet; the creeper of whose spreading, brilliant and continuous fame, shining like the kunda flowers and the moon and covering the (whole) world, has clung to the pavilion of the quarters; who routed hosts of haughty disputants (and was) the pleasure-resort of Fortune, and the home of integrity, righteous conduct, discrimination and religious merit.

(V. 12) He had a virtuous wife named Rambhā who was always honoured by relatives and who was (to him) as Sachi is to Indra, as (Gaurī) the daughter of the mountain is to Sambhu, (and) as (Lakshmi) the daughter of the milky ocean is to (Viṣṇu) who wields a discus in his hand.

(V. 13) From these two there was born here a son (named) Dēvagaṇa, whose fame is proclaimed in the three worlds; who has crushed the excessive conceit of hosts of learned opponents; (and) who is a bee on the beautiful lotuses which are the feet of (Śiva) the lord of Chaṇḍi, and [an ocean of] learning.

(V. 14) Seeing this whole world on all sides filled (and) whitened by his fame shining like a mass of the foam of the sea, even (Kṛishṇa), [the beloved] (of Lakshmi) the daughter of the ocean, watched by the wives of cow-herds, gets confused and stands distressed by the shore, losing his interest in the work of the destruction of Kālanēmi in the deep waters of the Kālindī.

(V. 15) His words are always eagerly listened to by multitudes of learned men, being the receptacle of abundant drops of the nectar-liquid-like moon-light which is drunk by the round beaks of Chakōra birds. Moreover, this cage-like hand of his, clever in conferring again and again their desired objects on all suppliants crowding together from various regions, has the wish-fulfilling tree under its control.

(V. 16) As the moon-light is to (the moon) that wears a garland of cool rays, as a cluster of blossoms is to the celestial tree, even so to him is his virtuous wife Prabhā, who by her beauty has surpassed a crowd of heavenly damsels.

(V. 17) His second beloved wife is Jāmhō, a home of gracefulness, who, owing to the intensity of unbounded fame, was a second abode of (his) life.

(V. 18) Full of pride owing to the matchlessness of her beauty, being, as it were, the science of reviving on earth the mind-born (god of love), though (he was) burnt by the moon-crested god (Śiva) in rage, (and) the home of the unique pride of the excellence of virtuous beauty, she was dearer (to him) than his life; after creating whom, the lotus-born (Brahmā), being pleased, felt exceedingly happy.

¹ This verse states the time when the temple mentioned in verse 24 was built.

(V. 19) His son Jagatsimha shines like a lion on earth,—(he) who dispels the expanding darkness of ignorance as a lion breaks open the frontal globes of elephants.

(V. 20) That son of the daughter of the mountain (i.e., Kārttikēya) is an enemy of Tāraka;¹ but this son of his, Rāyarasimha,² is the saviour (tāraka) of the whole multitude of (his) kinsmen.

(V. 21) His virtuous daughter Bhōpā, untouched by the (evil) actions of the Kali age, is, like the celestial river, purifying the three worlds.

(V. 22) Vālhū and the illustrious Dēvadāsa, united in mutual friendship, are shining, illumining the world like the sun and the moon.

(V. 23) Realizing that this human life is unsteady like a tuft of grass which trembles when shaken by the wind, and that fortune is like the play of lightning flashing in the midst of dreadful clouds, he (i.e., Dēvagaṇa), becoming exceedingly pious, put his faith in the eternal path of bliss which destroys the mass of sins, even as a mighty wild fire burns wood.

(V. 24) At the village Sāmbā, Dēvagaṇa constructed a temple of Śiva Bilvapāṇi, resplendent like the extensive peaks of the snow-mountain (Himālaya).

(V. 25) Being, as it were, pleased at first with the close embrace of the hips of the earth³ enjoyed by several kings, and being (next) desirous of clasping closely the bodies of women, viṣ., the quarters all round,⁴ trembling with the pangs of love, this temple, putting on a smile of intense love, like a clever lover, kisses the face of Beauty of the surrounding regions of the sky⁵ in the presence of heavenly damsels.

(V. 26) Dēvagaṇa, the son of the illustrious Ratnasimha,—whose wealth of learning is rendered faultless by (his knowledge of) all traditional precepts; who has an excellent talent for poetry; who has reached the further shore of the ocean of good reasoning; who is regarded as the son of Bhṛigu (i.e., Śukra) in politics; (and) who is the sun to the lotuses, namely, the sciences of metrics, rhetoric (and) grammar, of love and of the arts,—has composed this faultless eulogy.

(V. 27) The illustrious learned Kumārapāla,⁶ the son of [Avani]pāla, a home of the play of learning and the repository of a powerful intellect, who is the cool-rayed (moon) in making the night-lotus of poetry bloom, has written this faultless eulogy.

(V. 28) This pleasing eulogy has been engraved in beautiful rows of letters by the intelligent artisan Sāmpula.

(V. 29) and Dēvagaṇa, the crest-jewels of sculptors, have constructed (this) temple of Śiva (named) Bilvapāṇi.

(V. 30) As long as the moon and the sun encircle the world with the lines of (their) rays, as long as the orb of the earth supported by troops of the elephants of the quarters [rests on the tortoise], as long as the sky bears the excellent ornament of the long pearl-strings (viṣ.) the constellations of stars,—so long may thy fame prosper in the guise of (this) temple of (Śiva) the enemy of the god of love!

The year [1207].

⁴ Since the flags of the temple flutter on all sides.

No. 94; PLATE LXXVII

AMODA PLATES (SECOND SET) OF PRITHVIDEVA II: (KALACHURI) YEAR 905

THIS set of two copper-plates was found together with another (called the First Set) issued by the same king¹ and two others² at Amōdā, 40 miles south by east of Bilaspur, in the Jānjgir tahsil of the Bilaspur District in Madhya Pradesh. This inscription, like that on the first set, has been edited with lithographs, but without a translation, by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in the Indian Historical Quarterly, Vol. I, pp. 405 ff. It is edited here from the original plates which are deposited in the Central Museum, Nagpur.

The plates are inscribed on one side only. They are much bigger in size than those of the First Set, measuring from 15.3" to 15.6" broad and 8.8" high. They are about .1" in thickness. Their ends are slightly raised for the protection of the writing. A small piece at the lower proper left corner of the first plate has been broken away and lost, which has resulted in the mutilation of one akshara at the end of line 18. Again, some aksharas in the lower proper right corner of the second plate have been slightly damaged by verdigris. Otherwise, the plates are in a state of good preservation. The damaged letters can be easily supplied from the First Set which has a large portion in common with the present record. The plates were held together by a ring passing through a hole, .5" in diameter, at the top of each. The ring has a circular seal, 2.8" in diameter, closely resembling that of the First Set in device and legend. The weight of the two plates is 255 tolas and that of the ring and the seal, 15 tolas.

The characters are Nāgarī. The letters are deeply incised and somewhat better formed than those of the First Set. Their average size is .4", except in the last seven lines on the first plate where it is reduced to .3". As shown below, the present charter was written only about five years after that of K. 900 and the writer of both was the same. Consequently, we see the same palaeographical and orthographical peculiarities here as in the latter charter. The language is Sanskrit. Except for ōm namō Vrahmaṇē in the beginning and the name of the engraver and the date at the end, the record is in verse throughout. It contains 28 verses, all of which are numbered. Of these, the first eleven, which give the genealogy of the donor, are copied verbatim from the earlier grant. The next four, which mention the donees, their gōtra and the village granted to them, are, of course, different. Then come twelve benedictive and imprecatory verses, of which four are found in the earlier record. The last verse, which gives particulars about the writer, is, again, identical in both the records.

The inscription is one of Pṛithvīdēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it is to record the grant, by Pṛithvīdēva II, of the village Buḍubuḍū in the Madhya-maṇḍala to the three Brāhmaṇa brothers Silaṇa, Pithana and Lakaṇa, the sons of Dēvaśarman who was himself the son of Mihirasvāmin of the Chandrātrēya gōtra, with the three pravaras Chandra, Atri and Spāvana.³ From the other Amōdā plates we have seen that Silaṇa was the eldest of the three brothers and was the sole recipient of the grant recorded in it. The present grant was made on the akshaya- tritiyā tithi.¹ The record was written by Vatsarāja, the son of Kīrtidhara, the owner of the village Jaḍēra. He was the writer of the First Set of the Amōdā plates also. The charter was engraved by Chāndārka.

The inscription is dated on Tuesday, the 6th day of the bright fortnight of Āśvina in the year 905 (expressed in decimal figures only) of an unspecified era. The date must, of course, be referred to the Kalachuri era. According to Kielhorn's final view, the Kalachuri era began on Āśvina śu. di. 1 (the 5th September) in 248 A.C. The date of the present grant should, therefore, fall in 1152 A.C. if the year 905 was current, and in 1153 A.C. if it was expired. But in 1152 A.C. the afore-mentioned tithi ended 7 h. 30 m. after mean sunrise on Saturday (the 6th September) and in 1153 A.C. it ended 7 h. after mean sunrise on Friday (the 25th September). In neither case was the tithi connected with a Tuesday. The date would, therefore, have to be taken as irregular. On the other hand, if we suppose that the Kalachuri year began in some month later than Āśvina (say in Kārttika), the details of the date work out regularly; for the 6th tithi of the bright fortnight of Āśvina in 1154 A.C., corresponding to the expired Kalachuri year 905, commenced 1 h. 15 m. after mean sunrise on Tuesday (the 14th September). It is true that on this day also the tithi was not current at sunrise, but since it practically filled the whole of that day and was probably current at the time of the gift, it may have been coupled with that week-day. Tuesday, the 14th September, 1154 A.C. is, therefore, the date of the present record. Like the date of the Jabalpur plates of Jayasīma² it clearly shows that the Kalachuri year must have commenced in some month later than Āśvina. The preceding akshaya-tritīyā or Vaiśākha-śukla-tritīyā, on which the grant was made, fell on Saturday, the 17th April 1154 A.C.³ The plates were thus actually issued nearly five months after the grant was made.

Of the geographical names occurring in this inscription, Madhya-maṇḍala and Jaḍēra have already been identified.⁴ The donated village Buḍubuḍū was, like Avalā, probably situated in the vicinity of Amōdā, but it cannot be traced now. R.B. Hiralal identified it with Burbur in the former Lāphā Zamindari, 2 miles south-west of Pāli in the Bilaspur taluk, but it is situated too far from Amōdā.

TRANSLATION

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to Brahman !

[For a translation of verses 1-10, see above, pp. 428-29.]

(Verse 11) From him was born Prithvidēva (II) as a cub is from a lion ; who, having the strong body of a lion, destroyed his enemies like a troop of elephants.

(V. 12) In the gōtra of Chandrātrēya, with the three pravaras Chandra, Atri and Spāvana¹, there was an excellent Brāhmaṇa bearing the name Mihirasvāmin.

(V. 13) He had a son named Dēvaśarman, most proficient in policy. He too had two well-known sons Silāṇa and Pīthana.

(V. 14) (Their) younger (brother) was Lakaṇa as Lakshmaṇa was of Rāma. All of them were religious-minded and high-souled, and were fond of gods and Brāhmaṇas.

(V. 15) To them this village Buḍubuḍū in the Madhya-maṇḍala recorded in (this) copper-charter (was granted) by the king on the akshaya-tṛitīyā.

(Here follow twelve benedictive and imprecatory verses.)

(V. 28) There lived here the wise and illustrious Kīrtidhara, the moon which made the night-lotuses of the Vāstavya family bloom, (and) who owned the village named Jaḍēra. His learned son, known as the illustrious Vatsarāja, wrote (on these plates of) copper.

RATANPUR STONE INSCRIPTION OF PRITHVIDEVA II: KALACHURI YEAR 910

THIS inscription was first brought to notice by Sir A. Cunningham who gave a transcript of its date accompanied by a photozincograph of the corresponding portion of the record in his Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. XVII (1881-82), p. 76 and pl. xx. The record was subsequently noticed very briefly by Rai Bahadur Hiralal with the remark that 'it is fragmentary and is almost wholly effaced'.² It is edited here for the first time from the original stone which is now deposited in the Central Museum, Nagpur.³

The inscription is incised on a slab of black stone which is said to have been found at Ratanpur in the Bilaspur District of Madhya Pradesh. It is fragmentary. The extant portion, which covers a space 2' 1" broad and 1' 6½" high, contains twenty-eight lines. About three lines containing two verses and a portion of the third have been broken away from the top, but nothing has been lost from the sides and the bottom of the stone. The inscription has, however, been almost completely obliterated on the middle of the surface of the stone, only about half a dozen aksharas on either side being still legible in lines 3-23. The preserved portion shows that the present record had many verses in common with three other inscriptions,⁴ but as these latter also are fragmentary, they do not afford much help in the restoration of the lost aksharas.

The characters are Nāgarī, and the language Sanskrit. The record originally contained thirty verses, all of which except the last two were numbered, and some portion in prose in lines 24-27. The orthography does not present anything calling for special notice.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of the king Pṛithvīdēva (II) of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it seems to be to record in one place all the religious and charitable works which Vallabharāja, a feudatory chieftain of the Kalachuri kings Ratnadēva II and Pṛithvīdēva II, did from time to time. It is dated in the year 910 (expressed in decimal figures only) which is expressly referred to the Kalachuri era. The date corresponds, for the expired year 910, to 1158-59 A.C. It does not admit of verification in the absence of the necessary details.

The first two verses, which, to judge from the Akaltarā inscription of the same chieftain,¹ were probably in praise of Siva and the moon are completely lost. The third verse describes the Kalachuri family. The next five verses, of which four are common to the Akaltarā inscription, eulogize Ratnarāja (I), Pṛithvīdēva (I), Jājalladēva (I), Lāchchhalladēvī, the queen of Jājalladēva (I), and Ratnadēva (II). Verse 9 seems to have described Pṛithvīdēva II,² but it is almost completely effaced. It was followed by a description of Vallabharāja's ancestors as in the Akaltarā inscription, but only the name of Harigaṇa the father of Vallabharāja can be read in the preserved portion. The eulogy of Vallabharāja seems to have commenced in verse 13 and to have contained inter alia a description of the town he founded and the tank he excavated. The name of Dēvapāṇi, who composed the praśasti, occurs in line 23. Then comes an enumeration, in prose, of the religious and charitable works of Vallabharāja. He made a lake to the east of Ratnapura, using the range of hills near the village Khāḍā as a dam. He dug another small tank, raised a grove of three hundred mango trees at the foot of the hill near the village Saḍaviḍa, and excavated a large lake Ratnēsvara-sāgara, named evidently after his earlier suzerain Ratnadēva II. On the outskirts of Vikarṇapura he made a tank, raised a garden containing many temples and monasteries, erected a temple of Rēvanta and dug a very deep well near a hill called Dēvaparvata. Another tank was excavated in a village, the name of which appears to be Rāṭhēvaisamā. To the east of the town called Bhaudā, on the way to Hasivadhā, he excavated a tank, full of water-lilies. Finally, we are told that the work was done at the instance of Vallabharāja's pious wife Svētalladēvī.³

As for the geographical names occurring in the present inscription, Ratnapura has already been identified with Ratanpur. The village Khāḍā, near which a lake was formed, taking advantage of the position of the neighbouring hills, is probably identical with Karrā, about a mile and a half to the east of Ratanpur, near which there is still the extensive Khārung Tank. Vikarṇapura was probably the old name of Kōṭgaḍh, 1½ miles north of Akaltarā. Hasivadhā may be Hasod in the Jānjgir tahsil, about 22 miles east of Shcōrinārāyaṇ. The hills Bijjala and Dēvaparvata cannot be definitely located. The former may, however, be connected with Baijalpur, a village in the Jānjgir tahsil. The remaining places I am unable to identify.

RATANPUR STONE INSCRIPTION OF PRITHVIDEVA II: (KALACHURI) YEAR 915

THIS inscription was brought to notice as early as 1825 by Sir Richard Jenkins who published a short account¹ of it in the Asiatic Researches, Vol. XV, pp. 504-5. It has since been referred to twice by Dr. Kielhorn in the *Epigraphia Indica*² and has also been briefly noticed by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in his Inscriptions in C.P. and Berar.³ It is edited here from the original stone which is now preserved in the Central Museum, Nagpur.⁴

According to a manuscript history of Ratanpur, the stone bearing this inscription was discovered within the Bādal Mahāl⁵ of the fort at Ratanpur, 16 miles north of Bilaspur in the Bilaspur District of Madhya Pradesh. More than 75 years ago one Reva Ram Kayastha of Ratanpur prepared a transcript of the inscription for the Chief Commissioner

⁴ This inscription was edited for the first time by me in Ep. Ind., Vol. XXVI, pp. 255 ff.

of the Central Provinces, which is now included in the aforementioned MS. history of Ratanpur.¹ The stone was then apparently in a state of good preservation, for Reva Ram's transcript has no lacunæ. It has since then suffered in a most deplorable manner especially in the middle of lines 5-35, where from 3 to 39 aksharas have been lost in each line. Lines 13 and 14 have been completely effaced except for a few aksharas at one end. In the extant portion also, several letters here and there have become partly or wholly illegible. Unfortunately Reva Ram's transcript affords little aid in such places as it is full of inaccuracies, judging from the extant portions of the record.² A patient examination of the original has enabled me to prepare the subjoined transcript from which it would be possible to form a general idea of the whole record.

The inscribed portion measures 2' 9½" broad and 1' 9½" high and contains 36 lines. The characters are Nāgarī. The average size of the letters is .4". The medial diphthongs are shown by prishthamūtrās; ī is still without a dot; see, e.g., -bhṛīṅga-, l. 2; the rare jh occurs in -jhāmīkṛitaiḥ, l. 24 and -jhamīkāra-, l. 27; the upper loop of th is not open; see -pratyarthi-prithvīpatau, l. 20; in its subscript form the letter is still laid on its side; see pānthā-, l. 24; finally, dh has not yet developed a horn on the left; see dhārādharēṇa, l. 2. The language is Sanskrit. Except for ōṃ namaḥ Śivāya in the beginning and the date at the end, the record is metrically composed throughout. It contains 45 verses, all of which seem to have been numbered. The orthography does not call for any notice except that the consonant following r is generally reduplicated and v is throughout used for b.

The inscription is one of Brahmadēva, a feudatory prince of Prithvidēva II, of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it is to record the religious and charitable works of Brahmadēva at several places. It is dated in the year 915 (expressed in decimal figures only) of an unspecified era. This date must, of course, be referred to the Kalachuri era. The year, if expired, would correspond to 1163-64 A.C. This is the last known date³ for Prithvidēva, for the next certain Kalachuri date 919 belongs to the reign of his successor Jājalladēva II.

The inscription opens with the customary obeisance to Siva, which is followed by three verses invoking the blessings of the deity. The next verse describes Śeṣha, the lord of serpents. Verses 5-8 eulogise the Talahāri-maṇḍala which is called an ornament of the earth. Then begins a description of the family of Brahmadēva who put up the present record. His father Prithvīpāla is eulogised in verses 8 and 9 as a very valiant and famous personage. His son Brahmadēva was the foremost of the feudatories (maṇḍalik-āgruṇī) evidently of the contemporary Kalachuri king of Ratanpur (v. 11). The next nine verses (12-20) describe his valour, handsome form, learning and charity. The only point of historical interest mentioned in the extant portion is that he obtained a victory over Jaṭṭśvara who is evidently identical with the homonymous son of Anantavarman Chōḍagaṅga. We are next told that Prithvidēva, the lord of Kōsala, called him from the Talahāri-maṇḍala, and entrusting the government of his country to him, obtained peace of mind. This Prithvidēva is evidently the second prince of that name in the Kalachuri dynasty of Ratanpur. The next eighteen verses (22-39) describe the benefactions of Brahmadēva. He constructed a temple of Dhūrjaṭi (Śiva) at Mallāla and excavated a tank, evidently at the same place. The religious merit of the former he assigned to his lord, Prithvidēva. Besides these, he built ten shrines of Tryambaka (Śiva) and dug two lotus-ponds at some place, the name of which is lost. At Varēlāpura he constructed a grand temple of Śrikanṭha and at Ratnapura he built nine shrines of Pārvatī. At the latter place he excavated also a large step-well and two tanks, one on the north and the other on the south of the city. Several other religious and charitable works of Brahmadēva are next mentioned, viz., a tank at the village Gōṭhālī, a temple of Dhūrjaṭi at Nārāyaṇapura, tanks at Bamhaṇī, Charauya and Tējallapura, a temple of Śiva at Kumarākōṭa and a mango-grove as well as a charitable feeding house evidently at the same place. Verse 39 records that he donated the village Lōṇākara to the god Sōmanātha who is probably identical with the deity installed in the temple at Kumarākōṭa.

The next two verses (40-41) are devoted to the description of Anantapāla of the Gauḍa lineage, who was a keeper of records, and his son Tribhuvanapāla who composed the present prastuti. Then are mentioned the scribe Kumārāpāla¹ and the engravers Dhanapati and Īśvara (vv. 43-44). The prastuti closes with a verse expressing the hope that the kīrti (evidently the temple of Sōmanātha at which the present prastuti was originally put up) may last for ever.

As for the localities mentioned in the present inscription, Mallāla is evidently modern Mallār, 16 miles south-east of Bilaspur. Varēlāpura or Barēlāpura is Barēla, 10 miles south of Ratanpur. Nārāyaṇapura and Bamhaṇī still retain their names; the former is situated on the Mahānadi in the Raipur District, while the latter is 4 miles north by east of Akaltarā. Rai Bahadur Hiralal identified Kumarākōṭa with Kōṭgaḍh,² but from some other records the old name of the latter appears to have been Vikarnapura.³ Gōṭhālī, Charauya and Tējallapura cannot now be traced, but the last of these may have been situated not very far from Shēorinārāyaṇ, for it seems to have been founded by Tējalladēva, a Kalachuri prince of a collateral branch, who is mentioned in an inscription at Shēorinārāyaṇ.⁴ Finally, Talahāri maṇḍala is probably

identical with the ancient Taraḍamśaka bhukti mentioned in the Mallār plates of Mahā-Sivagupta.¹ It is highly glorified in the present inscription probably because Mallār and other places, where Brahmadēva constructed his religious and charitable works, were included in it. It seems thus to have comprised the southern portions of the Bilaspur and Jānjgir tahsils and the northern portion of the Raipur District.

³ Expressed by a symbol.

⁷ Metre of this and the next verse: Sragdharā.

⁸ Metre of this and the next two verses: Śārdūlavikrīḍita.

¹⁰ The Ratanpur MS. furnishes here the fairly good reading—वनश्राव्यं (स्पन्दन्) मरन्दस्पृहाभ्राम्यद्भूमिधुवता- लिखितां (विस्तै) वाचालदिङ्मण्डले.

¹¹ The missing akṣaras can be supplied with the help of the Ratanpur MS. as राकानाथकपूरपूरप्रचुररज-
तरेतःक्षीरहारादिकाभे.

² The missing akṣharas in the third pāda can be restored with the help of the Ratanpur MS. as कीर्तिर्भुवो गगनमण्डलमाविहर्तुं, but the following akṣharas are uncertain. Metre: Vasantatilakā.

⁵ The historically important name is missing in the Ratanpur MS. which reads instead युधास्वद्विपुनृपान्.

³ Read -न्यद्यशो-.

⁴ Read -वाम्प्रवणं.

⁵ Metre of this and the next verse: Sārdūlavikrīḍita.

⁶ Restore ग्रामं.

⁸ The first two of the missing akṣaras here appear like वेदा-. Read वेदार्था-.

⁹ The missing letters may be हित्य. The sign of the middle i of हि is clear.

¹¹ Metre: Sārdūlavikrīḍita.

¹² Metre of this and the next verse: Āryā.

Success! Ōm! Adoration to Siva!

(Verse 1) May the divine half-moon-crested (Sivā) increase your welfare!—(he) who has three eyes as if because of his desire to see simultaneously, at the time of playful amorous enjoyment, the pair of gold-pitcher-like breasts and the lotus-like face of (Pārvatī) the daughter of the lord of mountains!

(V. 2) May that Nilakaṇṭha (i.e., Siva) grant your fortune!—(he) whose throat with a white surrounding on account of [the smearing of] ashes, imitating the beauty of collyrium, a row of blue lotuses, a line of bees, a sapphire, wild buffaloes and a mass of darkness, appears like the slope of a ridge of the snow-mountain covered with a cloud, dark with the surcharge of water!

(V. 3) May that lover of Pārvatī remove your sin!—seeing in the nails of whose lotus-like feet as in the surface of a mirror the reflection of the universe in the forms of Brahmā, Indra, Viṣṇu, the moon, the jewel of heaven (i.e., the sun), the principal mountains, the earth, the oceans and others, (Pārvatī) the daughter of the lord of mountains was struck with wonder, her moon-like face being bent down in bashfulness!

(V. 4) May that lord of serpents Śeṣha grant the happiness of the worlds!—(he) on whose lap there sleeps for a long time Nārāyaṇa, in the unique cavity of whose belly as in a cottage there rests the universe and whose feet are caressed by the lotus-like hands of Lakṣmī; and on account of the precious stones in whose numerous hoods the ocean came to be the store of jewels!

(V. 5) This famous province (maṇḍala) of Talahāri is the ornament of the earth—which is surrounded on all sides by tanks with full-blown lotuses and humming bees and is adorned with gardens which appear beautiful with plantain trees shining [in the groves of mangoes and other trees] and to which the god of love is attracted by the excessive warbling of cuckoos;

(V. 6) Where the regions are noisy [with the humming of bees hovering on] blooming, fresh, blue lotuses [in the desire for honey]; where the teachers, the cavities of whose ears are, in admiration, filled with the musical sound, do not mark the faulty (pronunciation) of the crowds of pupils reciting (their texts).

(V. 7) Here while its fair fame, resembling the lord of serpents, [the moon, camphor-powder, silver, milk, pearl-necklace and others] is roaming in all directions, the chakōra birds even now eagerly fly (after it), mistaking it for the rays of the moon.

(V. 8) In the sacrificial enclosures in it, the line of smoke, as it speedily touches the expanse of the sky, . . . is looked at by the peacocks which scream in joy, mistaking it for a multitude of clouds.

(V. 9) Then there was born Prithvipāla. From the necks of the hostile princes struck by him with the sharp sword grasped in his hand . . . for half a moment subjects himself to apprehension.

(V. 10) [Whose fame of bright lustre resembling lightning] and wearing a white necklace of spotless pearls scattered from the large frontal globes of the best elephants of his enemies, cleft by the strokes of his sword . . . has gone from the earth to the region of the sky in order to divert itself.

(V. 11) From him was born the illustrious Brahmadēva, the foremost of feudatories, the play-house of fame white like the moon (and) the resting place of valour,—(he) who is to the parting line of hair of the wives of hostile warriors struck by his sword what a cloud is to the moon!¹

(V. 12) [The heavenly damsels] gathering together again and again on the path of the gods (i.e., in the sky) and conversing with crowds of hostile warriors killed on the battlefield as they speedily became gods rumbling out of season.

(V. 13) like the man-lion, he was the best of men; like Achyuta (Vishṇu) wielding his uplifted discus, he leads a victorious army; like Vishṇu who is fond of the bird (Garuḍa) and reclines on the best of serpents, he is fond of the Brāhmaṇas and lives in the company of the best of¹ Nāga princes.

(V. 14) (This verse is completely effaced.)

(V. 15) Who accepted a beloved clad in a black garment who had lovely, compact and large breasts, and who just then fell in love with him Taking off the sheath of (his sword)

(V. 16) In the fight, in which the strokes of his creeper-like sword appeared like (flashes of) lightning and in which it was difficult to move about on account of multitudes of streams of blood gushing forth from the necks of crowds of wrathful foes, he having attacked the hostile king Jaṭeśvara. . . .

(V. 17) He is to his enemies as the sun is to a mass of darkness; he is Pradyumna to women (and) the preceptor of gods (i.e., Bṛihaspati) in the right judgment of speech; being well-known for imprisoning (his) mighty (foe),² he resembles Kṛishṇa (who in his Dwarf incarnation imprisoned Bali), (but unlike Kṛishṇa) he is not dark-complexioned.³

(V. 18) Though like the ocean he is dear to all creatures, appears charming with his great vitality (as the ocean does with its abundant store of water), has attained a supreme position by his command of all armies (as the ocean has by its lordship over all rivers), and is a receptacle of precious things (as the ocean is a treasure of jewels), he does not (unlike the ocean which gives shelter to water) give refuge to dullards.

(V. 19) The regions at the extremity of the earth which appear beautiful with the magnificent bridge of Rāma (and) those, the water of the ocean in which is absorbed by the navels of the women in the city of Varuṇa, have been resorted to by his fame.⁴

(V. 20) 'This [Brahmadēva who is the sun to] the lotuses which are the faces of the excellent ladies who come out of eagerness to see his handsome form [may come] to our world to give away wealth to suppliants in charity.'—Being as it were urged by gods through such apprehension⁵ the sun moves continuously round the regions on the slopes of the golden mountain (Mēru).

(V. 21) Consigning the yoke of the government to him who, being a treasure of merits, had been brought over with great favour from the Talahāri-maṇḍala and who killed hostile kings with the strokes of the sword grasped in his hand, the king Prithvī-dēva (II), the lord of the famous Kōsala country, obtained great mental happiness.

(V 22) [Seeing that] on the orb of the earth is like dew-drops on (the

² This may refer to the imprisonment of Jaṭeśvara.

petal of) a lotus shaken by wind, that wealth is unsteady resembling mostly the flashes [of lightning] and that man's youth imitates (in fickleness) the shining of the fire-fly, he who had acquired abundant wealth [by valour] exerted himself for piety.

(V. 23) In this¹ Mallāla, which renders the circle of regions fragrant with abundant [full-blown] lotuses, he constructed a temple of Dhūrjaṭi (Śiva) white like lavala flowers and (distinguished) by these banners set in motion by wind, which remove the perspiration, caused by fatigue, of the horses of the sun.

(V. 24) [And he constructed] a tank, which appears beautiful with clusters of full-blown lotuses, the rows of the waves of which are broken by the protruding breasts of town-ladies and which is crowded on all sides with multitudes of swans sporting in water

(V. 25) The religious merit of this temple, the splendour of which is beautiful like that of the moon's rays and kunda flowers, he assigned to the king Prithvidēva (II) of pious nature.

(V. 26) He constructed ten large and beautiful temples of Tryambaka (Śiva), [bright] like moon-light, full-blown night-lotuses, kunda flowers and the mountain of crystals (i.e., Kailāsa).

(V. 27) At this very place he [made] two beautiful lotus-pools which delighted the ears of travellers with the sweet humming [of bees]

(V. 28) He erected at the famous Varēlāpura, a temple of Śrīkaṇṭha (Śiva) white like the lustre of the moon, and covered with flags fluttering in the wind; having received habitation in which, the god (Śiva), the lord of Ambikā, has given up completely his longing for living on Kailāsa

(V. 29) By him there were built at Ratnapura nine cloud-kissing excellent temples of Pārvatī, the daughter of the Himālaya, (which are) white like night-lotuses, the moon, kunda flowers, snow, pearl-necklaces and lavalī (flowers) (and) the flags of which flutter in the wind.

(V. 30) He made here a large and beautiful well, with wonderful steps, the waves of which were stirred by the plump breasts of town-ladies sporting (in its water).

(V. 31) In the northern and southern directions of Ratnapura he made two beautiful tanks which are rendered noisy by the buzzing of the swarms of bees humming on clusters of full-blown lotuses and the banks of which are crowded with numerous swans sporting (in their water) and [in which garments slip down from the bodies of] extremely libidinous women.

(V. 32) At the village named Gōṭhālī he made a pleasant tank which is occupied by crowds of fishes as heaven is by gods.²

(V. 33) He constructed at Nārāyaṇapura a temple of Dhūrjaṭi (Śiva), white like the moon, which with its flags scrapes the sky.

(V. 34) He made a tank near the village Bamhaṇī, which, like the story of the *Bhārata*³, is

¹ The wording of verse 23 may be taken to signify that the inscription originally came from Mallāla, but notice a similar wording in v. 30.

² There is a play on the expression animēśha-dṛiṣ (lit., having unwinking eyes). It signifies (i) fishes and (ii) gods.

(V. 35) He made a large and lovely lake at the village called Charauya and [a beautiful temple of Siva] at Tējallapura.

(V. 36) At the town of Kumarākōṭa he made another lovely temple of (Siva) the husband of Parvatī, resplendent like the mass of his own fame.

(V. 37) He himself planted a grove of mango trees which, with their very dense shade, removes the heat (of the sun) and with its multitude of fruits reached by the hand, pleases travellers, and where the knot of stubborn reserve of proud young ladies gives way at the imperious command of the god of love, which is begun (to be communicated) by the mingling sweet notes of the warbling cuckoos.

(V. 38) Having partaken, to their hearts' content, of the various kinds of foods and drinks as desired in the charitable feeding house of the great sacrificer, such loud cries of pilgrims daily make the circle of regions resound (vij.)

(V. 39) To the god Sōmanātha the pious one granted this [village] Lōṇākara together with all taxes

(V. 40) There was the learned [Ananta]pāla of extensive fame, born in the Gauḍa lineage, who mastered the paths of poets, who always secured a place at the head of good people, whose thoughts were rendered pure by his knowledge [of the contents of the Vēdas], who was clever in [literary] discussions, who attained renown in the department of records (and) was the play-house of fortune.

(V. 41) [From him] was born Tribhuvanapāla who gives shelter to all Brāhmaṇas and who, being a treasure of arts, has (all) his desires completely fulfilled, even as from the milky ocean is produced the moon which, being the repository of digits, exceedingly adorns all quarters and maintains all (chakōra) birds.¹

(V. 42) The learned Tribhuvanapāla has composed this praśasti (eulogy) resembling a lake,—which is full of flavour (as a lake has abundant water), is profound (as a lake is deep) and clear, and is pleasing to the thoughts of poets.

(V. 43) The wise Kumārapāla who has attained excellence in learning and fine arts, has with eagerness written this praśasti resembling a necklace of pearls,—which has the merit of (being composed in) good metres (as the necklace has that of having well-rounded pearls), which is rich in merits (as the necklace is in threads), which (like the necklace) appears brilliant and is full of deep sentiments (as the necklace is possessed of great charm).²

(V. 44) This pleasant praśasti, abounding in sentiments, is incised in beautiful letters by the skilful and best sculptors named Dhanapati and Īvara.

(V. 45) As long as the moon, the gem of the sky and the crest-jewel of (Siva) the lord of Chāṇḍī, makes the orb (of the earth) white with its dense rays, as long as the lotus-dwelling (goddess of fortune) rests on the breast of the god who is distinguished by the (mace) Kaumōdakī (i.e., of Viṣṇu),—even so long may this bright temple³ shine on the orb of the earth!

The Year 915.

¹ There is a play on three expressions here which are intended to be construed with Tribhuvanapāla and the moon.

² The expressions in the first hemistich of this verse are, on account of double entendre, intended to be construed with the praśasti (eulogy) as well as the bār-āvalī (pearl-necklace).

No. 97; PLATE LXXIX

MALLAR STONE INSCRIPTION OF JAJALLADEVA II : (KALACHURI) YEAR 919

THIS inscription is on a black stone which is said to have been found at Mallār¹ a village 16 miles south-west of Bilaspur in the tahsil and district of Bilaspur in Madhya Pradesh. The inscription has been edited before with a translation, but without a lithograph, by Dr. Kielhorn in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. I, pp. 39 ff. It is edited here from the original stone which is preserved in the Central Museum, Nagpur.

The record consists of 28 lines. The inscribed surface measures 2' 4½" broad by 1' 6½" high. The stone is broken at the upper and lower proper right corners so that the first four aksharas in the first line have been lost and the first three aksharas in the last line have been partially damaged. Besides these, one or two aksharas have suffered here and there. Otherwise, the record is in a state of perfect preservation. The characters are Nāgarī. They closely resemble those of the Ratanpur stone inscription dated V. 1207² which, as shown below, was written by the same scribe. The language is Sanskrit. Except for [ōm namaḥ] Sivāya in the beginning and the date at the end, the record is metrically composed throughout. It consists of 26 verses, all of which are numbered. The present inscription has several ideas in common with the afore-mentioned Ratanpur stone inscription. For instance, verses 3, 8, 12, 20 and 22 of the present inscription are evidently composed in imitation of verses 3, 7, 8, 23 and 25 of the Ratanpur record.³ Verse 25, again, which describes the scribe Kumārapala, occurs in the Shēorinārāyaṇ inscription⁴ of Āmaṇadēva which also belongs to the reign of Jājalladēva II. The orthography shows the usual substitution of v for b and the confusion of the dental and palatal sibilants. Besides these, we may note that y is written for j in -yushām = in 1.7 and mra for mra in -jaṭ-āmra-, 1.1; n is wrongly used for the anusvāra in Mimāṃsā-, 1.16 and Rāghav-ānhri-, 1.26, and for the palatal nasal in -bhūtin=cha, 1.13.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Jājalladēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it is to record the construction, at Mallār, of a temple of Śiva under the name of Kēdāra by a Brāhmaṇa named Sōmarāja. It is dated in the year 919 (expressed in decimal figures only) of an unspecified era. The date must, of course, be referred to the Kalachuri era. The year, if expired, would correspond to 1167-68 A.C. It does not admit of verification for want of the necessary details.

After two maṅgala-ślōkas invoking the blessings of Śiva and Gaṇapati, the inscription describes Ratnadēva as 'a fierce cloud which extinguished the continuously raging flames of the spreading mighty fire of the valour of the king Chōḍagaṅga.' This plainly refers to the victory of Ratnadēva II over Anantavarman-Chōḍagaṅga, the mighty king of Kalinga.⁵ We are next told that Ratnadēva (II) had a son named Pṛithvīdēva (II),

³ Dr. Kielhorn, who first observed this similarity, thought that Dēvagaṇa, the author of the Ratanpur inscription, imitated the composition of his father Ratnasimha; for the Ratanpur inscription eulogizes five of the grandchildren of Ratnasimha. He therefore read the date of that inscription as (Vikrama) 1247. That the real date is (Vikrama) 1207 has already been shown; see above, p. 485. The Ratanpur inscription was therefore composed about 18 years before the present one. Consequently, Ratnasimha himself was the imitator. This can also be inferred from the wording of v. 22 of the present inscription. See below, p. 518, n. 2.

whose son Jājalladēva (II) was ruling when the present record was put up.

The inscription next gives the genealogy of Sōmarāja. At the village Kumbhaṭī in Madhya-deśa (Middle Country) watered by the celestial river (Gaṅgā), there lived a Brāhmaṇa named Prithvidhara of Kṛishṇātrēya gōtra with the *pravara*s Ātrēya, Ārchanānasa and Syāvāśva.¹ His son Gaṅgādharma came, in course of time, to the country of Tummāṇa where he was honoured by Ratnadēva II with the gift of the village Kōsambi.² Gaṅgādharma's son, Sōmarāja was proficient in both the Mīmāṃsās, the Nyāya and Vaiśeṣhika systems, and refuted the doctrines of the Chārvākas, Bauddhas and Jainas. He constructed a temple of the god Kēdāra at Mallāla, at which the present inscription was evidently put up. The record was composed by Ratnasimha, the son of Māmē, who belonged to the Vāstavya family and owed his rise to the illustrious Rāghava. The latter is evidently identical with the homonymous astrologer who is mentioned as one of the donees in the Amōdā plates of Jājalladēva II.³ Both Mamē and Ratnasimha are mentioned in the Ratanpur stone inscription of the reign of Prithvidēva II, dated V. 1207, which was composed by Ratnasimha's son Dēvagaṇa. The present record was written on the stone by the Kshatriya Kumārāpāla of the race of Sahasrārjuna, who, as already stated, is named as the scribe in several other records.⁴ It was incised by the sculptor Sāmpula.⁵

Of the geographical names mentioned here, Madhya-dēśa roughly corresponds to the present Uttar Pradesh. Kumbhaṭī cannot be identified. Tummāṇa has already been shown to be identical with Tumān, 16 miles north-east of Ratanpur. Mallāla is clearly Mallār in Bilaspur tahsil, where the stone is said to have been found. There is no village in the Bilaspur District exactly corresponding to Kōsamvī or Kōsambi, but if Kōsamvī of the text is a mistake for Kosandhī,⁶ the village would be represented by Kōsamḍih, 8 miles from Mallār.⁷

⁵ Sāmpula was the sculptor of the Ratanpur stone inscription (No. 93, above) also.

[Success ! Ōm ! Salutation] to Siva !

(Verse 1) May that Sambhu always protect you !—(he) who possesses the beauty of an auspicious jar, wearing on his head a mass of matted hair as the jar has a number of mango leaves,¹² with the flames of the fire of his third eye on his broad forehead spreading around like the light of a lamp on a lamp-stand (placed near the jar), and covered with the streams of water of the high waves of the celestial river (Gaṅgā) (even as the jar is filled with water)!

(V. 2) May the large, extremely terrific (and yet) lovely trunk of Gaṇapati for ever protect you!—(the trunk) which at day-break appears splendid as it is raised after a dip in the water of the celestial river, possessing the grace of the stalk of the large lotus, namely, the circle of the universe!

(V. 3) Glorious is the white-rayed god (i.e., the Moon) born, from the ocean, who fills the circles of the sky and (earthly) regions with a mass of drops dripping from a multitude of streams of nectar; (who is) the mirror of the army of the king Love, the friend of night-lotuses and the tap-root of the great joy of the world; (and) who possesses skill in removing the seal of haughtiness (from the hearts) of tremulous-eyed women.

(V. 4) In his race there was the illustrious Ratnadēva (II), a beautiful king, an abode of royal fortune, a fierce cloud to extinguish the continuously raging flames of the spreading mighty fire of the valour of the king Chōḍagaṅga,¹ a wild fire to consume the unique tree of pride (supporting) the creeper-like long arms of the hostile valiant lords of the earth.

(V. 5) From him was born his son Pṛithvīdēva (II), a lord of the whole circle of the earth, who was the eagle to the serpents, namely, the mighty hostile lords of the earth; whose two lotus-like feet were adored by the submissive (princes) with multitudes of beautiful jasmine wreaths, namely, the mass of lustre of their crest-jewels; (who was) a high pleasure-mount for the goddess of victory of his own arm and a tree (that supported) the creeper, namely, the fame of excellent royalty.

(V. 6) From him was born the prince Jājalladēva (II), the lord of Tummāṇa, the foremost of the kings who have raised the Chēdi family; who, by the pride of his arms, has annihilated his foes, illumining, like a lamp, his spotless family; (who was) a unique treasure of excellent royalty (and) a sun of prowess; (and) who has acquired fortune by his valour.

(V. 7) I fancy that owing to apprehension caused by the suspicion that he might give them away (to suppliants),² the milky ocean, the lord of rivers, has kept his multitude of jewels in the deep water rolling in (his) dreadful cavities, the sun-god his horses and the lord of gods (i.e., Indra) his elephant, that has a wreath of female bees delighted by the streams of his rutting juice, in the heavens rendered inaccessible by the waters of the celestial river.

(V. 8) In the reign of that king, which follows the path of good policy, is free from the infestation of troubles and gives delight to the people³—

(V. 9) There was in the glorious Madhya-dēśa ornamented by the garland of waves of the flooding water of the extensive celestial river, (which is) like a necklace to the whole orb of the earth crowded with countries, a village named Kumbhaṭī with charming and extensive lands, the habitation of the best of the twice-born, which the creator made, by effort, a spotless counterpart of a portion of heaven.

² Kielhorn translated, 'I fancy that through fear, produced by the suspicion that they would have to give (them) to him' etc. But dāna means a charitable gift. The king would not have begged for these jewels, but would have wrested them from the ocean etc. in order to give them away to his suppliants. The same idea occurs in v. 17, below, and more clearly in v. 20 of No. 96, above.

³ This verse is connected in sense with verse 21. It states the time when the temple of Kēdāra was built.

(V. 10) In that (village) there was a twice-born named Ṣṛithvīdhara, in the gōtra Kṛishnātrēya, adorned with the (three) auspicious pravaras, (of which) Ātreya was the first and following him the well-known Ārchanāna and Sasyavāsa,¹ the third; the pair of whose feet was covered with the lustre of the sprout-like jewels waving on the heads of the rows of kings bowing (to him).

(V. 11) From him was born a son, that Gaṅgādhara, who wore on his head the beautiful title of 'the lord of the twice-born'; who always had the unique and large third eye of knowledge; who, getting rid of the irresistible passion of love, always secured for himself excellent welfare; (and) who had recourse to irrefutable arguments in (meeting) a crowd of hostile disputants.²

(V. 12) From that place that crest-jewel of the twice-born, who had acquired great fortune by the multitude of his excellences, came to the country of Tummāṇa in course of time.

(V. 13) To him the king Ratnadēva (II) gave the village Kōsambī by pouring out water, after he had washed his lotus-like feet.

(V. 14) From the illustrious Gaṅgādhara there was born a younger son, that illustrious Sōmarāja, whose unique feet are adorable to the world; who causes great joy, is free from defects (and) is a repository of numerous arts; who holds the position of the best of the twice-born, is possessed of far-reaching and abundant splendour as he shuns the company of the dull (and) is an ornament of the orb of the earth; and who is (thus) a second moon (which is freed from its spots; whose unique rays are an object of veneration to the world; which causes great joy, is the store of increasing digits, and has the name of 'the lord of the twice-born'; which, being united with accursed cold, spreads abundant lustre far and wide and is an ornament to the orb of the earth.)

(V. 15) This venerable person has completely mastered the two Mīmāṃsās,³ is a repository of the pride of being unrivalled in the system of Kāśyapa⁴ and in Sāṅkhya and is three-eyed since he has for his (third) eye the doctrine of Akshapāda;⁵ (he) who has quelled the great conceit of Chārvāka; who is the pitcher-born sage (Agastya) rejoicing in drinking up the irresistible ocean of the Buddhist (doctrine) and is a god of death to the naked (Jainas).

(V. 16) At his house the delighted and dexterous peacocks dance again and again spreading their excellent plumage, when they see the circle of the regions of the sky darkened incessantly by the lines of smoke issuing from rows of sacrificial fire-pits, which they mistake for rows of clouds, and filled with the spreading loud sound of the Vedic texts recited by the mouths of Brāhmaṇas (which they mistake for thunder).

(V. 17) Being apprehensive, as it were, of his gifts, the mountain of gold makes itself inaccessible, and the ocean gets itself surrounded by thorny trees and by lions and other dreadful beasts on the shore, (while) even Sēsha has placed his jewels in the row of his hoods, terrible with the mass of flickering poison-flames emitted by his mouth with sharp fangs.

⁵ I.e., the Nyāya system.

(V. 18) Him that lotus-born (Brahmā) created, being desirous, as it were, of seeing the best collection of excellences (in one person), after he had severally taken, beauty from the husband of Rati (who is) desirous of conquering the universe, nobility from the mountain of gold, gravity from the ocean, untiring prowess from the thousand-rayed (sun) (and) supremacy from (Śiva) the destroyer of the god of love.

(V. 19) The female swan, namely, his fame, having again and again roamed about by the water near the shores of the seven oceans and not feeling fatigued, went to the abode of gods, longing for the heavenly Gaṅgā and having eaten there tender lotus-fibres and pieces of lotus-stalks and pining through ardent passion, she has repaired for enjoyment to the swan¹ of (Brahmā) the god born from the lotus in the vessel-like egg of Brahman.

(V. 20) Having realized that the life of man is unsteady like a piece of cotton, which moves when struck by the wind, and that fortune is fickle, the wise one turned his mind to religion.

(V. 21) Intelligent as he is, he caused to be constructed at the town of Mallāla a beautiful temple of the god Kēdāra resplendent like the mass of his own fame.

(V. 22) Having first clasped the earth which felt delighted at the close embrace of its heavy hips, this temple which is clever in embracing with its encircling arms of banners the women, namely, the quarters, kisses, as it were, to its heart's content, the face of Beauty of the surrounding sky without (any) bashfulness in the presence of the beautiful damsels of the celestial city, as if because its heart is full of love.²

(V. 23-4) This charming eulogy has been composed by the intelligent Ratna-sirṇha, the son of Māmē, who knows the settled conclusions of the systems of Kāśyapa and Akshapāda, (and is) a lion to hostile disputants; who owes his rise to the lotus-like feet of the illustrious Rāghava, as a tree with far-spread branches owes its growth to showers from clouds, (and who is) to the Vāstavya family (what) the sun is to an assemblage of lotuses.

(V. 25) This eulogy, charming like a woman who appears beautiful by her good qualities, has been written out of eagerness by Kumārapāla, the best of Kshatriyas, who was born in the race of Sahasrārjuna.

(V. 26) This has been engraved with care by the sculptor Sāmpula, who has seen the farther shore of the ocean of various mechanical arts.

The year 919.

¹ Kielhorn, who read madāt=saṇḍiḥ in line 23, translated, 'It has rapturously come, to enjoy itself, to the lotus-grounds of the interior of the vessel-like egg of Brahman.' This is incorrect for the correct reading is marālaṇi yayan. Marāla means 'a swan'. It refers here to the swan which is the vehicle of Brahmā. The poet intends to suggest that the king's fame went to the world of Brahmā.

² Kielhorn translated, 'The surrounding sky eagerly kisses, as if it were the face of Fortune, this (temple) fit to be embraced on all sides by the encircling banner-like arms of the women of the regions' (Ep. Ind., Vol. I, p. 45). The scribe wrote by mistake parisaraḥ śrīmukhaṁ for parisara-śrī-mukhaṁ which seems to have misled Kielhorn. What the poet intends to convey is that the temple first embraced the earth, since it had a deep foundation, and then the quarters with its arms of banners, and finally it kisses the face of Beauty of the surrounding sky with its spire. The idea of the towering spire of a lofty building kissing the sky is common in Sanskrit literature. This verse is imitated from v. 25 of No. 93, above, in which we have the reading gagan-parisara-śrī-mukhaṁ.

No. 98; PLATE LXXX

SHEORINARAYAN STONE INSCRIPTION OF JAJALLADEVA II: CHEDI YEAR 919

THE stone which bears this inscription is built into the plinth of the temple of Chandra-chūdēśvara which stands in close vicinity to that of Nārāyaṇa in Shēorinārāyaṇ, a well-known place of pilgrimage on the left bank of the Mahānadi, 38 miles south-east of Bilaspur in the Jānjgir tahsil of the Bilaspur District in Madhya Pradesh. The date of the inscription has been known for a long time from a photozincograph published in Sir A. Cunningham's Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. XVII, plate xx. A brief and somewhat imperfect account of it was published by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar in the Progress Report of the Archæological Survey of Western India for 1903-04, pp. 52-53, which has been followed by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in his Inscriptions in the C.P. and Berar.¹ The inscription is edited here for the first time from the original stone which I examined in situ and from estampages taken under my direction.

The inscription contains 27 lines. The writing covers a space 3' 5" broad and 1' 8½" high, but nearly half the portion on the proper left in ll. 2-17 has been completely lost owing to the peeling off of the surface of the stone. The Mahant of Shēorinārāyaṇ possesses a sort of transcript of the inscription which was made when the stone was less damaged, but it is too full of mistakes to be of any use in the restoration of the lost portion. The letters are well-formed, carefully written and deeply incised. Their size varies from .3" to .5". In two places the aksharas which were at first omitted are written below the line; see ya in prīṇayatō-, l. 15 and gān in bhōgān, l. 20; and in one place a wrong akshara is cancelled by incising two vertical strokes on the top. The characters are Nāgarī. They closely resemble those of the Ratanpur inscription of Pṛithvidēva II, dated K. 915,² except that ṇi appears here with a dot in some places (e.g., in Kaliṅgarājō, l. 4) and without it in others (e.g., in bhṛīṅg-āṅganā-, l. 23). The language is Sanskrit. Except for the obeisance to Siva in the first line and the date and the customary pious wish for the well-being of the world in the last, the record is metrically composed throughout. It contains 45 verses, all of which are numbered. The orthography shows the usual peculiarities of the use of v for b and the confusion of the dental s and the palatal ś. In śrēyāṁsi l. 1, the anusvāra is wrongly changed to n, and in pancha l. 3 and Virinch-ānana- l. 26, nch wrongly takes the place of ñch.

The prafasti was composed as well as written by Kumārapāla, who describes himself as an excellent Kshatriya and a descendant of Sahasrārjuna. He figures as scribe in some other inscriptions³ also. The engraver was Chhītuka by name.

The present record is dated in the Chēdi year 919 (expressed in decimal figures only). The date does not admit of verification for want of the necessary details, but the year, if expired, would correspond to 1167-68 A.C.

The inscription belongs to the reign of Jājalladēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The immediate object of it seems to be to record the donation of the village Chīñchēlī by Āmaṇadēva, a descendant of a collateral branch of the Kalachuri dynasty, for the purpose of defraying the expenses of incense, lights and other materials for the worship of the god Chandrachūḍa and the erection of a temple of Durgā in front of the shrine (of Chandrachūḍa) by Vikannadēva who was an uncle of Āmaṇadēva. By way of introduction the inscription furnishes an account of the Kalachuri dynasty of Ratanpur.

Owing to the unfortunate loss of more than one-fourth portion, the record does not admit of a complete account of its contents. It falls into three parts. The first part which traces the genealogy of the ruling prince Jājalladēva II ends with verse 10; the second, which describes the members of the collateral branch, comprises verses 11-34; while the last one, which mentions the various benefactions made by the princes of that branch, comprises the remaining portion.

After two maṅgala-slōkas invoking the blessings of Siva, the record has a verse in praise of the Moon, the mythical progenitor of the Kalachuri family. Next is mentioned a prince whose name is lost, but who was clearly Kōkalla I, as he is said to have had eighteen sons. Kaliṅgarāja is next named, but his relation to the sons of Kōkalla is not clearly specified in the preserved portion. Verse 6, which is partly mutilated, mentions Ratnarāja (I) and Prīthvīdēva (I). Then comes a reference in the next verse to the victory over Chōḍagaṅga, the lord of elephants, which was won at that very place (ih=aina), i.e., in the neighbourhood of Shēorinārāyaṇ, by a prince whose name is lost, but who from other records is known to be Ratnadēva II. His son Prīthvīdēva II and the latter's son Jājalladēva II are next mentioned, but their description in the extant portion is merely conventional.

After this introductory account of the ruling family, the inscription turns to a collateral branch of it. We are told that Prīthvīdēva I had a younger brother named Sarvadēva, who obtained as a share of patrimony the property at Sōṇṭhiva where he established himself. The name of his son, whose eulogy is partly preserved, is lost, but as will be shown below, it was probably Āmaṇadēva (I)¹. Then came his son Rājadēva who, again, had four sons Tējalladēva, Ulhaṇadēva, Gōpāla and Vikannadēva. One of these, whose name is unfortunately lost,² is next glorified as very brave and handsome. His wife is then described, but her name also is lost. We are next told that this prince, who was devoted to Siva, realizing the transitoriness of life turned his mind to meritorious works. Verse 23, which follows, seems to speak of a temple where the enshrined deity (probably Siva, to whom the prince was devoted) resided joyfully on obtaining a new abode. The reference here is probably to the temple of Chandrachūḍēśvara, to which the stone bearing this inscription is affixed. We have next the description of a fierce battle with the lord of Chēdi who, to judge from his partially preserved name in l. 16, was Jayasimhadēva of Tripurī. In this fight the afore-described son of Rājadēva routed the army of the lord of Chēdi. Seeing that his army was wholly exterminated, the latter advanced in person, being highly enraged like a serpent trodden under foot. From the subsequent description it appears that the son of Rājadēva lost his life in the fight. His three queens followed him as Satis.

The third section of the inscription, which begins with verse 35, records the benefactions of the princes of this collateral branch. In the town of Sōṇṭhiva, Sarvadēva erected a lofty temple of Samblu, excavated a large tank and raised a garden. In the village of Paṇḍaratalāi, Āmaṇadēva (I) established a charitable feeding house, planted an orchard and dug a tank. In the village of Pathariā, Rājadēva built a temple of Purabhid

¹D. R. Bhandarkar and following him, Hiralal make Rājadēva the son of Sarvadēva, not noticing the loss of nearly one verse at the end of l. 9 which must have described a successor of Sarvadēva. In recording the charitable works of the family, the name of Āmaṇadēva I is inserted between those of Sarvadēva and Rājadēva.

(Siva), raised a mango-grove and excavated a tank. Further, a queen named Rāmbhallā excavated a beautiful tank and grew a mango-grove in the village Pajāñī. We next learn that Ulhaṇadēva¹ had a son named Āmaṇadēva (II) whom the king Jājalladēva (II) loved as his own distinguished son. The record seems to end here abruptly, for the next two verses refer to the writer Kumārapāla and the sculptor Chhītūka. But strange as it might seem, they are followed by four other verses recording further benefactions. It seems, therefore, that these verses (42-45) were at first omitted by oversight and were subsequently added at the end. Of them, the first records the donation of the village Chiñchēli, evidently by Āmaṇadēva (II),² the last named prince of the collateral branch here glorified, for providing materials for the worship of the god Chandrachūḍa. The next two verses express the donor's hope that the gift would continue for ever and would be respected by future rulers. The last verse again records the erection of the temple of Durgā in front of the god (Chandrachūḍa) by Vikannadēva.

If the benefactions in the third section are chronologically recorded, as they seem to be, there were apparently two princes of the name Āmaṇadēva. The first of them whose benefactions are recorded in verse 36 after those of Sarvadēva was probably the latter's successor and, therefore, identical with the prince whose name is lost at the end of l. 8. It may again be conjectured that the prince who built the temple of Chandrachūḍa and whose glorification in as many as 17 verses is the main theme of the present inscription was Ulhaṇadēva. He seems to have died fighting bravely with Jayasimhadēva when the latter invaded the kingdom of Ratanpur and as his queens followed him as Satis, his son Āmaṇadēva (II) became an orphan. He seems, therefore, to have been treated with special affection by Jājalladēva II in grateful recognition of his father's self-sacrifice in his cause. It may be added that Jayasimhadēva was a contemporary of Jājalladēva II, as the former's Jabalpur plates are dated K. 918, i.e., just a year before the date of the present record.

Of the places named in this inscription, Sōṇṭhiva is modern Sōṇṭhi in the Bilaspur talhsil, 11 miles north of Akaltarā. Paṇḍartalāi may be identical with one of the several villages named Pēṇḍri or Paṇḍriā; of them, the one nearest to Shēorinārāyaṇ is Pēṇḍriā, 7 miles to the north-west. Pathariā still retains its name and is situated 6 miles south by east of Mungeli. Vaṇārī is the modern Bānāri near Janjgir. Pajāñī may be Pāchari, 6 miles east of Shēorinārāyaṇ. Finally, Chiñchēli may be identical with Chicholā on the left bank of the Hasdō, about 32 miles north-east of Shēorinārāyaṇ.

² D. R. Bhandarkar and following him, Hiralal take the gift as made by Kumārapāla. But the latter was only a scribe. Besides, the introduction of Āmaṇadēva's name almost at the end of the record would be purposeless unless we suppose that it was he who made the gift of the village Chiñchēli to the god Chandrachūḍa. As shown here, verses 42-45 were probably intended to be inserted after v. 39 which mentions Āmaṇadēva.

Success! Ōm! Adoration to Siva!

(Verse 1) May the rays of the nails of the feet of Srikanṭha (i.e., Siva) increase your well-being!—(the rays) which subject the goddess of fortune (to the devotees of Siva); which are dexterous in dispelling the mass of darkness of worldly existence; which appear resplendent with the lustre of shining jewels in the head of the lord of gods bending down in reverence; (and) which have with ease surpassed the lustre of rubies and are hostile to sin!

(V. 2) May that (Śiva) of eight forms who is [himself] the self of highest bliss, [secure] your happiness!—(he) whose triad of eyes (consists of) the sun and the moon together with fire, in whose breath there is wind, in whose body there is the earth, on whose head there is water, (and) in whose ears there moves ether!

(V. 3) [There is] [the Moon] who is the elixir of an assemblage of night-lotuses, a feast to (the gods) who feed on nectar, who was born of the hollow of the mother-of-pearl of Atri's eye, the crest-jewel of the lord of spirits (i.e., of Śiva), a jar full (of water) at the successful marches of the five-arrowed king (i.e., the god of love)!

(V. 4) In his well-known lineage there was born [Kōkalla] who resembled Haihaya in prowess; from him were born eighteen brave sons of unmeasured prowess, who exterminated the allies of their enemies.

(V. 5) In their [family¹] there was born Kaliṅgarāja

(V. 6) There was (born) here the lord of the earth Ratnarāja (I) of great radiance From him there was born the king Prithvidēva (I) who used his hands in embracing the Fortune of hostile kings (who were) overcome by his great valour.

(V. 7)² [Ratnarāja] (II) who at this very place vanquished Chōḍagaṅga, the lord of elephants.

(V. 8) From him was born [the king] Prithvidēva (II) whose great prowess unfolded itself by the favour of the lord of Bhavāni (i.e., of Śiva)

(V. 9) From him was born the king Jājalladēva (II) resembling the lord of radiance (i.e., the sun), on account of whom the earth felt delighted as does a lotus-plant (at the rise of the sun); being terrified by whose valour, the enemies whose minds were full of apprehension, leaving (their) countries, (resorted to) the forest

(V. 10) which, with the roofs of the rows of mansions in it, caused obstruction in the speed of the sun's chariot.³

(V. 11) Of Prithvidēva, the first king (of that name) who flourished here, there was a younger brother, the illustrious Sarvadēva, as Viṣṇu is of Indra.

(V. 12) incessantly [defeated?] hostile kings in battle.

(V. 13) He obtained Sōṇṭhivapaṭṭikā as part of his heritage. His illustrious [descendants?] occupied the same town containing beautiful temples.

(V. 14) [Seeing his heroic actions?] the best of warriors have their bodies uneven with bristling hair.

(V. 15) He had a son named Rājadēva, whose arm attained, in a great battle, on the cluster of lotuses which were his vanquished enemies.

(Verse 16 is completely lost.)⁴

¹ Compare e.g. verses 4 and 6 of the Amōdā plates of Prithvidēva I.

³ This is probably a description of the capital Ratnapura.

⁴ It must have contained a description of Āmaṇadēva (I) who was probably a son of Rājadēva. It may be noted that in verses 35—36, the benefactions of Āmaṇadēva are placed immediately after those of Sarvadēva.

(V. 17) From him were (born) four sons—Tējalladēva being the first, (then) the illustrious Ulhaṇadēva,¹ Gōpāla and Vikannadēva.

(V. 18) Among them [Ulhaṇadēva]² (who was) brave in the assemblies of the brave, and had a mass of bright fame became enriched with all excellences.

(V. 19) surrounded by elephants resembling those (stationed) in the quarters, multitudes of best horses (and) warriors whose [might of] arms had crushed the conceit of haughty foes

(V. 20) Seeing that his handsome form gave greater delight to deer-eyed (women) than his own, the fish-bannered god (of love) lost his body as if through shame!

(V. 21) Like the goddess of fortune incarnate, like Gauri

(V. 22) Seeing that life on the earth is transitory like the red colour of a twilight, he, who concentrated his mind on the splendour of Sambhu and whose doings were solely enlivened by piety, fixed his thoughts on meritorious deeds.

(V. 23) [Siva] dwells here, delighted to obtain a new habitation.

(V. 24) of him possessed of great lustre, who was thus intensely pious in speech, mind and body and who exceedingly pleased suppliants with heaps of wealth

(V. 25) [On the field of battle] resembling an ocean which had beautiful wave-like rows of horses (and) mountain-like excellent elephants as huge as the elephants of the quarters and which was being filled with thousands of stream-like battalions—

(V. 26) When the illustrious Jaya[simhadēva], the lord of Chēdi

(V. 27) [the field of battle] which was exceedingly dreadful with the splendour of and was a home of joy to crowds of crows, goblins, female jackals and vultures.

(V. 28) Mounted on the elephant Mānasiddhi, he, who wielded in his hand a dreadful bow, routed the army of the King of Chēdi with (his) arrows.

(V. 29) Slaying multitudes of excellent horses with the edge of the sword grasped in his fist together with elephants, (making) the ground strewn with the cut-off heads of the enemies as with the fruits of palm (trees) and killing a host of foot-soldiers, he made the regions (full of) the dancing headless trunks.

(V. 30) Seeing that his forces were thus reduced to corpses, the King of Chēdi himself advanced, being more enraged (than before), like a snake trodden under foot.

(V. 31) 'This death is difficult to avoid; it is not easy for life to depart on the battlefield, while a brave man desiring (in his mind) the highest bliss, is facing (the enemy)'—Thinking so the hero,³ adhering to the warrior's duty, commenced to do that, seeing which the crowd of heavenly damsels felt surprised.

(V. 32) Having observed his prowess which caused surprise to the three worlds, and having remarked his handsome form which defeated the god of love, the wives of gods took him to their homes from (the field of) battle, their minds being attracted by and becoming fond of his excellences.

(V. 33) Three queens, being solcly devoted to (him), their husband, followed him (as Satis) in order to enjoy, as it were in heaven, celestial pleasures in the company of their husband.

(V. 34) When he, the treasure of excellences, started for heaven, beauty vanished, life departed, charity left for (distant) regions, prowess knew no judicious habitation, playful actions stayed far away, merits became religious mendicants—even stones cried and (even) the heart of adamant broke through grief !

(V. 35) At Sōṇṭhivapura Sarvadēva made a cloud-scraping temple of Sambu, also an extensive tank (and) a grove of trees.

(V. 36) At the village of Paṇḍaratalāi, Āmaṇḍēva (I) established a charitable feeding house with offshoots of sacrificial posts, (made) a grove (full) of cuckoos (and) also a tank.

(V. 37) At the village of Pathariā the illustrious Rājadēva constructed a cloud-scraping temple of (Śiva), the Destroyer of Cities, akin to the splendour of kunda flowers and the moon, (raised) a beautiful grove of mango trees with warbling cuckoos, and (excavated) an extensive tank, which, with the humming of female bees hovering on collections of lotuses, renders multitudes of travellers happy.

(V. 38) The queen Rāmbhallā made a lovely lake at a village called Vaṇārī and a grove of mango trees at the village of Pajāṇī.

(V. 39) There was¹ Āmaṇḍēva (II), the son of Ulhaṇḍēva, well-known on the earth, who was looked upon by the king Jājalladēva (II) with the favour (shown) to a distinguished son.

(V. 40) This praśasti (eulogy), beautiful like a woman (who appears) charming with her good qualities, was eagerly composed by Kumārapāla, a descendant of Sahasrārjuna, (who is) the best of Kshatriyas.²

(V. 41) The same intelligent (Kumārapāla) wrote it with pearl-like letters. Chhītūka, who is renowned for his knowledge of mechanical arts, has incised it.

(V. 42) He gave, with reverence, the village Chīñchēlī to the (god) Chandrachūḍa (Śiva) for all materials of worship such as offerings of food, incense and lights.

(V. 43) As long as the daughter of the ocean (i.e., Lakshmi) occupies in joy the breast of (Viṣṇu) who is distinguished by the Kaustubha, the celestial river the head of (Śiva) whose twisted matted hair is adorned with the crescent moon, (and) Vedic recital in sweet accents the row of Brahmā's mouths,—even so long may this faultless meritorious work of his shine !

(V. 44) How many kings have there not been, who enjoyed the whole expanse of the earth ? (This) earth, though immovable, did not remain permanently even in their possession. Hence future rulers of the country, giving up infatuation, should protect this my meritorious work as their own.

(V. 45) The resplendent (and) high temple of Durgā in front of the god (Chandrachūḍa) has been constructed by Vikannadēva for the attainment of the desire of (his) mind.

The Chēdi year 919. May the world be happy !

² Verses 40 and 41 should properly come after verses 42—45. Among the latter also, verse 45 should have been written before verse 43.

No. 99 ; PLATE LXXXI

AMODA PLATES OF JAJALLADEVA II : (KALACHURI) YEAR 91[9]

THIS set of two copper-plates was discovered together with three others¹ while digging for the foundation of a temple in May 1924 at Amōdā, 10 miles south-east of Jānjgir, the head-quarters of a tahsil of the same name in the Bilaspur District of Madhya Pradesh. The record on them has been edited before with lithographs, but without a translation, by Rai Bahadur Dr. Hiralal in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XIX, pp. 209 ff. It is edited here from the original plates which are preserved in the Central Museum, Nagpur.

The plates are substantial, measuring from 12.6" to 12.9" broad and 9.8" high and weighing about 143 tolas. They are inscribed on one side only. Their ends were slightly raised to serve as rims for the protection of the writing. The inscription has, however, suffered considerably by corrosion, and several letters especially in the last six lines have been wholly or partially damaged. Each plate has at the top a hole, .4" in diameter, for the ring which connected it with the other plate of the set, but neither the ring nor the seal, which it may have carried, has been found. There are 37 lines in all, of which 18 are incised on the first plate and the remaining 19 on the second. The size of the letters varies from .4" to .2".

The characters are Nāgarī. Attention may be drawn to the two forms of the initial i in iti, l.9, and iva, l.23, those of dh in dharmmah, l.4 and dhritēr-, l.25 and of r in kairavaiḥ, l.21 and Sagar-ādi-, l.30. The sign of avagraha is employed in some places to indicate the merging of a not only into ē and ō, but also into ā; see, e.g., =tad-amayē- 'bhūḥ-, l.3 and Mahādhanēnā-jamī, l.25. The language is Sanskrit. Except for ōm namō Vrahmaṇē in the beginning and the particulars of the date and the names of the donees at the end, the record is metrically composed throughout. There are 26 complete verses, all of which are numbered. Besides these, there is nearly a quarter of a verse which is left incomplete in line 18. The first eleven verses are copied from the earlier charters of the dynasty such as the two sets of plates of Prithvidēva II, discovered at Amōdā itself. The present inscription is very carelessly written or incised, and abounds in grammatical and orthographical mistakes. As regards orthographical peculiarities, we may notice that the sign for v is used to denote b except in the case of the perfect forms of bhū; see, e.g., babhūvur-, l.6 and babhūva, l.13; but contrast nṛpatir=ivabhūva, l.29; the dental s and the palatal ś have been confused; see e.g., sirō-, l.16 and śasāṁk-, l.20; j is written for y in -jaśāḥ, l.5 and n for ṇ in punya-, ll.25 and 26, pratigrihṇāti, l.31, etc.

The inscription is one of Jājalladēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it is to record the grant, by Jājalladēva, of the village Bundērā to two Brāhmaṇas.

The genealogy of the donor Jājalladēva II is traced from the moon down to his father Prithvidēva II as in the latter's Amōdā plates (two sets). As stated before, the verses in the genealogical portion have been copied from the earlier grants; they, therefore, furnish no additional historical information. Verse 12 which refers to Jājalladēva II is, of course, new, but the description in it is wholly conventional.

The present grant was made by way of thanksgiving after the donor had luckily escaped from a great calamity. Verse 19 states that the king Jājalladēva II was caught by the large alligator Thirū. He escaped with great difficulty, and regaining his kingdom, made the present grant. Rai Bahadur Hiralal who read the name as Dhīrū¹ took the description to be figurative and saw in it a reference to the rebellion of a local aboriginal chief, in which Jājalladēva was reduced to a precarious position.² It is difficult to say how far this is correct; for there is no reference to such a rebellion in any other record of the Kalachuris of Ratanpur³ and the possibility of the king being caught by an alligator of the species locally known as Thīrū is not altogether precluded.

The donees, to whom the present grant was made, were the astrologer Rāghava and the family-priest Nāmadēva. The former was the son of a great astrologer named Dāmōdara, the son of Prithvidhara, and belonged to the [Sāva]ṇa gōtra with the five pravaras Vatsa, Bhārgava, Chyavana, Āpnavana and Aurva. Dāmōdara is described as the best of Sāman-singers, whose feet were worshipped by princes, and seems to be identical with the Paṇḍita Dāmōdara, whose stone image was discovered by Rai Bahadur Hiralal and is now placed in the Lakhaṇēśvara temple at Kharōd near Shēorinārāyaṇ. The other donee Nāmadēva was the son of Parāśara who was himself the son of Mahādhana of the Bhāradvāja gōtra with the three pravaras Bhāradvāja, Āngirasa and Bārhaspatya. The grant was written on the plates by Dharmarāja, the son of Vatsarāja of the Vāstavya family, who owned the village Jaṇḍēra. Vatsarāja, it may be noted, was the writer of the two grants of Prithvidēva II, the father of Jājalladēva II.

The inscription is dated on Friday, the fifth tithi of the dark fortnight of Agraṇa. The year was denoted by three numerical figures, of which the first two are clearly 9 and 1, but the third is almost completely lost by corrosion. Rai Bahadur Hiralal thought that the bottom bend of the damaged figure indicated that it could not but be 2 or 3. Though no era is specified, there is no doubt that the date must be referred to the Kalachuri era. The fifth tithi of the dark fortnight of Āgrahāyaṇa or Mārgaśīrsha did not, however, fall on Friday in either K. 912 or K. 913, while the tithi of the same fortnight fell on Friday in the month of Śrāvaṇa in K. 912. R.B. Hiralal, therefore, conjectured that the writer must have wrongly written Agraṇa for Śrāvaṇa and took the date to be Friday, the fifth tithi of the dark fortnight of Śrāvaṇa in the Kalachuri year 912, the corresponding Christian date being the 14th July 1161 A. C.⁴ My examination of the original plate has convinced me that the third figure is almost completely lost, leaving no clear traces behind. It could have been neither 2 nor 3; for from the Ratanpur inscription of Brahmadēva⁵ we learn that Prithvidēva II, the father of Jājalladēva II, was ruling till K. 915. Jājalladēva II, therefore, could not have been on the throne in either K. 912 or K. 913. We have, of course, to conjecture the third figure of the date from the specification of the tithi and the week-day. As the first two figures are undoubtedly 9 and 1, we have to see in which of the years between K. 915 and K. 919, the fifth tithi of the dark fortnight of Āgrahāyaṇa⁶ fell on a Friday. As Kielhorn has shown, the months of the Kalachuri year were pūrṇimānta. Now, the fifth tithi of the dark fortnight of the pūrṇimānta

² D. R. Bhandarkar, who has adopted Hiralal's readings Dhīrū and yakshēṇa, says that the grant was made apparently for freeing the king from Yaksha Dhīrū with whom he was possessed. See his List of Inscriptions of Northern India, p. 287, No. 2032. The correct readings are, however, Thīrū and keṇichchhṛṇa respectively. See below, p. 532, n. 4.

Āgrahāyana fell on a Friday only in two years during the aforementioned period, viz., in K. 916 (1164 A. C.) when it ended 2 h. 10 m. after mean sunrise, and in K. 919 (1167 A. C.) when it ended 12 h. after mean sunrise. Of these, the first is not likely for Jājalladēva II, as his father Pṛithvidēva II was ruling just in the preceding year. I, therefore, take the year of the present grant to be 919 as more probable. The corresponding Christian date is the 3rd November 1167 A. C.

There are only two place-names mentioned in this inscription. Of them, Bundērā, the donated village, is probably Bundēlā, 11 m. south-west of Amōdā, while Jaṇḍēra has already¹ been shown to be Jōndrā, 14 m. further in the same direction.

the mass of whose fame, the seven oceans rose and the lotuses bloomed, mistaking (it) for the beautiful rise of the moon.

(Vv. 13-4) From the Brāhmaṇa Pṛithivīdhara, who was born in the excellent gōtra of [Sāvārṇa] adorned by the pravaras Vatsa, the excellent Bhārgava, Chyavana, Āpnavana and Aurva, was born Dāmōdara, the store of all excellences, the crest-jewel of astrologers and the source of abundant joy to all persons, whose feet were revered by the lords of the earth; who, with his (power to) curse and favour, always appeared as a second Gōbhila, being the foremost among the chanters of the Sāmavēda. His son, named Rāghava, was born for the delight of poets even as the moon rises for the joy of night-lotuses.

(V. 15) In the gōtra of Bhāradvāja with the triad of the pravaras Bhāradvāja, Āṅgīrasa and Bārhaspatya, there was born a Brāhmaṇa named Mahādhana.

(V. 16) By Mahādhana, possessed of religious merit, was begotten Parāśara whose fame was (bright) like white lotuses and kunda flowers; who was a home of fortitude, an abode of fame, a receptacle of truth and a treasure-house of religious merit.

(V. 17) As the sun rises from the eastern mountain and the moon from the milky ocean, even so was the well-known son named Nāmadēva (born) from Parāśara.

(V. 18) To those two Brāhmaṇas, Jājalladēva (II) of noble nature, who deprived the wives of hostile kings of the parting line of (their) hair, granted with proper rites a village named Bundērā.

(V. 19) 'The king Jājalladēva (II) had his person caught by the huge alligator 'Thirū. Being released with great difficulty, he, regaining his kingdom, donated the village to the Brāhmaṇas on a holy day.

(V. 26) Dharmarāja, the son of the illustrious Vatsarāja (and) the owner of (the village) Jaṇḍēra, who is to the Vāstavya family what the sun is to a cluster of day-lotuses and who is to the crowd of hostile warriors as fire is to fuel, verily wrote (on these plates of) copper here.

NO. 100; PLATE LXXXII

KHAROD STONE INSCRIPTION OF RATNADEVA III : CHEDI YEAR 933

THE stone which bears this inscription is built into the wall on the left-hand side of the maṇḍapa of the temple of Lakṣaṇēśvara (Lakṣmaṇēśvara) at Kharōd, about 2 miles to the north of Shēorinārāyaṇ in the Jānjgir tahsil of the Bilaspur District in Madhya Pradesh. The inscription has been noticed several times. Its date was mentioned first by Mr. Beglar and then by Sir A. Cunningham in the Archaeological Survey of India Reports, Vol. VII, p. 201 and Vol. XVII, p. 43 respectively. The genealogy of the Kalachuri rulers mentioned in it was published by Dr. Kielhorn in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XXII, pp. 82 ff. The contents of the record were briefly noticed by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar in the Progress Report of the Archaeological Survey of Western ¹ The third figure of the date is almost completely damaged. It is conjectured to be 9. See above, pp 529-30.

India for 1903-4, pp. 53 ff. and his account was followed by Rai Bahadur Dr. Hiralal who identified some of the places mentioned in it in his Inscriptions in C. P. and Berar.¹ The record was finally edited with a lithograph, but without a translation, by Dr. N. P. Chakravarti in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XXI, pp. 159 ff. It is edited here from the original stone and from inked estampages taken under my direction.

The inscription contains 28 lines of writing, which cover a space 3' broad and 1' 6" high. The writing has suffered considerably here and there, especially towards the proper left in the first twenty lines. Besides, several letters are so much choked up with dust that they do not show quite clearly in an estampage, though they can be read with certainty on the original stone. The characters are Nāgarī. They resemble closely those of the Mallār stone inscription of K. 919 which, as shown below, was written by the same scribe. The only peculiarity which calls for notice is the sign of the upadhmāṇya which is wrongly employed in puḥpak-, l.23 and puḥpa-rāṭikā-, l.26. The language is Sanskrit. Except for ōṃ namah Śivāya in the beginning and the date at the end, the record is metrically composed throughout. It contains 44 verses, all of which are numbered. One of these (v. 17), which described the reigning king, is repeated from line 13 of the earlier Shēorinārāyaṇ stone inscription,² dated K. 919, where, however, it was employed to glorify a member of a collateral branch of the ruling family, probably Ulhaṇadēva. As regards orthography, we may note that the sibilants are generally used in their proper places, the sign for v is everywhere employed to denote b, and n is written wrongly for ṇ in nirmayē, l.27.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of Ratnadēva III of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it is to record the benefactions of his minister Gaṅgādhara at Kharōd and other places. It is dated in the Chēdi year 933, without any specification of the month, fortnight and tithi. It does not, therefore, admit of verification, but the year, if expired, would correspond to 1181-82 A. C.

The record falls into two parts, the first comprising the first nineteen verses, and the second the remaining twenty-five. After the customary obeisance to Śiva and two invocatory stanzas in praise of the same deity, we get a description of the moon, the mythical ancestor of the Kalachuris. The genealogy of the ruling king Ratnadēva III is then traced from Kōkalla. Down to Jājalladēva II, it is the same as that noticed in his Amōdā plates, but there are some minor differences and references to historical events which deserve special notice. Kaliṅgarāja is here mentioned as a younger son of Kōkalla and not as a descendant, evidently remote, of that son as stated in all earlier records.³ We are again told that he became the lord of Tummāṇa by propitiating Vaṅkēśvara. Jājalladēva I is here said to have defeated Bhujabala, the lord of Suvarṇapura. This achievement of Jājalladēva is also conveyed by double entendre in verse 8 of the Shēorinārāyaṇ plates of Ratnadēva II.⁴ Ratnadēva II's defeat of Chōḍagaṅga, the lord of elephants and the ruler of the Kaliṅga country, is here recorded with the further detail that the conqueror captured his horses, elephants and treasure. Prīthvidēva II's victory over Jaṭēśvara, the son of Chōḍagaṅga, is next mentioned in verse 18. Unfortunately this verse is partially effaced, but my reading of the preserved portion shows that Prīthvidēva II not only defeated Jaṭēśvara, but even made him captive. This decisive victory of Prīthvidēva II is referred to in the Ratanpur inscription of K. 915¹ also, but there the details are lost owing to the flaking away of the surface of the stone.

The present inscription carries the royal genealogy two reigns further than the preceding Amōdā plates of Jājalladēva II. We learn from verse 12 that after the death of Jājalladēva II, the kingdom was plunged into anarchy.² Then his elder brother Jagaddēva hastened from the eastern country and became king. This description shows that Jājalladēva II died suddenly while his brother was fighting in the east. The latter was, therefore, forced to return to his country to quell the disturbances consequent on the ruler's death. It seems plausible, as conjectured by Dr. Chakravarti, that Jājalladēva II who was a younger son of Prithvidēva II, was carrying on the government in the absence of his elder brother who was for a long time engaged in fighting the Eastern Gaṅgas. He does not seem to be a usurper; otherwise he would not have received the praise in verse 11 of the present record which belongs to his nephew's reign. Ratnadēva III was the son of this Jagaddēva by his wife Sōmalladēvī. That Ratnapura continued to be the royal capital is clear from verse 19.

The second part of the present inscription, which begins in verse 20, gives at the outset the pedigree of Gaṅgādhara, the chief minister of Ratnadēva III. His grandfather was Dēvadhara, a Brāhmaṇa of the Kāśyapa gōtra. The latter's son was Rājadēva who married Jīvā. Their son was Gaṅgādhara. Verse 25 tells us that when the kingdom of Ratnadēva (III) was reduced to great straits, the treasury being empty, the elephant-force weakened and the country in the grip of a famine, it was Gaṅgādhara who by his policy restored the peace and prosperity of the country. Being pleased with his learning, character and diplomacy, Ratnadēva made him his chief minister, and overcoming all his foes by his policy, ruled his kingdom peacefully. We are next told that Gaṅgādhara had two wives Rālīhā and Padmā, of whom the former gave birth to two sons Sūprada and Jijāka and the latter to Khaḍgasimha.

Verse 30 begins an enumeration of Gaṅgādhara's benefactions. He reconstructed the maṇḍapa of the temple of Śiva, to which the stone bearing the present inscription is affixed.³ To the south of the temple he erected a maṭha with well-seasoned wood for the residence of ascetics. He also built, evidently at Kharōd, a spacious and beautiful maṇḍapa of Sauri (Viṣṇu). At Ratnapura he erected the maṇḍapa of Ēkavīrā, which resembled a Pushpaka, on the top of a hill in the west.⁴ He built another maṇḍapa in honour of Purārāti (i. e., of Śiva) and temples of Hara and Hēramba at Vaḍada in the forest-tract. He constructed a temple of Durgā at Durga, another of the sun at the town Pahapaka and a lofty shrine of Sambhu at Pōratha. To the north of Ratnapura he built a maṇḍapa for Ṭuntā-Gaṇapati, and had tanks and lotus-ponds excavated at the

⁴ This temple is still standing on the hill to the west of Ratanpur. It is now said to be dedicated to Lakshmī. There is a large and much abraded stone inscription in Prakrit, affixed to a wall of this temple. It has not yet been deciphered.

villages Tipuruga, Girahulī, Uluvā and Sēnāḍu. Besides these, he established a charitable feeding house and raised a flower-garden at Nārāyaṇapura.

The prastāvi was composed and written on the stone by Kumārāpāla¹ of the Haihaya lineage, who was proficient in poetry, metrics, literature and diplomacy, and had a younger brother named Jalhaṇa. It was engraved by Jātū. The Srēṣṭhin Ralhaṇa, who was the officer in charge of religious endowments, supervised the work.

Of the place-names occurring here, Tummāṇa and Ratnapura have already been identified. Suvarṇapura is modern Sonpur, formerly the capital of a feudatory state of the same name in the State of Orissa. Most of the remaining places can be identified in the vicinity of Kharōd. Vāna-Vaḍada or Vaḍada of the forest may be Baludā in the Jānjgir tahsil, 30 m. north by west of Kharōd. Durga may be identical with the chief town of the Drug District. The town Pahapaka is likely to be Putpurā, 16 miles to the north and Pōratha, Perthā 30 miles to the north-east of Kharōd, both in the Jānjgir tahsil. I identify Tipuruga with Tiprunga, 10 miles south of Kharōd, in the former Katgi Zamindari, and Sēnāḍu with Sōnada, 15 miles to the east of Kharōd in the Jānjgir tahsil. Nārāyaṇapura, which lies 20 miles to the south-west of Kharōd, in the Baloda Bazar tahsil of the Raipur District, has a mediaeval temple of Viṣṇu. Girahulī may be identical with Girōlpālī in the Jānjgir tahsil and Uluvā with Ulbā in the Raipur District.

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to Siva !

(Verse 1) May the god (Siva), the destroyer of Daksha's sacrifice, the treasure of the sportive arts of the three worlds, grant (your) well-being !—(he) who, as he proceeded to grasp the hand of the daughter of the mountain (i.e., Gauri), used the light of the lamp which is the beautiful moon (on his head) for observing the face of Gauri, after intercepting the gaze of the (surrounding) people with the cloth, namely, the lustre of his throat !

(V. 2) May the excellent lustre of the throat of the Creator of the three worlds (i.e., Siva) grant you endless good fortune!—(the lustre) which is a companion of¹ the colour of the petals of blooming blue lotuses and is similar to the row of female bees enlivened by the spreading fragrance of the lotus-like face of (Gaurī) the daughter of the mountain!

(V. 3) From Atri's eye there was produced the Moon, whose lustre causes great joy to the ocean, (who is) the elixir of nectar-juice to the night-lotuses, the saucemaker of the gods, the lover of stars, the companion of those who study cupid's work, a mirror for the damsels that are the regions, a swan in the extensive lake of the firmament and an ornament of the three worlds.

(V. 4) In his race there were born the kings (called) Haihayas, of whom Sahasrārjuna, the foremost in the assembly of the valiant,—whose arms bound down the lord of Lāṅkā with his creeper-like bow-string,—attained great fame.

(V. 5) In this family there was born the illustrious king Kōkalla. He had eighteen renowned sons. The youngest of them, the king Kaliṅga, (became) the lord of Tummāṇa by adoring (the god) Vaṅkēśvara. His son was Kamala. From him (was born) the illustrious Ratnarāja (I). From him sprang the king Prithvidēva (I), the crest-jewel of the lords of the earth.

(V. 6) His son was the king Jājalladēva (I), who, by the might of his arms, deprived Bhujabala, the lord of Suvarṇapura, of his power in a hostile encounter.

(V. 7) His son was the king, the illustrious Ratnadēva (II), whose mind delighted in policy, whose feet were vigilant in moving among the rows of the crest-jewels of kings; (who was) the foremost of great warriors, the mass of whose fame was increased by (its contact with) the mass of radiance of the moon-like faces of the Vidyādhari resting in the recesses of the caves of Lōkālōka, the lord of mountains.

(V. 8) He² in battle deprived the king Chōḍagaṅga, the ruler of the Kaliṅga country, the lord of elephants (and) the father of Jaṭēśvara, of his gold, horses and elephants.

(V. 9) From him was (born) Prithvidēva (II), by the mass of the radiance of jewels shining in the hair of whose head, the two lotus-like feet of the lord of Umā were reddened. Being vanquished by him with the prowess of his arms, the king Jaṭēśvara was laid low on the ground . . . among the prisoners dwelling in his jail.

(V. 10) Need we praise that marvellous hermit of fame, dwelling in the monastery of the three worlds, of that king who by his charity equalled the elephants, the stream of whose rutting juice breaks through their frontal globes? Before the umbrella caused by the scattered particles of his³ ashes, the moon, the milky ocean, the Himālaya mountain, kunda (flowers), night-lotuses, celestial garlands . . . [pale into insignificance!]

(V. 11) From him there was born Jājalladēva (II), who was to the people like (their own) father; (and) the multitude of whose merits the lords of the earth praise incessantly.

(V. 12) Thereafter, when the king Jājalladēva (II), the moon to the Kalachuri family, attained, through accursed fate, union with Brahman, this wide world became enveloped in darkness on all sides, the people being distressed through loss of (their) discernment on account of the Kali age.

³ I.e., of the hermit, namely, his fame. A hermit smears his body with ashes.

(V. 13) Then his elder brother Jagaddēva of marvellous prowess, joining hastily from the eastern country, became the lord of the kingdom.

(V. 14) While that king, who delighted in valour, sport and charity, was governing the kingdom, the thieves . . . disappeared, obstacles (vanished), dangers departed, the enemies took shelter in the corners of mountain-caves, (and) the people roaming in dense forests had no fear even from a tiger.

(V. 15) As Lakshmī was of the enemy of Mura (i.e., of Vishṇu), as Rati was of the flowery-bowed (god of love), even so Sōmalladēvi, honoured for excellences, was [a dear wife] of (that) king.

(V. 16) From them was born a son (named) Ratnadēva (III), a great warrior, whose fame is sung by the wives of gods, the beautiful tendrils of whose fame are sporting in the cavities of the regions on the earth; who by his charities has humbled the celestial tree, and who is extremely dear to the fortune of hostile kings impetuous in fighting.

(V. 17) Seeing that his beautiful form gave more delight to the eyes of deer-eyed ladies than his own, the crocodile-bannered (god of love) became bodiless, as if through shame.

(V. 18) On the stage of his tongue dances vigorously the goddess of learning, exciting wonder by the marvellous use of Sanskrit and other words.¹

(V. 19) The capital of that king was the very beautiful city of Ratnapura, resembling the city of Indra.

(V. 20) In the gōtra named Kāśyapa there was Dēvadhara, a treasury of arts on the earth. As Hari was foremost in the act of lifting up the earth, even so was he in (succouring) (men) sunk in adversity.

(V. 21) He had a son named the illustrious Rājadēva, the ocean of [pleasing speech], extremely proficient in the Sāstras and in (the use of) multitudes of weapons. None has attained here resemblance to him.

(V. 22) He, who was well-conducted, had a beloved wife named Jīvā of virtuous character, the foremost of chaste women and the best means of attaining unblemished success.

(V. 23) From them was born Gaṅgādhara of wonderful intelligence, who has a multitude of excellences as the ocean has jewels, (and who is) the sole kinsman of the good; for blessed (as he is), he has never had, even for a moment, a passion other than benevolence.

(V. 24) Having come to know that his mind has already been occupied by religious merit, character, compassion, calmness, charity . . . (and other) adorable excellences, avarice, greed and other (vices) have dwelt away from him.

(V. 25) When the treasure was exhausted, the elephant force became weak, the people were scattered, the country was infested by famine and reduced to a pitiable state, he, by the might of his policy, rendered the kingdom of his lord, the illustrious Ratnadēva (III)—though it had been involved in great calamities—complete with its seven constituents.²

(V. 26) Having seen his courage, liberality, discernment, valour, fame, good nature, (proficiency in) the Sāstras and also his unique (practice of) Chāṇakya's science³ marked

³ I.e., the science of politics.

as it is by pure conduct, the illustrious Ratnadēva (III), with his mind extremely pleased, appointed him, who is foremost in all his actions, to the post of the Prime Minister.

(V. 27) Having vanquished multitudes of his foes everywhere by his (i.e., Gaṅgādhara's) policy the illustrious king Ratnadēva (III) has freed the kingdom from all troublesome persons.

(V. 28) He had two wives Rālhā and Padmā wholly devoted (to him), who purified both their families by their virtuous conduct.

(V. 29) One (of them) gave birth to two excellent sons Sūprada and Jijāka, and the other brought forth Khaḍgasimha who was like the lion in valour.

(V. 30) Having realized that the loveliness of youth is worthless and extremely transitory like a mass (of the flashes) of lightning, so also fortune and also the love of ladies whose eyes resemble those of a frightened deer, he, who is by nature well-intentioned, has constructed this new maṇḍapa of (Śiva) the Lord of creatures, since his knowledge, which was (previously) dormant, has been awakened by meritorious deeds

(V. 31) At this very place, to the south of the temple, the wise one has constructed a monastery with heaps of well-seasoned wood for the habitation of ascetics.

(V. 32) An extensive maṇḍapa of Sauri, (which is), as it were, a very beautiful ornament of the earth, was caused to be built by the meritorious Gaṅgādhara.

(V. 33) In the famous Ratnapura, he built a beautiful maṇḍapa of Ēkavīrā, resembling a Pushpaka,¹ on the top of a hill in the west.

(V. 34) (He) built a maṇḍapa of Śiva at Vaḍada in the forest tract. At the same place he constructed two shining temples of Hara and Hēramba.

(V. 35) He caused to be erected a temple of the goddess Durgā at Durga and (another) of the sun at the town of Pahapaka and a cloud-scraping temple of Sambhu at Pōratha.

(V. 36) In the northern direction of Ratnapura he constructed a maṇḍapa of Ṭūṇṭā-Gaṇapati, who grants all the desired objects and destroys obstacles.

(V. 37) He excavated a tank with blooming lotuses in the village Tipuruga and a large lotus-pool in the village Girahulī.

(V. 38) At the village Uluvā he made a large tank, (circular) like a wheel, clean and lovely with lotuses, which is ever resorted to by the (living) world and removes (the oppression of) heat (and so) resembles Hari who shines with a discus, is blameless and charming with a lotus (which he carries in his hand), who is adored by the world and frees it from oppression.²

(V. 39) He excavated at the village called Sēṇāḍu a very large lotus-pool, the blooming lotuses in which are kissed by swarms of lovely humming bees.

(V. 40) At Nārayaṇapura he established a charitable feeding house for all, furnished with savoury food and drink, and also a beautiful flower-garden.

(V. 41) As long as the mind-born (god of love) abides in the corner of the lotus-like eyes of graceful women, as long as the ocean has wreaths of rolling waves (caused) by the wind (set in motion) by (the flapping of) the wings of the Maināka mountain, as long as the moon and the sun shine with their lustre in the vault of the sky—even so long may the fame of Gaṅgādhara, the treasure of excellent merits, endure!

² There is a play on several words here, in consequence of which the tank and Hari, i. e., (Vishṇu) are described in identical expressions.

(V. 42) The wise Kumārāpāla has composed this prastāvi with joy—(he) who is clever in interpreting marks (on the body?), who is the resting place of the very essence of poetic art, whose intellect shines by (the study of) metrics, who has a wonderful understanding of literature and politics, who is well-known as an eminent poet born in the Haihaya family and whose younger brother is Jalhaṇa.

(V. 43) He himself, eagerly, wrote it in beautiful letters resembling pearls. It was incised by (the artisan) named Jātū who is distinguished for his knowledge of sculpture.

(V. 44) It has been put up here by the Srēṣṭhin Ralhaṇa who is in charge of religious endowments and whose intelligence is praised by the people conversant with a number of arts.

The Chēdi year 933. May there be bliss!

NO. 101 ; PLATE LXXXIII

PENDRABANDH PLATES OF PRATAPAMALLA: (KALACHURI) YEAR 965

THESE plates were discovered in 1934 by Pandit Lochan Prasad Pandeya, Hon. Secretary of the Mahākōśala Historical Society. They were found in the possession of Thakur Gokul Singh, Malguzar of Pēṇḍrābandh, a village (lat. 20° 39' N., long. 82° 57' E.) in the Balōdā Bazār tahsil of the Raipur District in the Chhattisgarh Division of Madhya Pradesh. The inscription was edited by me for the first time in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XXIII, pp. 1 ff. It is edited here from the original plates and ink-impressions which I owe to the kindness of the Government Epigraphist for India.

The record is on two massive copper-plates measuring from 11½" to 12" broad and from 7½" to 8" high. They are about .1" in thickness. The first plate weighs 155 tolas and the second 133 tolas. At the centre of the top of each plate there is a hole, ½" in diameter for the ring which originally held the plates together. This ring, which is also of copper, is circular in shape and about 4" in diameter, with the central portion flattened to form a round seal 2.6" in diameter. About one-third portion of the ring was broken off when the plates first reached me. They were, therefore, not held together by it, but there is no reason to doubt that it actually belongs to them. The weight of the broken ring and the seal is 16 tolas. The edges of the plates have been neither fashioned thicker, nor raised into rims. Still the inscription is very well-preserved and there is no uncertainty about its reading. The plates are inscribed on the inner side only. There are thirty-five lines in all, 17 being inscribed on the first plate and the remaining 18 on the second. The average size of the letters is .3" except in the last two lines, where, for want of sufficient space, it is reduced to .2". On the seal is inscribed in the centre a crudely executed figure of Lakshmi, seated cross-legged on a lotus-seat, flanked on either side by an elephant, with a jar in his uplifted trunk to pour water on the head of the goddess. In the lower part of it there is the legend Rāja-srīmat-Prātāpamalladēvaḥ in a horizontal line, and below it appears a sheathed sword lying parallel to it.

The characters are Nāgarī. The letters are deeply cut, but not well-formed. The form of the initial i in ishṭa-, 1.32, shows its upper part developed as in the modern Nāgarī alphabet. The left limb of dh also is fully developed. In writing conjunct letters the engraver has not distinguished between p and y, and also between l and n; in some cases, again, he has incised p for m; see tasya, 1.6, -Gōkarṇṇau, 1.12 and nirmpita- (for nirṃmita-), 1.9. The sign of avagraha in 1.2 differs from that in 1.26. A superfluous syllable is scored off by two vertical strokes at the top; see nṛi in 1.32. The visarga, which was omitted after khamidana in l.14, is written immediately below the line. In two other cases the omission is indicated by a kākapada, the position and the form of which indicate whether the addenda are given at the top or at the bottom of the plate. A figure following the addendum indicates the line where the omitted syllable or word is to be supplied.¹ Thus smṛitta and ga which were omitted in ll.11 and 14 are supplied with the figures 11 and 14 respectively at the bottom of the first plate. Similarly nē which was omitted in the second line of the second plate is incised with the figure 2 at the top of the plate.

The language is Sanskrit. Except for ōṃ Vrahmaṇē namaḥ in the first line and the particulars of the date and the place of issue in the last, the record is metrically composed throughout. The verses, of which there are twenty-nine, are all numbered, except the last one. In the genealogical portion, only five of the verses² are taken from the old draft, the others appearing here for the first time. As regards orthography, we may note that v is generally written for b and the dental and palatal sibilants are confused, as in ṛrahmaṇē and Sivam in l.1 and āsīd-āsīma-, l.16; and y is used for j in Vāyapēya-, l.31.

The inscription is one of the king Pratāpamalla who belonged to the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it is to record the grant, by Pratāpamalla, of a certain village to a Brāhmaṇa on the occasion of a saṅkrānti. The record was written by Pratirāja who was born in a Gauḍa family and was the light (i.e., the chief) of the Srī-karāṇa or Record Office.

The genealogy of the king down to Prithvidēva II is given here as in the latter's Amōdā plates,³ with the omission, obviously inadvertent, of one complete verse about Kamalarāja, the son of Kalīṅgarāja. About Ratnadēva II, the father of Prithvidēva II, the present record gives the important information that he defeated Chōḍagaṅga and Gōkarṇa in battle. Several other records of this dynasty,⁴ no doubt, mention Ratnadēva II's defeat of Chōḍagaṅga, but that he was accompanied by an ally named Gōkarṇa is known from this inscription only.

After Prithvidēva II, the present inscription mentions his son Jagaddēva, omitting the name of his brother Jājalladēva II, probably because he was a collateral.⁵ Jagaddēva was succeeded by his son Ratnadēva III, whose son Pratāpamalla made the present grant. From the description given here that though a boy he was a second Bali in strength, it appears that Pratāpamalla came to the throne while quite young. He is evidently identical with the homonymous prince whose round or hexagonal copper coins are found in large numbers in Chhattisgarh. It is noteworthy that like the seal of the present plates these coins also bear the figure of a sheathed sword on the reverse.

Verses 15-18 give the genealogy and description of the donee and state the occasion of the grant. There was a Brāhmaṇa named Suvarṇakara of the Pārāśara gōtra and three pravaras, viṣṇu, Vasishṭha, Śakti and Pārāśara. His son was Divākara who was proficient in the Vēdas. From him was born Sādhāra, whose son Satyasādhāra⁶ was honoured by

⁶ It appears better to regard Satyasādhāra as the son of Sādhāra than to identify the two as I did before; see Ep. Ind., Vol. XXIII, p. 8, n. 1 the Kalachuris. To Sātyasādhāra Pratāpamalla gave a village named Kāyathā, situated in the Anargha-maṇḍala on the occasion of the Makara-saṅkrānti. The last line states that the plates were issued from the victorious camp at Palasadā on Tuesday, the 10th day of the bright fortnight of Māgha in the year 965 of an unspecified era. The tithi and the year are expressed in decimal figures only.

The date of this grant must evidently be referred to the Kalachuri era, but the details do not work out regularly. The tenth tithi of the bright fortnight of Māgha in the expired Kalachuri year 965 fell on Thursday (the 23rd January 1214 A. C.) and not on Tuesday. The same tithi in the current Kalachuri year 965 fell on Saturday (the 2nd February 1213 A. C.). In neither case was it connected with a Tuesday. The discrepancy can, however, be accounted for as follows. Though the grant was made on the day of the Makara-saṅkrānti, the plates were actually issued a few days later as in the case of the Kāvī plate¹ of Jayabhata IV. The Makara-saṅkrānti in the expired Kalachuri year 965 fell on Wednesday, the eleventh tithi of the bright fortnight of Pausha (the 25th December 1213 A. C.). The plates were, however, actually incised about a fortnight after, on the tenth tithi of the dark half of Māgha which (if the month was pūrṇimānta) fell on a Tuesday. The writer seems to have, by mistake, written su di for va di. The corresponding Christian date is, therefore, Tuesday, the 7th January 1214 A.C.

As for the localities mentioned here, the maṇḍala of Anargha, as stated before,² roughly corresponds to the modern Jānjgir tahsil of the Bilaspur District. The village Kāyathā is still extant in the form Kaitā, about 15 miles almost due west of Pēṇḍrābandh, and about 3 miles beyond the southern limit of the Jānjgir tahsil. As for Palasadā there are several villages named Parsadā or Parsadi in the Balōdā Bazar tahsil, but the village where Pratāpamalla's camp was pitched may be Parsodi about a mile to the north of Kaitā.

² The vowel of नू is lengthened for the sake of the metre. Many other records of the Kalachuris of Ratanpur (e.g., No. 76, l. 10; No. 89, l. 7, above) read अनूजस्य which seems to be better, since such a word is required to be connected with अन्वये.

TRANSLATION

Om! Adoration to Brahman!

(For a translation of vv. 1—2, see p. 428.)

(Verse 3) From him (i. e., Kārtavīrya) who surpassed the fame of Indra, were born on the earth many Haihayas, endowed with all excellences, who were lions to the elephants that were hostile kings and wish-fulfilling trees to suppliants. The kings, who were (born) in their family, became famous as Kalachuris in the Chēdi country. (In their family) was born the king Kōkalladēva, who was a comet to the families of his enemies.⁵

(For a translation of v. 4, see that of v. 5 on p. 428.)

(V. 5) In (that) family was born their younger brother, Kaliṅgarāja who exterminated hostile kings by the fire of his valour and who was the full moon to the day-lotuses which were the faces of the beloveds of the mighty warriors of (his) wicked enemies.

(V. 6) Thereafter he⁶ begot Ratnarāja (I), whose face was like the moon, and who acquired a mass of religious merit by obliging the whole world; (and) who, destroying (his) enemies by the valour of the pair of his arms, spread his fame in the three worlds.

(V. 7) From him (i. e., Ratnarāja I) was born the king Prīthvīdēva (I), whose prowess was like that of a tiger, (and) in the mirrors of whose nails was reflected a host of princes who bowed to him.

(V. 8) Then that illustrious king's son was Jājalladēva (I) who, like the moon, was possessed of radiant complexion and majesty, (but) had no spots; who was a repository of good arts (as the moon is of digits); who was endowed with an inestimable form (and) was virtuous (as the moon has a well-rounded form); (and) who possessed all qualities and was an abode of all merits.

(V. 9) From him was born Ratnadēva (II) of incomparable valour, who, in battle, turned back Chōḍagaṅga and Gōkarṇa.

(V. 10) Then was born to that king a son named Prīthvīdēva (II), whose power extended to the bounds of the orb of the earth; who whitened the world with his lovely glory, as with a mass of snow; who devoted himself to the extermination of his wrathful foes in battle, as a lion does (in the case of) infuriated elephants; (and) who was a destroyer of demons (i. e., wicked people).

³ This akṣhara and the daṇḍas after कटके are superfluous.

⁴ Read —वासितविजय—.

⁵ I. e., he caused their destruction.

⁶ As the text stands, Ratnarāja I appears to be a son of Kaliṅgarāja. But from several other records we know that Kaliṅgarāja's son was Kamalarāja who was the father of Ratnarāja I.

(V. 11) From him was born the king Jagaddēva, who possessed the prowess of a tiger and who destroyed the itch of fighting of all powerful kings.

(V. 12) His son was the illustrious king Ratnarāja (III), of wonderful fame, who was an excellent ornament of all Kalachuri kings; who filled the universe with the mass of his fame resembling a heap of blooming jasmine flowers; who destroyed all the hosts of hostile kings by the play of his massive arms, which were the masters of the orb of the earth to the (extreme) boundaries.

(V. 13) Then was born his son the illustrious king Pratāpa, who has cleansed the circle of regions with the rolling waves of the ocean of (his) fame; who has surpassed the god of love by his (lovely) form; who is the sage (Agastya) in drying up the ocean of (hostile) kings; who is the crest-jewel of kings and at all times the philosopher's stone to poor people, panegyrists, Brāhmaṇas and multitudes of meritorious persons.

(V. 14) Pratāpamalla, (who is) of great intellect, the lord of the earth (and) the pre-eminent warrior of the world, who, though a boy, is a second Bali in strength, has made, by his arms, this wide earth (look) small.

(V. 15) 'There was a Brāhmaṇa named Suvarṇakara in the Pārāśara gōtra with the three pravaras, Vasistha, Sakti and Pārāśara.

(V. 16) He begot Divākara, who was like the sun in this world and who, knowing the essence of the Vēdas, dispelled the darkness of ignorance on the earth.

(V. 17) From him was born a meritorious (son), who became well-known by the name of Sādhāra, who was (reckoned as) the (most) meritorious among assemblages of meritorious persons (and as) beneficent among those who made gifts out of compassion for suppliants (and) who in form appeared like the mind-born (god of love) to the minds of ladies.

(V. 18) There is his son named Satyasādhāra, the foremost among all people, who is famed for religious merit, who, has caused the purification of the people, whose intellect is proficient in Nyāya and who, being possessed of the whole multitude of merits has become venerable to the Kalachuri family.

(V. 19) To him Pratāpamalla gave, with a solemn declaration on the Makara-saṅkrānti, a village (named) Kāyaṭhā (situated) in the Anargha-maṇḍala.

(Here follow nine benedictive and imprecatory verses.)

(V. 20) This ocean of learning named Pratirāja of the Gauḍa family, the light (i. e., Chief) of Srī-karaṇa (Record Office), who entertains pure thoughts and is famous among all people, has written on (these) copper (plates) with clear letters.

BILAIGARH PLATES OF PRATAPAMALLA: (KALACHURI) YEAR 969

THESE plates were discovered by a farmer named Ramnath some time in 1939 while he was cultivating a field at the village Pawni, 3 miles north by west from Bilaigarh, the chief town of the former Bilaigarh Zamindari in the Raipur District. They were sent to the Zamindar of Bilaigarh. He very kindly presented them to the Central Museum, Nagpur, where they are deposited now. They are edited here from excellent ink impressions kindly supplied by the Government Epigraphist for India.

They are two copper-plates, measuring 10½" broad and 7" high. They are about .1" in thickness and weigh 121 tolas. Their ends have not been raised into rims; still the record on them is in an excellent state of preservation. At the centre of the top of each plate there is a hole, .6" in diameter, for the ring which must have held the two plates together, but no ring or seal has yet been discovered. The plates are inscribed on the inner side only. The record consists of 38 lines, of which 16 are inscribed on the first, and the remaining 22 on the second plate. The average size of the letters is .2".

The characters are Nāgarī. The letters are deeply cut and somewhat better formed than those of the Pēṇḍrābandh plates¹ though, as shown below, the writer of both the records was the same. In other respects, they present the same peculiarities as those of the Pēṇḍrābandh plates. In line 2, a superfluous stroke has been scored off, while in line 5 two aksharas have been shown to be redundant by incising two vertical strokes at their top.

The language is Sanskrit. Except for ōṃi Vrahmaṇē namaḥ in the first line and the date in the last, the whole record is metrically composed. The verses number 30, all of which except v. 16 are numbered. Consequently, the numbers of verses from 17 onwards are less by one. In the genealogical portion all the verses are copied from earlier records like the Pēṇḍrābandh plates. The orthography shows the usual peculiarities of the use of v for b (e.g., in Vrahmaṇē, l. 1), s for ś and vice versa (e.g., in śivam, l. 1 and śakala-, l. 24) as well as the confusion of y and j (e.g., in yātō- for jātō-, l. 7 and jasas- for yaśas-, l. 9).

The inscription is one of the king Pratāpamalla of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. As all the verses in the genealogical portion have occurred before in the Pēṇḍrābandh plates, the present inscription does not add to our historical knowledge.² The object of it is to record the grant, by Pratāpamalla, of the village Siralā to the Brāhmaṇa Haridāsa of the Sāṅkṛita *gōtra*³ on the occasion of a lunar eclipse which took place on the full-moon day of Āshāḍha. No year is mentioned in connection with the eclipse, but it was probably identical with Samvat 969, recorded at the end of the last line. Verse 20 eulogises the Saiva Āchārya Īśānaśiva, but for what purpose it is not clear. The inscription was written by Pratirāja of the Gauḍa family who had also written the earlier Pēṇḍrābandh plates.⁴

The date of the grant must plainly be referred to the Kalachuri era. According to the epoch of 247-48 A. C., the paurṇimā of Āshāḍha in the expired year 969 ended 18 h. 15 m. after mean sunrise on the 24th June 1218 A. C., on which day there was a lunar eclipse as stated in the grant.

There is only one place, viz., the village Siralā, mentioned in this grant. No place-name corresponding to it can be traced in the vicinity of Bilaigarh. Its site seems to be occupied now by the village Pawni where the plates were found underground. This village lies only about two miles to the south of Kaiṭā which was granted by the same king by his Pēṇḍrābandh plates.

² The verse descriptive of Kamalarāja is omitted in this inscription as in No. 101.

TRANSLATION

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to Brahman !

(For a translation of vv. 1-14, see above, pp. 548-49.)

(Verses 15-16) In the Sāṅkṛita gōtra connected with the pravaras named Sāṅkṛita, Āṅgīrasa and Bārhaspatya,¹ there was a learned Brāhmaṇa named Bhṛigu, well-versed in the Vēdas, conversant with the Purāṇas, Smṛitis and Sāstras, devoted to the path of (virtuous) conduct, of agreeable speech and esteemed by good persons.

(V. 17) From him was born, like the moon from the milk-ocean, (his) son Divōdāsa, clever in discerning all excellences, who, being always a (good) councillor, constantly showed great compassion to Brāhmaṇas,² and with his fame shining in the world, had his feet touched by all kings.

(V. 18) His son is Haridāsa of excellent intelligence, (who is) venerable, foremost among good persons, solely devoted to the virtuous path, an abode of right judgment, a crest-jewel among Brāhmaṇas, constantly engaged in the interpretation of the Sāstras, (the study of) the Vēdas and (the practice of) religious conduct, (and is) always solely intent on piety; whose appearance is pleasing to the people; (and) who has a keen intellect and has attained a respectable position.

(V. 19) To him the king Pratāpadēva gave, with a solemn declaration, the village Siralā on (the occasion of) a lunar eclipse on the full-moon day of Āshāḍha.

(V. 20) There is, Oh ! Īśānaśiva, a crest-jewel of Saiva Āchāryas, the unique philosopher's stone for charity in the Kali age, a bee on the lotuses which are the feet of Māṇikyēśvara,³ a wise man, being foremost for his right judgment; who is the sun for dispelling the pitchy darkness, namely, nescience, and is indeed a mine of excellences, an abode of discernment and a crest-jewel among learned people.

(V. 30) The devoted Pratirāja, who entertains pure thoughts, who is intent on doing good to others, who comes of a good family and is rightly known by excellences befitting his Gauḍa race, has written on (these) copper (plates) in clear letters on account of his natural devotion to the feet of the twice-born.

Nos. 103-4; PLATE LXXXV

RATANPUR STONE INSCRIPTIONS OF VAHARA: (VIKRAMA) YEAR 1552.

THESE inscriptions (called here A and B) have been mentioned several times. One of them (B) was first brought to notice by Sir R. Jenkins in the Asiatic Researches, Vol. XV, p. 505. Both of them were subsequently noticed by Mr. Beglar,⁴ Dr. D.R. Bhandarkar⁵ and R.B. Hiralal.⁶ They are edited here for the first time from the original stones which I examined in situ in 1935.

⁴ C. A. S. I. R., Vol. VII, p. 216.

⁶ I. C. P. B., first ed., p. 114; second ed., p. 116.

The inscriptions are incised on two stones built into the front wall of the sanctum—A on the left and B on the right side of the door-way—in the temple of Mahāmāyā at Ratapur in the Bilaspur District of Madhya Pradesh. A contains five, and B, eleven lines. The former covers a space measuring 1' broad by 3½" high and the latter, a space measuring 11¼" broad by 6½" high. The characters of both are Nāgarī and the language, barbarous Sanskrit. There are several mistakes of orthography and grammar in both the records, but especially in B. Both the records are metrically composed. A contains 3 and B, 8 verses. The only orthographical peculiarities worth noticing here are that kshy is used for khy in vikshyātā in l. 2, j for y in jantra-vidyā in l. 4 and sh for kh in alashadāsa (for lākhadāsa) in l. 10, all in B.

The first inscription (A) refers itself to the reign of Vāharēndra or king Vāhara. That he belonged to the Haihaya dynasty is clear from inscription No. 105, below. It compares Ratnapura to the city of Indra (i.e., Amarāvati in heaven) and states that the king Vāharēndra, who stayed there, had a force of a thousand horses and sixty elephants, evidently stationed at Ratnapura. It next mentions Gōvinda, the Mayor of Ratnapura, who was Vāharēndra's (trusted) servant in all affairs.

The second inscription (B) opens with a salutation to Viśvakarman, the architect of gods. It then lavishes fulsome praise on the Sūtradhāra Chhītaku of the Kōkāsa family. His father Manmatha and brother Māṇḍana are also mentioned. All of them find mention in the Kosgain stone inscription of Vāhara.¹

Both the inscriptions are thus of the same period. The first is undated, but the second gives the year 1552 without further particulars. This must, of course, be referred to the Vikrama era and corresponds to 1495-96 A.C. In the absence of the necessary details, the date does not admit of verification.

No. 105 ; PLATE LXXXVI

KOSGAIN STONE INSCRIPTION (No. 1) OF VAHARA.

THIS inscription was first brought to notice by Mr. Beglar in Sir A. Cunningham's Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. VII, p. 214. It was subsequently noticed very briefly in Mr. Nelson's Bilaspur District Gazetteer, p. 37 and later on in R.B. Hiralal's Inscriptions in the Central Provinces and Berar.¹ It is edited here for the first time from the original stone which is preserved in the Central Museum, Nagpur.

The inscription is engraved on one side of a slab of reddish sand-stone which was originally found in the fort of Kosgain,² 4 miles to the north-east of Chhuri, the chief town of the former Chhuri Zamindārī in the Bilaspur District of Madhya Pradesh. The same stone contains another record, incised on the other side, which also belongs to the reign of Vāhara.³

³ No. 106, below.

The present inscription, which contains twenty lines, covers a space measuring 2' 7" broad and 1' 4½" high. It has suffered a good deal owing to the effects of weather, especially in the middle of lines 9-14 where several aksharas have become illegible. Besides, a large crack has cut the stone vertically on the proper right, damaging from two to four aksharas in each line except the last four, in each of which, owing to the breaking away of a large piece, as many as eight or nine aksharas have been destroyed. Fortunately, not much of historical importance has been lost. The characters are Nāgarī and the language, Sanskrit. Except for siddhiḥ śrī-Gaṇēśāya namaḥ in the beginning and the names of sculptors at the end, the whole record is metrically composed. The verses, all of which are numbered, total 23. The orthography does not call for any remark except that b is everywhere denoted by the sign for v.

The inscription is one of the king Vāhara who belonged to the Haihaya (i.e., Kalachuri) Dynasty of Ratanpur. The object of it seems to be to record the king's victory over some Paṭhāṇas.

After the customary obeisance to Gaṇēśa, the record opens with three invocatory verses in honour of Lambōdara (Gaṇēśa), Siva and Durgā. It then describes the Moon, the mythical progenitor of the Haihaya (or Kalachuri) family. The first historical prince, named after the legendary kings Haihaya¹ and Kārtavīrya, is Singhana. The name of his son, which is partly damaged, seems to have been Ḍaṅghīra. His son was Madanabrahman, from whom was born Rāmchandra. The latter's son was Ratnasēna,² whose son, apparently from his wife Guṇḍāyī, was Vāharēndra. We are next told that when Vāharēndra marched with his army, the Paṭhāṇas used to run away in apprehension to the river Sōṇa, while others, giving up their kingdoms, wealth and life, took shelter in the fortress of heaven. From Ratnapura, the king used to bring to his capital wild elephants and give them away together with gold to his suppliants. He used to make gifts of cows and burn a hundred thousand lights in honour of the goddess Durgā³ in the month of Kārttika. He stored abundant wealth and provisions in the fortress of Kōsaṅga, from which he used to sally forth in search of enemies.

The inscription next describes, in verses 16-17, the king's councillor Mādhava, who defeated certain enemies whose names are illegible, and wrested away their fortune. He is also said to have vanquished the Paṭhāṇas and annexed their territory, carrying away a large booty of gold and other (precious) metals, horses and elephants, as well as cows and buffaloes. Vāharēndra's family-priest was Dēvadatta Tripāthī, who used to advise him rightly in accordance with the śāstras and the science of politics. We are next told that the king once gave a huge elephant to a learned man named Nāganātha, who had hailed from Karṇāṭa, for composing a praśasti of Durgā. The present record, which is also called a praśasti, was composed by Nāganātha and written by Rāmadāsa, the son of Mōhana. Next is mentioned a Kāyastha named Jagannātha, a trusted servant of Vāharēndra. Finally, the record states that the artisan (Sūtradhāra) Manmatha, had two sons Chhītaku and Māṇḍana, of whom the latter incised the present praśasti.

The inscription is not dated,¹ but from the other inscription on the same stone,² which belongs to the same reign and is dated in the Vikrama year 1570, as well as from the Ratanpur inscription³ dated in the Vikrama year 1552, which mentions the artisans Chhītaku and Māṇḍana, it is clear that Vāharēndra flourished at the end of the fifteenth and in the beginning of the sixteenth century A.C.

There are only two places mentioned in the present record. Of them, Ratnapura, already identified, was for a long time the capital of the Kalachuris in Chhattisgarh, though at the time of the present prastāvi the seat of the government seems to have been shifted to the fort of Kosgain in the hilly tract to the north-east, probably on account of Muslim invasions. Kōsaṅga is evidently the fort of Kosgain in the former Chhuri Zamindārī, where the inscribed stone was originally discovered.⁴

Success ! Adoration to holy Gaṇēśa !

(Verse 1) While (Gaṇēśa) was sporting on the pleasure-mountain, namely, the mountain-like breast of Pārvatī, the ocean, together with its family, became an ornament in the box which was his trunk. The whole spot on (his) expansive frontal globe became, lo ! free from dust !⁸ May the pot-bellied (Gaṇēśa), who, a child as he is, follows his own inclination, protect you !

(V. 2) May that great god, the holy half-moon-crested (Siva), protect us !—(he) who, at the time of (Pārvatī's) embrace, showed that his eyes had a plunge into the ocean of joy ; who, through love, was looked at timidly and smilingly by the newly-wedded goddess (Pārvatī) ; (and) to whom she is the highest deity who favours her devotee !

(V. 3) May that Durgā for a long time, save the world from harm !—(she), who, being beneficial to the three worlds, was pleased by continuous excellent worship, (offerings of) groups of beasts increasing (in number daily) by one, various (kinds) of food and fruits day after day during (the period of) nine nights⁹ and at once favoured the king Vāhara !

(V. 4) From the churning of the milky ocean by gods and demons there was produced the cool-rayed (Moon), the uterine (brother) of the celestial tree and others, who allays the heat of the three worlds. Being perfectly round and complete, and collecting all gods round him by his digits, he has become an ornament, a crest-jewel, of the omniscient (Siva).

(V. 5) In his family was born the lord of the earth, Haihaya, the fire of valour incarnate, and after him the wise king Arjuna, the illustrious son of Kṛitavīrya, who was a

(V. 6) Thereafter was born the king Siṅghaṇa, after him, Daṅghīra; after him also (came) Madanabrahman and then Rāmachandra.

(V. 7) 'Then there was Ratnasēna, the son of Rāmachandra. His wife was Guṇḍāyī by name, (who was) resplendent with the ornaments of her excellences.

(V. 8) His son is the king Vāhara who has destroyed all his enemies, (and about whom the following doubts are entertained, viz.,) "Is he Hariśchandra, or the Moon descended on the surface of the earth, or Kārttikēya, or the god of love, or Nakula, or Sahadēva, (since he is) the abode of truth, always liberal (and) brave, the incomparable Siva to the enemies' cities?"

(V. 10) Having captured at will wild elephants which had been sporting freely . . . and got them brought by their drivers to his capital from Ratnapura, Vāhara, the best of kings, the illustrious lord of the earth, (who is) Kaṛṇa of the Kali age, oh, wonder! gives them away together with gold to his suppliants!

(V. 11) Day after day in every month of Kārttika he, having bathed, piously makes gifts of cows and then listens to the reading of venerable holy Purāṇas and other (works); he gives away in the presence of Durgā a hundred thousand lamps also, for the attainment of an eternal reward. Hence is this illustrious lord of the earth, Vāhara, great!

(V. 14) Having placed all wealth in this fort of many peaks (called) Kōsaṅga, (and) having destroyed completely all hosts of enemies, this (Vāharēndra) also roams about, marching here and there.

(V. 16) Obeying the command of the king Vāhara, . . . the noble minister Mādhava, (becoming) hard-hearted, wrested away the territory of the Paṭhāṇas.

(V. 17) Having defeated the Paṭhāṇas in battle, he brought away by camels gold (and) other metals, elephants and horses, innumerable cows and female buffaloes. Such is the councillor Mādhava, a lion among the Amātyas!

² The names of the enemies defeated by Mādhava are not clear on the original stone.

(V. 18) There is his learned preceptor Dēvadatta Tripāṭhī, an advocate of peace in all cases, who rightly advises Vāharēndra in accordance with various scriptures, policy and (his) knowledge of subtle religious duty.

(V. 19) To the learned Nāganātha, who has come from Karṇāṭa, who is peaceful (by temperament), shines by (the performance of) sacrifices, and is the pillar of his fame, the illustrious lord of the earth, Vāhara, donated a very huge rutting elephant, clever in defeating (other) rutting elephants, (as a reward) for the prafasti of the goddess (which he had composed)

(V. 20) This noble (and) [wise] Rāmadāsa, the son of Mōhana, born of the Kāyastha family, who is well-known on earth, has joyfully written (this) excellent prafasti.

(V. 21) There is the illustrious Jagannātha, the light of the Kāyastha family and the repository of Vāharēndra's confidence, who has obliged the whole world.

(V. 22) The learned (and) wise Nāganātha in the contest of disputations . . . has composed this prafasti with pleasure.

(V. 23) There are the illustrious Chhītaku and Māṇḍana, the sons of the illustrious Sūtradhāra Manmatha, born in the family of Kōkāsa, who have attained mastery in many crafts and are experts in the art of sculpture. Of them, (the sculptor) named Māṇḍana has incised¹ the beautiful letters of (this) prafasti.

Chhītaku is the *Sajāka*² Sūtradhāra and Māṇḍana (is) the humble writer.

KOSGAIN STONE INSCRIPTION (No.II) OF VAHARA: (VIKRAMA) YEAR 1570

THIS inscription, together with another³ on the same stone, was first brought to notice by Mr. Beglar in Sir A. Cunningham's Archaeological Survey of India Reports, Vol. VII, p. 214. It was subsequently very briefly noticed by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in his Inscriptions in the Central Provinces and Berar.⁴ It is edited here from the original stone, now deposited in the Central Museum, Nagpur.

The record is engraved on the opposite side of the same slab of reddish sand-stone which bears the preceding inscription of Vāhara. As stated before, the stone was originally found in the fort of Kosgain, 4 miles north-east of Chhuri in the Bilaspur District of Madhya Pradesh.

The inscription contains fifteen lines and covers a space measuring 2' 7.5" broad by 1' 2" high. It has suffered a good deal by exposure to weather especially in lines 10-15 where several aksharas, which were not originally very deeply engraved, have now become almost illegible. Besides, the crack, referred to above⁵ in connection with the preceding inscription, which appears here on the proper left, has damaged one or two aksharas in each line. The technical execution is not good. The characters are Nāgarī, the average size of the letters being .5". The language is Sanskrit. As regards orthography, b is everywhere denoted by the sign for v; see e.g. kadamva-vana-, 1.4; s is occasionally used for ś as in -vaṁsa-, 1.3 and -viśiṣṭa-, 1.9, and vice versa, though rarely, as in smit-āśyē, 1.2; sh is employed for kh in viśaṇḍy-, 1.3; ṇ and n are confused in some places; see Asvīṇa,

The inscription, called prafasti in line 11, is one of Ghāṭama,¹ a feudatory of the Kalachuri prince Vāhara. The object of it is apparently to commemorate the death, in battle, of Yaśa, the father-in-law of Ghāṭama. The record was composed by the poet Chandrākara and written on the stone by Māṇḍēka. It was engraved by Vira, the son of Kōsura.

With verse 9 begins the genealogy of Ghāṭama. In the Chāyuhāna (Chauhān) family there was a prince named Nirdēvala. His son was Bharata. After him is mentioned Ghāṭama who, though it is not expressly stated, was probably his son and successor. Ghāṭama obtained possession of a heaven-like fortress (evidently Kōsaṅga, modern Kosgain) and was greatly favoured by the king Vāhara. His minister was Gōraksha, who had apparently a son named Vaijala. Verse 18 states that Ghāṭama gave cows, yielding good milk and decked with gold and cloth, together with their calves to the poet Chandrākara who composed this prafasti by his order.

KOSGAIN STONE INSCRIPTION (No. II) OF VAHARA: (VIKRAMA) YEAR 1570

(V. 7) He, having made over his good son named Sauridāsa (and also) his own territory together with (his) treasure to his liberal son-in-law Ghāṭammadēva, afterwards marched against the enemies, being desirous of fighting.

(V. 8) There was (one) named Tējanārāyaṇa, who thinned the ranks of (his) enemies, who was vigilant [in protecting] the twice-born, gods, preceptors, cows . . . , and was devoted to (Vishṇu) the husband of the daughter of the milk-ocean,—who, his handsome body being struck by various weapons, went by the path of heaven (fighting) bravely in battle, crying out “Stay! Stay!” and being chosen by the best heavenly damsels.

(V. 9) There was the illustrious king Nirdēvala, a learned man, who was like the Kalpa tree to his dependants, a noble prince born in the spotless and shining Chāyuhāna (Chauhāṇ) race, the valour of whose arms was great, who was devoted to the worship of gods and earthly gods (i. e., Brāhmaṇas), and being (himself) pure (in conduct), removed the sufferings of distressed people, and destroyed wicked persons.

(V. 10) From his body was born (a son) named Bharata, who enjoyed best fame in (this) world, who was the foremost among Kshatriyas, a repository of all political wisdom, most deserving gods and earthly [gods] and whose glory was pure and well-known.

(V. 11) (had) a perfectly clean policy (and) was the sole repository of political wisdom this victorious, illustrious Ghāṭama, who is highly favoured by the illustrious king Vāhara, having obtained this extremely high and great fortress which is like heaven

(V. 12) (This is) that illustrious Ghāṭama on the earth, the unique thunderbolt for the chief mountain, namely, the family [of his enemy], who resembles Bali in charity and Bhōja in (his) distinguished actions, who is almost like Vikrama in valorous deeds and like the ocean in character; who resembles the god of love in handsome form and is even Rāmachandra by (his) spotless fame.

(V. 13) His Amātya (is) the illustrious Gōraksha by name, a councillor conversant with political science, a ruler of the people, a destroyer of enemies and a deliverer of poor persons, the flowers of whose policy have reached (all) quarters.

(V. 14) There is the illustrious (and) holy son named Vaijala communicating in words to Ghāṭamma whatever is good or bad

(V. 15) This excellent and complete prafasti has been written in excellent letters by the ornament of the Kāyastha race, named Māṇḍēka, who is a devotee of Siva.

(V. 16) a Brāhmaṇa who is to the family of Bhāradvāja what a collection of rays is to a lotus a devotee of the creator of the world.

(V. 17) The foremost poet Chandrākara, who has come (here) from his country, composed [this prafasti] by the order of Ghāṭamma.

(V. 18) The king Ghāṭamma gave him cows yielding good milk, (adorned) with gold and cloth, together with calves.

(V. 19) [Victorious is] now [that] Ghāṭammadēva, who caused to be constructed the gate of Kōsaṅga, the best of fortresses, on Wednesday coupled with the tenth (tithi) of the bright fortnight of the first of the two months (called) Māgha in autumn !

(V. 20) As long as there is on the circle of the earth the Mēru (mountain) consisting of heaven and containing a multitude of gods, as long as the sun and the moon move about in the sky dispelling darkness, as long as Vāsudēva (i. e., Viṣṇu) dwells in water,—even so long may this meritorious work last!

On Monday, the 13th tithi of the dark fortnight of Āśvina in the (cyclic) year named Vikrama in the year 1570, this prasasti [has been engraved] by Vira, the son of Kōsura

INSCRIPTIONS OF THE KALACHURIS OF RAIPUR

No. 107; PLATE LXXXVIII

RAIPUR STONE INSCRIPTION OF BRAHMADEVA : (VIKRAMA) YEAR 1458

THE slab of grey sand-stone, measuring 2' 1½" broad and 1' 6½" high, which contains this inscription, was originally found fixed into a wall of the fort at Raipur, the headquarters of the Raipur District in the Chhattisgarh Division of Madhya Pradesh. The inscription has been mentioned several times, first by Sir R. Jenkins in the Asiatic Researches, Vol. XV, p. 505, then by Sir A. Cunningham in his Archaeological Survey of India Reports, Vol. XVII, p. 77, and finally by Dr. Kielhorn, who calculated the correct equivalent of its date in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XIX, p. 26 and referred to it again in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. II, p. 230 in his article on the Khalāri stone inscription of Hari-brahmadēva.¹ Dr. Kielhorn has also briefly noticed its contents² in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XXII, p. 83. The record is edited here for the first time from the original stone which is preserved in the Central Museum, Nagpur, and from inked estampages taken under my supervision.

The writing, which consists of 25 lines, covers a space measuring from 1' 10" to 1' 11" broad and 1' 3" high. It is generally in a good state of preservation except that in lines 22-25 a few aksharas have been either damaged or completely lost owing to the breaking off of the proper right corner and of a few pieces from the bottom of the stone. The characters are Nāgarī. The size of the letters is about .5".

The language is very corrupt Sanskrit. Except for the opening obeisance to Gaṇeśa, Sarasvatī and the poet's preceptors in l.1, the particulars of the date, the reigning king and some other details in ll.9-12, the introductory and concluding expressions such as Nagara-varṇanāḥ, l.12, Vamśāvalīḥ, l.17 and ya(i)ti prastatiḥ samāptaḥ(tā) in l. 25, the names of the Sūtradhāra and the writer in l.25, and the pious wish for the welfare of the world at the end, the inscription is metrically composed throughout. The verses, except the first two, are not numbered. Their total number is 23. Attention may be called here to the use in verse 11 of the Hindi metre Gītikā which is rare in Sanskrit poetry. The first eight verses eulogising the different deities are fairly good, but owing to the ignorance and carelessness of the writer, the record contains, even in this portion, innumerable mistakes. The correct text can, however, be restored here without much difficulty. The subsequent verses, descriptive of the genealogy of the king Brahmādēva and the Nāyaka Hājirāja, are even more incorrectly written. They abound in mistakes of orthography, euphony and grammar. The record being so full of errors, the exact relationship and even the names of the persons mentioned in it are, in several cases, open to doubt; but fortunately these cases occur towards the end of the inscription and in a portion which has little historical importance. As regards orthography, it is impossible and also unnecessary to enumerate all the mistakes which will be found corrected below in the footnotes to the transcribed text; but we may note the following peculiarities:—n is used for ṇ and vice versa; see -nivāran-aika-, l.1 and -paṁcāṇanāḥ, l.2; b is denoted by the sign for v throughout; sh and kh are interchanged in some places; see sushadā, ll. 6-7 and -bhūkhanam, l.9; the final n is wrongly changed to anusvāra as in tasmim, l. 11 and in several cases the proper order of the members of a conjunct is reversed; see mautkika- for mauktika-, l. 5, nītarma- for nītamba-, l. 12, Phāgluna for Phālguna, l. 10 etc.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of the king Brahmadēva of Rāyapura. He belonged to the Haihaya or Kalachuri dynasty as is known from the next inscription. The object of it is to record the construction, by the Nāyaka Hājirāja, of a temple of Hātakēśvara¹ (Śiva) at Rāyapura.

After the customary salutation to Gaṇeśa, Sarasvatī and the poet's preceptors, the inscription begins with eight verses in honour of Vighnēśvarā (i. e., Gaṇeśa), Bhātātī (the goddess of speech), the preceptor, Śiva, the Gaṅgā and the moon. It then proceeds to record that on Friday, the eighth tithi of the bright fortnight of Phālguna in the (Vikrama) year 1458 and the Śaka year 1322, the cyclic year being Sarvajit, during the reign of the Mahārājādhirāja, the illustrious king Brahmadēva, while his minister was Ṭhākura Tripurāridēva and the Court-Paṇḍita was Mahādēva, the Nāyaka Hājirājadēva² constructed a temple of Hātakēśvara (Śiva) at Rāyapura.

After a verse descriptive of Rāyapura we get a genealogy of the ruling king in verses 10-12. At Rāyapura there reigned a great king, Lakshmīdēva. His son was Sīngha, who in turn had a son named Rāmachandra. Brahmadēva³, who is mentioned next, was probably a son of Rāmachandra, though there is no explicit statement to that effect. The description of these princes is conventional and altogether devoid of historical interest.

The pedigree of Hājirāja commences in verse 13. It seems from that verse that his father also was named Brahmadēva. The subsequent verses seem to describe his sons, grandsons and also brothers, but owing to the careless manner in which the record is composed and written, their exact relationship to one another is in many cases uncertain. Hājirāja seems to have had two sons, Padmanābha and Pāhidēva. The former's son was Kānhaḍa and the latter's, Śivaśarman. Two brothers of Hājirāja are also named in verses 20 and 21. The elder of them was named Supau(?) and the younger Gēyāti. The former of these had two sons, Gōlha and Vishṇudāsa. The inscription finally mentions the artisan Nāmadēva.

The date of the inscription corresponds to Friday, the 10th February 1402 A. C. On that day the eighth tithi of the bright fortnight of Phālguna in the expired Vikrama year 1458 ended 22 h. 20 m. after mean sunrise.⁴ The cyclic year was Sarvajit according to the northern luni-solar system. The corresponding Śaka year was, however, 1323 expired, not 1322 as wrongly stated in the inscription.⁵

² The inscription does not state if Hājirāja was connected with the royal court.

⁵ In the Asiatic Researches, Vol. XV, p. 505, the Śaka year is given as 1323, but that was probably in order to make it correspond to V. 1458.

There is only one place-name mentioned in the present record. Rāyapura, where the temple of Hāṭakēśvara was erected, is clearly Raipur where the inscribed stone was found.

sin!—(she) who looks like a white female swan in the lotus which is the face of Brahmā ; who is the maiden that uproots the tap-root of the whole creeper of sins ; whose feet are saluted by crowds of gods ; (and) who is the cow of plenty to poets !

(V. 3) Obeisance to that illustrious teacher who, with the pencil of the magic ointment, namely, knowledge, opens the eyes of those who are blinded by the defect of ignotance !

(V. 4) Triumphant is (Siva) who, by the stroke of one arrow, destroyed three cities ! What are (even) three worlds to the bow-men who (can) pervade them with arrows ?

(V. 5) May the drops of the water of the Gaṅgā grant you happiness !—(those) which, as Sambhu dances, have the beauty of pearls on his head ; which appear like jasmine flowers on the large creepers of his matted hair ; which fall gracefully like a necklace round his neck ; which shine like full-blown flowers in the cavity of his hands ; which are arranged on the ground like flowers showered down and which look beautiful like stars in the sky !

(V. 6) May the digit of the moon protect you !—(the digit) which stays like a female ascetic in the cottage-like mass of matted hair on the head of Siva by (the bank of) the Gaṅgā !

(V. 7) May Sambhu grant me, in every life, recollection of former existence, lordship of the earth, fruitful intelligence through good fortune, devotion to Siva (and) spiritual knowledge !

(V. 8) Those who are devoid of religious merit do not bow to Siva, who wears matted hair, has the crescent moon on his crest, always wears garments and bracelets of large serpents, (and) has ornaments of strings of skulls and white ashes.²

Hail ! In the memorable Sainvat 1458 (and) Śaka year 1322, in the cyclic year named Sarvajit, on Friday, the eighth (tithi) of the bright fortnight of Phālguna—on this day, here, at the famous Rāyapura, during the reign of the Mahārājādhirāja, the illustrious king Brahmadēva, (while there is) the Prime Minister, Ṭhākura Tripurāridēva and the Paṇḍita, Mahādēva—at that time the Nāyaka Hājirāja erected a temple of Hātakēśvara.

The description of the city—

(V. 9) Dwelling in (this) victorious Rāyapura, beautiful women, who are themselves the herbs that revive the god of love, deride in their minds, on account of the blessed pleasures (which they enjoy), (Alakā) the city of Kubēra.

(V. 10) In the famous city of Rāyapura (there was) a great king (named) Lakshmi-dēva. His son (was) Simha, well-known for (his) warlike qualities.

(V. 11) (His) son (was) Rāmachandra, whose beautiful cheeks were kissed by the ear-ornaments made of a number of uniform jewels ; who gathered (round himself) a crowd of Brāhmaṇas, even as the rays of the moon rising in autumn attract flocks of birds ; whose wealth is always expended in benefiting the whole world in which families of enemies have been destroyed, and who supports the clear (poetic) talent of the foremost among charming poets.

(V. 12) The goddess of heroism is even here, on the earth, pining for the king Brahman,—(she) who has routed great warriors on the earth (which is churned) by the Mandara mountain, namely, his death-like sword ; who has covered (herself) with the silken upper garment furnished by the great mass of water overflowing the shores (?) ; whose hands are adorned with a graceful garland of lotuses, and whose mind has turned away from others' company.

The genealogy—

(V. 13) Who can say who were the forefathers of the god Brahmā? And (yet) the family of the god Brahmā is well-known among the great gods. His¹ son is² Hājī, proficient in religious writings.

(V. 14) There is the illustrious and brilliant Hājirāja, who is well-known on the surface of the earth as the one (man) who reflects on the import of all scriptures and who is capable of understanding the meaning of the Vēdas and other sacred writings.

(V. 15) "Such a wonderful temple of Hāṭakēśvara, which makes Hājirāja famous, has not been heard of (before) by any one." They talk about the temple (in this way).

(V. 16) He was engrossed in meditation on Śiva³! (Thus) sons, grandsons and wealth are obtained by Hājirāja.

(V. 17) The magnanimous Hājirāja has two sons, (one of them being) Padmanābha. Among the sons of Padmanābha, Kānhaḍa is popular.

(V. 18) (The other son) Pāhidēva is well-known on the earth as possessed of high position and merits (viz.) great proficiency in scriptures, devotion to gods and Brāhmaṇas,

(V. 19) Since Pāhidēva is dear to the venerable Saṅkara and Pārvatī, he had by their favour a son named Śivaśarman.

(V. 20) Hājirāja has two brothers. The elder (of them) is called Supau. His sons are Gōlha and Vishṇudāsa.

(V. 21) Similarly (his younger brother), born of the womb of Ambikā, is Gēyāti, possessed of abundant wealth and a virtuous mind . . . , by whose friendship Hājirāja is . . . on the earth.

Here ends the praśasti.

The worshipper of the god is . . . The Sūtradhara named Nāmadēva constructed the maṇḍapa. The praśasti has been written by Nāma(?).

NO. 108 ; PLATE LXXXIX

KHALARI STONE INSCRIPTION OF HARIBRAHMADEVA: (VIKRAMA) YEAR 1470

THIS inscription was first brought to notice by Sir A. Cunningham's Assistant, Mr. J. D. Beglar, in the Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. VII, p. 157 and was subsequently edited, without any translation or facsimile, by Dr. Kielhorn in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. II, pp. 228 ff. It is edited here from the original stone and its ink impressions taken under my direction.

The slab of polished red sand-stone, which bears this inscription, was originally fitted into the wall of the maṇḍapa of a temple at Khalāri¹, about 45 miles east of Raipur in the Raipur District of Madhya Pradesh. It is now preserved in the Raipur Museum.

The inscription contains sixteen lines of writing, which cover a space of about 1' 11½" broad by 11½" high. The writing is in a good state of preservation, only two or three letters being slightly damaged. The size of the letters is about .5". The characters are Nāgarī. The letters dh and bh present throughout their modern Nāgarī forms and the prishṭhamātrās have nowhere been used. The sign of the avagraha has been used in some places to mark the elision of the initial a or ā. The language is Sanskrit. Except for the customary salutation to Gaṇapati in the beginning and the particulars of the date etc. at the end, the whole record is in verse. The orthography does not present anything calling for remark, except that b is everywhere denoted by the sign for v.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of the king Haribrahmadēva of the Kalachuri² dynasty. The object of it is to record the construction of a temple of Nārāyaṇa by the shoe-maker (mōchi) Dēvapāla, son of Sivadāsa and grandson of Jasau, at the town of Khalvāṭikā.

After the customary obeisance to Gaṇapati and three invocatory verses in honour of that god and of Bhārati (the goddess of speech) and Nārāyaṇa, the inscription goes on to state that in the Kalachuri branch of the Ahihaya³ (i. e., Haihaya) dynasty there was born the king Siṃhaṇa, a devotee of Śiva, who conquered eighteen forts of his enemies. His son was Rāmadēva, who killed in battle Bhōṇiṅgadēva of the Phaṇivamśa (i. e., Nāga lineage). His son was Haribrahmadēva, who also was a devotee of Chandrachūḍa (Śiva). Verses 7-8 describe his capital Khalvāṭikā. The inscription was written by Rāmadāsa of the Vāstavya family and was engraved by the artisan Ratnapāla.

The inscription is dated in lines 15 and 16 in the (Vikrama) year 1470, the Śaka year 1334, the cyclic year being Plava, on Saturday, the ninth tithi of the bright fortnight of Māgha, while the moon was in the asterism Rōhiṇī. As Kielhorn has shown, the details of the date agree neither for the Vikrama year 1470 current (corresponding to Śaka 1334 expired), nor for the Vikrama year 1470 expired. The proper year is Vikrama 1471 expired, corresponding to Śaka 1336 expired. In that year the ninth tithi of the bright fortnight of Māgha ended 15 h. 20 m. after mean sunrise on Saturday (the 19th January 1415 A.C.) and the moon was in the asterism of Rohiṇī for 12 h. 15 m. after mean sunrise on that day. The cyclic year also, according to the northern luni-solar system⁴, was Plava⁵. The Christian equivalent of the day is, therefore, the 19th January 1415 A.C.

As the present inscription was incised only about thirteen years after the preceding one which also comes from the Raipur District, the kings Siṃhaṇa, Rāmadēva and Haribrahmadēva mentioned in it are plainly identical with Siṃgha, Rāmachandra and Brahmadēva named in the latter. Kielhorn identified the first two of them with the homonymous kings mentioned in the Rāmṭēk stone inscription. But the latter are there said to have belonged to the Yādava dynasty and must, therefore, be identical with the well-known kings Siṃhaṇa and Rāmachandra of that dynasty, who flourished in the

³ Ilaibaya has been written here as Abibaya evidently to suit the metre.

⁴ According to the southern luni-solar system, the cyclic year for Vikrama 1471 expired was Jaya.

⁵ According to Kielhorn's calculations, the tithi ended 16 h. 18 m. after mean sunrise and the moon was in the nakṣatra Rōhiṇī from 13 h. 8 m. or, by the Garga-siddhānta, from 1 h. 19 m. after mean sunrise, or, by the Brahma-siddhānta, from about sunrise. The Jovian year Plava, by the Sūrya-siddhānta rule without bija, lasted from the 24th April 1414 A. C. to the 20th April 1415 A. C.

13th century A.C. Besides, there is no evidence that the rule of the petty Kalachuri princes mentioned here extended as far as Nagpur in the west in the 14th century A.C. The identification proposed by Kielhorn cannot, therefore, be upheld.¹

There is only one place-name mentioned here, खल्वटिका, which is clearly identical with Khalāri where the present inscription was discovered.

Om ! Adoration to the holy Gaṇapati !

(Verse 1) May Gaṇarāja, the lord of obstacles, protect you !—(he) who removes all sins, grants desired success, is sung by the Vēdas, has (the serpent) Śēsha for his sacred thread (and) is resorted to by rows of beautiful bees on the sloping sides of his temples !

(V. 2) May the goddess of eloquence shine in the lotus-like mouth of the poet for the composition of good poetry !—(she), the divine one, whom the creator recites with an attentive mind after he has honoured the Vēdas ; with whose sounds (uttered) by Kinnaris, Pārvatī attracts the mind of even Śrīkaṇṭha (Śiva) (and) whose arms with jingling bracelets would, in privacy, be (like) necklaces on the breast of Nārāyaṇa !

(V. 3) May (that) Nārāyaṇa always manifest (himself) in your minds !—(he), the incorporeal divine Being, on whom even the denizens of heaven such as Brahmā, though they know the self, meditate according to the words of the Vēdas, (and) by remembrance of whom (all) sins vanish away !

(V. 4) In the royal race of Ahihaya⁵ there was born a devotee of Śiva possessed of fierce valour (namely) the king Simhaṇa, having adopted the Kalachuri branch (of it) ; who, by the great pride of his own arms, conquered, on the battlefield, eighteen fortresses of the enemies.

(V. 5) His son was the valiant king Rāmadēva, who, with an angry look, attacked, in the forefront of battle, Bhōṇiṅgadēva of the Nāga lineage (and) who, like a jewel (in the hood of a serpent), had a lustre resplendent like a collection of rays of the mid-day sun.

(V. 6) Triumphant on the earth is his son, the illustrious king Haribrahmadēva, a destroyer of enemies and a devotee of Śiva, who, dark-complexioned (as he is), is charming like the god of love to the minds of deer-eyed (women), (and is) the god of death to mighty warriors, the shining celestial tree to all suppliants, the master of eloquence (i.e., Bṛihaspati) among learned men and a second Bharata⁶ among connoisseurs of singing.

(V. 7) His most important capital Khalvāṭikā shines with gardens,—where temples of gods, resembling the Himālaya mountain, appear beautiful with their extremely white and lofty spires ;

(V. 8) Where dwell happy earthly gods (i.e., Brāhmaṇas) who are engaged in the study of the Vēdas, rich men who, in pleasures of wealth, excel Kubēra, the lord of gods,

(V. 9) There shines Dēvapāla, son of a repository of merits named Sivadāsa and grandson of (a man) named Jasau, a shoe-maker, who has the lustre of the moon and exceedingly charming fame, who is clever in the performance of (his) work, who by his goodness is like a follower of the Brāhmaṇas, and is fond of various pious deeds and whose intellect has become pure by (his) remembrance of the divine Nārāyaṇa.

(V. 10) He, by his ability and great devotion, has caused to be constructed a temple of Nārāyaṇa together with a maṇḍapa. May Hari grant him his desired object in this world and the next !

(V. 11) Dāmōdara Miśra, who is fond of sportful splashing among the dashing large waves of the ocean of nectar which is meditation on the lotus-like feet of Hari, has composed this praśasti, which infuses delight into the minds of appreciative poets.

(V. 12) As long as the Gaṅgā flows in this world together with (the Yamunā) the daughter of the Sun, and the sun shines in the sky together with (the moon) the lord of the constellations of stars,¹—so long may the fame of the shoe-maker Dēvapāla endure in the guise of (this) temple of the god (Nārāyaṇa) !

(V. 13) This praśasti has been written in spotless letters by Rāmadāsa of the illustrious Vāstavya family, the foremost among learned men.

Hail ! In the year named Plava out of (the cycle of) sixty years, the memorable Śaṇivāt 1470, the Śaka year 1334, on Saturday, the 9th (lunar) day of the bright (fortnight) of Māgha, the asterism (being) Rōhiṇī.

May the whole world be happy !

(Engraved) by the Sūtradhāra Ratnadēva.

MISCELLANEOUS INSCRIPTIONS

No. 109 ; PLATE XC.

CHHAPRI STATUE INSCRIPTIONS OF GOPALADEVA: (KALACHURI) YEAR 840

THESE inscriptions were first¹ brought to notice by Sir A. Cunningham who published transcripts of them together with a photozincograph in his Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. XVII (1881-82), pp. 34 ff. and plate xxii. They were subsequently noticed by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in his Inscriptions in C. P. and Berar.² They are edited here from estampages kindly supplied by Mr. M. A. Suboor of the Central Museum, Nagpur.

The inscriptions are incised on the pedestal of a large statue. The temple of Boramdeo, in which the inscribed statue is now placed, is situated at the western end of a long embankment which forms a lake in the valley near Chhapri, 11 miles east of Kawardhā, in the Chhattisgarh Division of Madhya Pradesh. The statue is of a bearded man sitting with folded hands, and measures 2' 7" high and 1' 11" broad. On its pedestal is figured a 'Rājā on horseback with an attendant carrying an umbrella and a female offering food to the horse. To the right is a jōgi seated with knees bound.'³

The inscriptions are four in number. Two of them, called here A and B, are divided by the dress of the statue into two parts. The characters of all are Nāgarī of about the eleventh century A. C. The average size of the letters is .4"

The language is Sanskrit. The only orthographical peculiarity that calls for notice is the use of sh for kh (representing the Sanskrit kshma) in Lashaṇadēvarāyō in l. 1 of B.

The first of these inscriptions (A) names Jōgi Kānhō and describes him as proficient in all arts and as a human incarnation of the illustrious Rāma. He is evidently the personage whom the statue was intended to represent. Cunningham took him to be identical with the Jōgi figured on the pedestal of the image and thought that he was the religious adviser of the Rājā on horseback, whom he considered to be the builder of the temple. The second inscription (B) gives the names of the king Lakshmanadēva and his crowned queen, son and daughters. The third record (C) gives the date as Samvat 840 (expressed in decimal figures only) during the reign of the Rāṇaka, the illustrious Gōpāladēva, while the last one (D) states that the very beautiful image of Umā-Mahēśvara was caused to be made by Sādhū, the son of Dhāngū.

The date of the inscription must, on palæographic grounds, be referred to the Kalachuri era and would correspond to 1048-49 A.C. It does not admit of verification. The use of the Kalachuri era suggests that Gōpāladēva was a feudatory of the Kalachuri ruler of Ratanpur. It may be noted in this connection that some other inscriptions in and near the temple of Boramdeo, dating from the 14th to the 16th century A. C., are recorded in the Vikrama era.⁴ Lakshmanadēva seems to have been a petty chief under Gōpāladēva.

The temple of Boramdeo has been praised by Cunningham as one of the most richly decorated temples that he had seen.¹ It is so called because it was used in later times by the Gonds for the worship of their god. The sanctum of the temple contains at present an image of the snake-god besides a Śiva-liṅga; but from the figure of Viṣṇu over the middle of the three entrances of the temple, Cunningham conjectured that it was originally dedicated to Viṣṇu. He actually found under a tree a few paces to the eastward a sculpture, figuring Viṣṇu and Lakṣmī sitting on Garuḍa.² Inscription D, however, refers to an image of Umā-Mahēśvara. Perhaps the statue, on which these inscriptions are incised, was originally put up at some other temple dedicated to Umā-Mahēśvara. It may be noted in this connection that Cunningham has described another old temple situated to the north of the temple of Boramdeo, the sanctum of which contains in addition to an argha in situ, a small group of Hara-Gauri.³ It is perhaps this latter image which is mentioned in inscription D.

SHEORINARAYAN STATUE INSCRIPTION: (KALACHURI) YEAR 898

THE inscription was first brought to notice in 1825 by Sir R. Jenkins in his 'Memorandum of Inscriptions found engraved on stones in Chattisgher' which he sent to Mr. W. B. Bayley, Vice-President of the Asiatic Society of Bengal and which is published in the Asiatic Researches, Vol. XV, pp. 505-6. Since then the inscription has been mentioned several times⁵ on account of its date; but its contents were noticed for the first time by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar in the Progress Report of the Archaeological Survey of Western India for 1903-4, p. 53 and subsequently by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in his Inscriptions in the Central Provinces and Berar.⁶ The record is edited here from the original stone and its inked estampages supplied by the Government Epigraphist for India.

The inscription is incised on the pedestal of the statue of a male person in a small shrine in the courtyard of the temple of Nārāyaṇa at Shēorinārāyaṇ, a well-known place of pilgrimage on the left bank of the Mahānadī in the Janjgir tahsil of the Bilaspur District, Madhya Pradesh. The writing consists of five lines and covers a space, 1" 2½" broad and 3" high. It is in a state of good preservation. The characters are Nāgarī. The letters are very well executed. The only point worth noting here is that the left limb of dh is fully developed; see, e. g., -pāthōdhi- in l. 1. The language is Sanskrit, and except for the introductory ōṃ namaḥ Sivāya in the first line, api cha in line 2

² This seems to be a son of Lakshmaṇadēva.

and the date as well as the name of the composer in the last line, the whole inscription is metrically composed. The verses, of which there are three, are all numbered. The orthography does not call for any remark except that the sign of v is everywhere used for b and j is employed for y in drashjam in l. 4.

The object of the inscription is to record that the statue is of a warrior named San̄grāmasim̄ha, the son of Bālasim̄ha and Āmanādēvi. The praise which is here lavished on him is wholly conventional and has no historical importance.

The interest of the inscription lies in its date which is here clearly specified as belonging to the Kalachuri era. Sir R. Jenkins first published the date as Samvat 898 Ashwin Shudh Saptami. Sir A. Cunningham, in his A. S. I. R., Vol. IX, gave it as 'in the Kulachuri Samvat in the year 898, Aswin sudi Some' on p. 86 and as '898 Asvina sudi 7 Monday' on p. 111. Subsequently, in his A. S. I. R., Vol. XVII, plate xx, he published a photozincograph of only a part of it which reads Kalachuriḥ Samvatsarē 898. He again referred to it in his Indian Eras, p. 61, where he remarked : 'A fresh examination has shown the date to be Āsvina su. di. 2 (and not Āsvina su. di. 7).' Dr. Kielhorn at first accepted this last statement of Cunningham and on calculation found that the date corresponded to Monday, the 9th September 1146 A.C., on which day the second tithi of the bright fortnight of Āśvina ended 21 h. 54 m. after mean sunrise. As he was then of opinion that the Kalachuri year was Bhādra-padādi and the era commenced in 249 A. C., he concluded that the year 898 of this date was a current year.¹ Subsequently, in his article on the era in the Festgruss an Roth he confirmed the aforementioned reading from a facsimile and gave the same corresponding date as before, but as he had then come to the conclusion that the Kalachuri era commenced on Āśvina su. di. 1 in 248 A. C., he took the year of the date as expired. Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar next stated, in his notice of the inscription in P. R. A. S. W. I. for 1903-4, p. 53, that the inscription was dated '898 Kalachuri era, Monday, the 7th of the bright half of Āśvina.' From a photograph of the inscription supplied by him, Kielhorn also finally read the date as Kalachuri-samvatsarē 898 Āsvina-sudi 7 Sōma-dinē and stated that it regularly corresponded, for the current Kalachuri year 898, to Monday, the 24th September 1145 A. C., when the seventh tithi of the bright fortnight of Āśvina ended 20 h. 57 m. after mean sunrise.² This date seemed to confirm Kielhorn's opinion that the Kalachuri year began in Āśvina; for it showed that the month of Āśvina fell, in any case, in the beginning of that year. The subsequent discovery of some dates of the era such as those of the Amōdā plates of Prithivīdēva II³ and the Jabalpur plates of Jayasim̄ha⁴, which show that the Kalachuri year began in some month later than Āśvina, has, however, rendered the accuracy of the reading of the date of the present inscription open to question. From an excellent inked estampage supplied by Dr. Chhabra, I find that the tithi originally incised was 2, but the lower part of the figure has now become indistinct, thus making it appear like 7. The correct reading of the date, therefore, is Kalachuri-samvatsarē 898 ॥ Āsvini sudi 2 Sōma-dinē. The date, Monday, the 2nd tithi of the bright fortnight of Āśvina, regularly corresponds, for the current Kārttikādi Kalachuri year 898, to Monday, the 9th September 1146 A.C.

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to Siva !

(Verse 1) Here is (installed) the carved statue of Saṅgrāmasiṃha, who is the son of the illustrious Bālasīṃha and Āmaṇadēvi, who has become sanctified by his worship of gods and Brāhmaṇas, and whose fame has reached all oceans.

Moreover :—

(V. 2) There is this excellent statue of him, who, Saṅgrāmasiṃha, is famous on this earth ; who resembles the god of love in lovely form ; who is like (Rēvanta) the son of the Sun in (riding) horses ; who is (Indra) the lord of gods in mounting huge elephants, and (Bṛihaspati) the preceptor of gods, (being) well-known by his comprehensive intellect ; (and) who, even in his boyhood, was firm in fighting on account of his multitude of numerous merits.

(V. 3) The valiant Saṅgrāmasiṃha was well-known here, who was an indescribably lovely god, was always disposed to confer gifts on the poor, and himself being large-minded, could (always) listen to good people.

In the Kalachuri year 898, on the 7th (lunar) day of the bright (fortnight) of Āśvina, on Monday.

Nos. 111-112 ; PLATE XCII

BORIA STATUE INSCRIPTIONS OF JASARAJADEVA : (KALACHURI) YEAR 910¹

THESE inscriptions were discovered in 1881-82 by Sir A. Cunningham² near the ruins of a temple of the goddess Kaikālī in an old deserted fort, 3 miles to the north-west of the village Bōriā. This village is situated about 20 miles to the north of Kawardhā, the chief town of a former feudatory State of the same name in the Chhattisgarh Division of Madhya Pradesh. Cunningham published a transcript and a photozincograph of the inscriptions in his Archaeological Survey of India Reports, Vol. XVII, p. 44 and plate xxii. They were subsequently noticed by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in his Inscriptions in the Central Provinces and Berar.³ They are edited here for the first time from excellent ink impressions kindly supplied by Mr. M. A. Suboor of the Central Museum, Nagpur.

They are two inscriptions, each on a separate statue. Both are in a good state of preservation. Their characters are Nāgarī and language Sanskrit. Each consists of only three lines. The average size of the letters in the first or larger one is .5" and that of the second is .7".

The larger (A) of the two records is incised on the pedestal of a bearded figure with hands joined in adoration. It mentions Thākura Māltu, the Chief Minister (Mahāmātya) of the illustrious and victorious king, Mahārāṇaka Jasarājadēva, and names his son, mother and daughter. The object of it is to record the construction of a temple by Māltu for the religious merit of his father. This temple is evidently identical with the present one dedicated to the goddess Kaikālī.

The second inscription (B) also mentions the illustrious Jasarājadēva. The object of it is apparently to record that the statue on which it is incised represents Jāgu, the son of Dhirachhēndra, who was a military officer, evidently, of Jasarājadēva. He is stated to be a devoted disciple.

The first inscription contains the date, Samvat 910, expressed in decimal figures, of an unspecified era. It must, of course, be referred to the Kalachuri era. It does not admit of verification, but as an expired year, it would correspond to 1158-59 A. C. The second inscription is undated, but is clearly of the same period.

Jasarājadēva, mentioned in both the records, is evidently identical with Yaśōrāja whose inscription, dated K. 934, was found at Sāhaspur in the same State of Kawardhā. He was probably a feudatory of the Kalachuris.

² 'The Memorandum of Inscriptions in Chattisgher', published by Sir R. Jenkins in A. R., Vol. XV, p. 506, mentions two records at Borea of Pandria, one of them being dated Samvat 849. These appear to be different from those edited here. See C. A. S. I. R., Vol. XVII, p. 44.

³ First ed., pp. 165 ff; second ed., pp. 177 ff.

AMARAKANTAK STATUE INSCRIPTION: (KALACHURI) YEAR 922

THIS inscription was first brought to notice by Sir Richard Jenkins in his 'Memorandum of Inscriptions found engraved on stones in Chhattisgher'¹⁴. It was subsequently

³ Read ठाकुरो or rather ठाकुरो.

⁶ Read पितुः.

⁸ Read प्रासादः स्थापितः शिवः । From तस्य पितुस्य onwards, the words have the cadence of the Anuṣṭubh metre.

¹¹ Perhaps धिरछेद्रपुत्रः is intended. The following daṇḍa is superfluous.

¹² Read डंडनायको.

¹³ Perhaps श्रावकभक्तः is meant.

¹⁴ A. R., Vol. XV, p. 506. Jenkins thought that the image represented Rēvā Nāyaka.

mentioned by Sir A. Cunningham's Assistant, Mr. Beglar¹, and finally noticed by Mr. R. D. Banerji in his Progress Report of the Archæological Survey, Western Circle, for 1920-21, p. 55. It is edited here for the first time from excellent impressions kindly supplied by the Superintendent, Archæological Survey, Central Circle, Patna.

The inscription is incised on the pedestal of a statue at Amarakaṇṭak in Vindhya Pradesh. The statue is of a male person sitting cross-legged with hands clasped in adoration and holding a lotus-bud. On either side of him stands a female figure with a fly-whisk in her right hand. On his head there is an umbrella and on either side of it, a Gandharva carrying a garland.

The inscription contains four lines on the proper right and one line giving the date on the left. It is in a perfect state of preservation. The average size of the letters in the lines on the proper right is .4" and in that on the left is .5". The characters are Nāgarī. The form of ksh in li(lē)khan-ādhyaksha- and Mādhavāksha in line 1 is noteworthy. The language is Sanskrit. Except for the date, the inscription is metrically composed. There are only two verses, both of which are numbered.

The object of the inscription is to record that the statue is an exact representation of Nārāyaṇa, the son of Mādhavāksha who was the Superintendent of Writing 'here at Ratnapura'. The wording of the description suggests that the statue was made at Ratnapura and later on removed to Amarakantak.

The inscription is dated in the year 922 (expressed in decimal figures only) of an unspecified era. This date, judged by the characters, must be referred to the Kalachuri era. As an expired year, it would correspond to 1170-71 A. C.

PUJARIPALI STONE INSCRIPTION OF GOPALADEVA

THIS inscription was discovered by Mr. H. Cousens in 1904. It has been noticed before, first by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar in the Progress Report of the Archaeological Survey of Western India for 1903-4, p. 48, and subsequently by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in his Inscriptions in the Central Provinces and Berar.¹ It is edited here for the first time from the original stone and its ink impressions taken under my direction.

The inscription is incised on a slab of black stone measuring 2' 4½" broad and 1' 6½" high, which in 1904 Mr. Cousens found placed in front of an old brick temple of Mahāprabhu at Pujāripālī, a village 22 miles north by east of Sāraṅgarh, the chief town of a former feudatory State of the same name in the Chhattisgarh Division of Madhya Pradesh. The stone is now deposited in the Raipur Museum.

The writing seems to have originally covered a space measuring 2' 2" broad by 1' 4" high, but almost the whole of the first line and from one to fifteen akṣaras on either end in ll. 2-8 have been lost owing to the breaking away of the top and the right and left upper corners of the stone. Besides, the writing has been almost completely effaced in the middle of ll. 8-20. The characters are of the Nāgarī alphabet. Prishthamātrās are generally used to denote medial diphthongs; the left limbs of kh and dh are fully developed; ś and bh appear throughout in their modern forms; ṇ shows a dot as in raṇ-āṇṇaṇē, l. 3; the upper loop of th is open on the left, as in Mārkkamḍēyō=tha, l. 24, while as the second member of the conjunct sth, it is placed vertically and not on its side. These peculiarities of the letters indicate that the inscription does not probably date before the 12th century A. C. The language is Sanskrit. The whole of the preserved portion, except a sentence in l. 3 and another in l. 25 naming the scribe and the engraver, is in verse. The verses, all of which appear to have been numbered, total 46.²

The inscription is one of a king named Gōpāladēva. The object of it apparently is to record the charitable deeds of Gōpāladēva, especially the construction of the temple where it was put up.

The first line, which is almost completely mutilated, contains the names of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Mahēśvara, joined in a compound. In most of the following verses up to verse 37, the first half is devoted to the description of a goddess, while the second states how Gōpāla showed his devotion to her, or what favours she conferred on him. The goddess is named variously as Vaishṇavī, Vārāhī, Nārasimhī, Aindrī, Chāmuṇḍā and so forth³ and her form, weapons, and vehicle are described in consonance with her epithet. In verse 19 she is said to have been pleased with Gōpāla. She granted him a boon that he would attain success in all his affairs and acquire all knowledge (v. 24). Gōpāla again praised her, and by virtue of repeating her mantra ten million times Gōpāla got a boon from her that he would have matchless strength and prowess. Verses 35-37 describe a fierce battle in which Gōpāla apparently became victorious. Verses 38-40 state that at Kēdāra, Prayāga, Pushkara, Purushōttama and Bhīmēśvara, on the Narmadā, at Gōpālapura, Vārāṇasī, Prabhāsa, the junction of the Gaṅgā with the sea, Vairāgya-maṭha, Śauripura, and the Pēḍarā village, the kīrti of Gōpāla shines like the autumnal

AMARKANTAK STATUE INSCRIPTION: (KALACHURI) YEAR 922

moon. As Dr. Bhandarkar has already remarked, the word kīrti is probably used here with a double entendre. It signifies that Gōpāla performed some charitable act such as building a temple at the aforementioned places, most of which are holy tīrthas. Verse 41 states that Gōpāla resembled Kāndarpa (the god of love) in handsome form, and Sūdraka in valour, and that riding a horse he appeared in various places like Rēvanta. In the next verse (42) Gōpāla requests all people of the maṇḍala (province), whether of his family or not, to protect the kīrti. The word kīrti here probably refers to the temple where the slab was originally placed.

Verse 43 describes the poet Nārāyaṇa, who apparently composed this inscription, as the author of the kāvya Rāmābhyudaya. The inscription was written by Dēdū and engraved by Dhanapati.

This record is not dated; but Dr. Bhandarkar identified the king Gōpāla described in it with the Rāṇaka Gōpāla, for whom the date 840 of the Kalachuri era (1088-89 A. C.) is furnished by the Chhaprī statue inscription.¹ R. B. Hiralal accepted this identification on the ground that both Pēṇḍrā (with which he identified the village Pēḍarā mentioned in v. 40) and Pujāripālī are close to the former Kawardhā State in which the Chhaprī inscription is found. Apart from the similarity of names, however, there does not seem to be any valid reason for the identification. The palæographical evidence detailed above indicates that the present record is somewhat later than the Chhaprī inscription. Besides, if we identify the two princes, we shall have to suppose that the country under the direct sway of Gōpāladēva extended from Kawardhā in the west to Sāraṅgarh in the east. He must, therefore, have ruled over a more extensive territory than even his Kalachuri overlord whose era is found used in the Chhaprī inscription of Gōpāladēva's feudatory Lakshmaṇarāja! More definite evidence is needed than mere identity of names to prove the identification of the two princes.

From the Shēorinārāyaṇ inscription² we learn that there was another prince named Gōpāladēva who belonged to a collateral branch of the Kalachuri family. As that inscription, which belongs to the time of his nephew Āmaṇadēva II, is dated in the Kalachuri year 919 (1167-68 A. C.), Gōpāladēva must have flourished in circa 1150 A. C. This agrees with the date we have fixed above on the evidence of palæography. The fierce battle in which Gōpāladēva distinguished himself may be the same as that in which his brother Ulhaṇadēva lost his life as stated in the Shēorinārāyaṇ inscription. As shown already,³ the battle was fought with the Kalachuri king Jayasīṃha of Tripurī, whose known dates range from K. 918 to K. 928.

The reference to the Rāmābhyudaya kāvya of Nārāyaṇa, the author of the present inscription, is interesting. There are at least three Sanskrit works of that name known from other references,⁴ but only one of them has been published so far. The first of these in chronological order is a play ascribed to Yaśōvarman, who is probably identical with the homonymous king of Kanauj, the patron of Bhavabhūti. It is cited in the Dhvanyālōka of Ānandavardhana⁵ (9th cen. A. C.) and the *Dhvanyālōkalōchana*⁶ of Abhinavagupta (11th cen. A. C.). The Nāṭakalakṣaṇaratnakōṣa of Sāgaranandin⁷ also cites two verses from

⁷ Ed. by Dillon, pp. 33 and 130.

one Rāmābhyudaya which, judging from the introductory remarks of Sāgaranandin, seems to be a play. It is not known if it is identical with the aforementioned work of Yaśōvarman. Aufrecht mentions a kāvya named Rāmābhyudaya in 30 cantos, the authorship of which is ascribed to one Vēṅkaṭeśa whose date is unknown. The third work of this name is a play by Vyāsaśrī-Rāmadēva, who flourished in the 15th cen. A. C.¹ The work mentioned in the present record seems to be different from all these; for its authorship is definitely ascribed to Nārāyaṇa. It is doubtful if it could be identified with the Rāmābhyudaya cited in the Nāṭakalakṣaṇaratnakōśa;² for, as shown above, the latter was probably a nāṭaka, while the work mentioned here was a kāvya. As shown above, its author Nārāyaṇa seems to have flourished in the 12th cen. A. C.

As for the geographical names mentioned in the present inscription, Kēdāra is a well-known tīrtha on the Himālayas. Prayāga is, of course, modern Allahabad. Pushkara is a holy tīrtha still known by its name in Rajputana. Purushōttama may be the well-known Puri in Orissa. Bhīmēśvara is a well-known tīrtha, also called Drākshārāma, in the Godavari District of the Madras State. The river Narmadā and the holy place Vārāṇasī are too famous to need identification. R. B. Hiralal identified Prabhāsa with Pabhōsā near Allahabad; but in the period to which the present inscription belongs, the latter does not seem to have been so famous. Prabhāsa is more likely to be the tīrtha of that name in Saurashtra. Śauripura (the city of Kṛishṇa) may be Dvārakā in Saurashtra. R. B. Hiralal's conjecture that Gōpālapura mentioned here was founded by Gōpāladēva himself is plausible, but his identification of it with the village Gōpālpur near Tewar cannot be upheld; for Gōpāladēva's sway could not have extended so far in the north. It must have been situated not very far from Pujārīpālī. I would identify it with the Gōpālpur which lies on the right bank of the Mānd river, about 10 miles north-west of Pujārīpālī. Pēḍarāgrāma is likely to be Peṇḍri, 8 miles north by east of Sāraṅgarh. The other places cannot be identified.

(V. 9) The exceedingly powerful goddess Aindrī endowed with a thousand eyes, who has the thunderbolt in her hand and is seated on a lordly elephant, was well worshipped by Gōpāla.

(V. 10) Chāmuṇḍā, who is dark-complexioned like the petal of a blue lotus, rides a spirit and terrifies enemies in battle, [was praised] by Gōpāla.

(V. 11) (The goddess) T'varitā, who is bright like lightning and is considered as similar in complexion to the indragōpaka insect and vermilion, was adored by Gōpāla.

(V. 12) The goddess Tripurā, who, (though) wholly void of parts, is proficient in three arts¹ and was formerly (worshipped) in a maṇḍala of three corners, dwells always in the heart of Gōpāla.

(V. 12)² The three-faced terrible Mārīchā of bright form, (also called) Samayā,³ who exterminates the ranks of the enemies, was seated in the heart of Gōpāla.

(V. 13) The goddess Jayā, who destroys foes, (as well as) Vijayā, who enhances victory (and) makes one's path happy, were always worshipped by Gōpāla.

(V. 14) May that Tārā, who has an excellent seat in the midst of the dreadful ocean, be pleased with Gōpāla, (affording him) excellent protection !

(V. 15) Vindhyavāsīnī dwelling on the mountain, Mahāmāyā (and) Mahākālī were worshipped by Gōpāla.

No. 115 ; PLATE XCV

SAHASPUR STATUE INSCRIPTION OF YASORAJA: (KALACHURI) YEAR 934

THIS inscription was first brought to notice by Sir Richard Jenkins in the Asiatic Researches, Vol. XV, p. 506. It was subsequently noticed by Sir A. Cunningham, who gave an account of its contents and the Christian equivalent of its date together with a photozincograph in his Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. XVII, pp. 42-4, plate xxii. Its date was next examined by Dr. Kielhorn in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XVII, p. 217. The inscription is edited here for the first time from excellent ink impressions kindly supplied by Mr. M. A. Suboor of the Central Museum, Nagpur.

The record is incised on the pedestal of a statue, locally known as that of Sahasrārjuna or Sahasrabāhu, which lies under a tamarind tree near a tank at Sāhaspur, 12 miles to the south-west of Kawardhā, the chief town of a former feudatory state of the same name in Chhattisgarh, Madhya Pradesh.¹ It consists of four short lines followed by four half lines on the left and two half lines on the right. It is in a good state of preservation. The average size of the letters is .5". The characters are Nāgari and the language Sanskrit. The only orthographical peculiarities, which call for notice, are the use of v for b in Valēr=, l. 1 and of the palatal ś for the dental s in -śūnōḥ, l. 2.

In the first four lines the inscription describes Yaśōrāja whom the statue was intended to represent ; but the description is wholly conventional. The next four half lines on the left name his queen, two sons and one daughter.

The date of the inscription is recorded in the two half lines on the right as the year 934 (expressed in decimal figures only), the fifteenth tithi of the bright fortnight of Kārttika, Wednesday.² This date must evidently be referred to the Kalachuri era and regularly corresponds to Wednesday, the 13th October 1182 A.C.³ On that day the fifteenth tithi of the bright fortnight of Kārttika in the expired Kalachuri year 934 ended 14 hours after mean sunrise.⁴

As stated before, Yaśōrāja was probably a feudatory of the Kalachuri kings of Ratanpur.

² Jenkins gave the date wrongly as 'Kartik Shudi Panchami Roj Budhwar'. A. R., Vol. XV, p. 506. The inscribed tithi is 15, not 5 as pointed out by Cunningham. C. A. S. I. R., Vol. XVII, p. 42.

⁶ The sense requires some participle like गतः in place of स्थितः.

NO. 116; PLATE XCVI A

TAHANKAPAR PLATE OF PAMPARAJADEVA: (KALACHURI) YEAR 965

THIS is one of the two plates which were found in an old well in the village Tahan-kāpār,¹ 18 miles from Kāñkēr, the capital of a former feudatory State of the same name in the Chhattisgarh Division of Madhya Pradesh. The inscriptions on both the plates were edited, together with translations and lithographs, by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. IX, pp. 166 ff. The present plate is now in the possession of the former Chief of Kāñkēr. It is edited here from excellent ink impressions kindly supplied by the Government Epigraphist for India.

The present copper-plate is 7. 7" broad and 3. 7" high. It weighs 80 tolas. At the top, it has a rectangular hole measuring $\frac{1}{8}$ " by $\frac{1}{16}$ ", but its purpose is not known. As will be clear from the description given below, the inscription is completed on the present plate. The hole could not, therefore, have been meant for a ring connecting it with some other plate. The other plate, which was discovered with the present one and which also contains a complete inscription, has no such hole. It seems, therefore, that the hole was made subsequently by the owner to string the plate with other valuable plates or papers. No seal has been discovered with the plate and there is no sign of one being soldered to it.

The plate is inscribed on one side only. The inscription, which consists of 11 lines, is in a good state of preservation. The average size of the letters is .2". From faint traces of some other letters on it, it appears that the plate is a palimpsest, the earlier record being carefully beaten in to make room for the present one.

The characters are Nāgarī. Dh shows both earlier and later forms; see, e.g., Rājādhirāja-, l. 1 and Lakshmidhara-, l. 5; ṇ is not distinguished from l; see -sarmmaṇā, and likhitam, both in l. 10. The language is very corrupt Sanskrit. Notice the mistake of sandhi in asmim arthē, l. 8, of participial and verbal forms in kurvam, l. 4, and tishṭhānti, ll. 4-5 and of syntax in -vanikōṭṭa maryādīkritya, l. 5. The record is in prose throughout. It shows the usual orthographical peculiarities such as the substitution of s for ś in -vaṁs-āmvaya- and of v for b in -sava-, both in l. 2, and the use of ri for the vowel ṛi in -rikshē, l. 10.

The inscription is one of Pamparāja of the Sōma-varṇṣa. It is a business document, executed at the (royal) residence in Kākaira, in favour of one Lakshmīdhara.¹ The object of it is to fix the revenue of the village Jaiparā² at 130 *Sarāhagaḍāma-āchhus*³ as previously settled and 140 Vijayarāja-taṅkas.⁴ It is also stated that the revenue of another village named Chikhali was fixed at 150 Vijayarāja-taṅkas. Several persons, whom we know from the next inscription to be royal officials, are cited as witnesses to the transaction.

No genealogy of the king is given in the present inscription probably because it is a business document and not a royal grant. It is, however, curious that Pamparāja is given here the high-sounding titles Rājādhirāja and Paramēśvara together with some more modest ones, viṣṇu, one who has acquired the pañcha-sabdās and Mahāmāṇḍalika. The latter probably describe his real status. From the Rājim inscription dated K. 896, we learn that Jagapāla, who was a feudatory of Prithivīdeva II, the Kalachuri king of Ratanpur, had conquered the Kākaira country and since that time the rulers of that territory may have acknowledged the suzerainty of the Kalachuri kings of Ratanpur. Pamparāja, notwithstanding his high-sounding titles, was, therefore, probably a feudatory of the Kalachuris whose era we find him using in this as well as in the following inscription. The present record mentions his queen Lakshmīdevī, the prince Bōpadēva and the chief minister Dōgarā.

The inscription is dated on Monday, the 10th *tithi*⁵ of the dark fortnight of Bhādrapada in the year 965 (expressed in decimal figures only), the nakshatra being Mṛiga. The date must evidently be referred to the Kalachuri era. It corresponds, for the current year 965, to Monday, the 12th August 1213 A. C. On that day the 10th tithi of the dark fortnight of the pūrṇimānta Bhādrapada commenced 6 h. 45 m. after mean sunrise, and the nakshatra was Mṛiga which ended 14 h. 30 m. after mean sunrise. Though the tithi was not civilly connected with Monday, it was so cited probably because it was actually current when the transaction was made. The charter was written by the Pāṇḍita Vishṇuśarma and incised by the Sēhi Kēśava at the town of Pāḍi.

As for the places mentioned in the present record, Kākaira is Kānkēr mentioned above. Jaiparā and Chikhali have already been identified by Rai Bahadur Hiralal with Jaiprā and Chikhli, 15 and 21 miles respectively north of Kānkēr. Pāḍi, which he was unable to trace, is clearly Pāḍē, 18 miles west by south of Kānkēr.

² In the text Jaiparā has Vuṇikōṭṭa affixed to it. Hiralal took it to mean that in Jaiparā there was a vuṇikkōṭṭa or "traders' fortress", i.e., a fortified place probably made by Banjāras for storing grain purchased for transport. See Ep. Ind., Vol. IX, p. 169, n. 1.

⁴ Hiralal proposed to emend Vijayarāja into vijaya-rāja and understood the expression as 'coins of our victorious reign (mint)'. It is not unlikely that Vijayarāja was a king who struck those coins. Compare Srīmād-Ādivarābu-dramma and Vigrahapāla-dramma in ll. 19 and 30 of the Sīyaḍōṇi inscription. Ep. Ind., Vol. I, pp. 175 and 177.

⁵ As Kielhorn has already noted, the cipher is engraved quite on the margin of the plate. As regards the name of the week-day 'the engraver after the akshara sū in the first instance by mistake engraved the letter d (of dinē), and he then altered this d to ma.' Ep. Ind., Vol. IX, p. 131.

³ I. e., Rāṇaka.

⁴ Hirālal ingeniously explained these five letters as abbreviations of Rāṇaka (chief councillor), Rājavallabha (court-favourite), Vṛtika (chamberlain), Pārvika (aide-de-camp) and Ṭhakkura (lord-in waiting). According to him, these together with the minister, the village priest who is a party to the present transaction, and the Raj Paṇḍit who wrote the present record, make the eight ministers mentioned here. This explanation does not, however, appear to be correct. As the next inscription (No. 117) shows, Asū (not asṭa) was the name of an official as indicated by Ṭhākri (i. e. Ṭhakkura) prefixed to it. There is, therefore, no clear reference to eight ministers here.

No. 117; PLATE XCVI B

TAHANKAPAR PLATE OF PAMPARAJADEVA : (KALACHURI) YEAR 966

THIS plate was discovered, together with the preceding one, in an old well at Tahankāpār in the former Kāṅkēr State in Madhya Pradesh. It is now in the possession of the former Chief of Kāṅkēr. The inscription on this plate also was edited with a translation and a lithograph by R. B. Hiralal in the Ep. Ind., Vol. IX, pp. 166 ff. It is edited here from excellent ink impressions kindly supplied by the Government Epigraphist for India.

The plate measures 7.8" broad and 3.3" high. It is 'thick in the middle, but very thin at the ends, so thin, indeed, that the commencement svasti has cut through the plate, leaving holes in the engraved portion, and similarly at the diagonally opposite end, a portion is exceedingly worn out, leaving irregular holes there. The corners of this plate are rounded off.'²

The inscription consists of 11 lines and is in a good state of preservation. The characters are Nāgarī. As the present record was written only about a year after the preceding one, it presents the same palæographical peculiarities as the latter. Besides what has been noted before, the old form of the initial i, which occurs in Isvara-, l. 7, deserves notice. The language is corrupt Sanskrit, replete with grammatical and orthographical mistakes which are pointed out below, in the foot-notes to the transcribed text.

The present plate was granted, while residing at Pāḍi, by the Paramabhaṭṭāraka and Mahāmāṇḍalika, the illustrious Pamparājadēva, who meditated on the feet of the Paramabhaṭṭāraka and Mahāmāṇḍalika, the illustrious Sōmarāja, who in turn meditated on the feet of the Mahāmāṇḍalika, the illustrious Bōpadēva of the Sōma-varṇśa. It will be noticed that unlike the preceding inscription which was a business document, the present grant contains a description of the royal pedigree for three generations.

The object of the present inscription is to register two grants,—one of the village Kōṅgarā, made before (the god) Prāṅkēśvara³ by Pamparāja and the other of the village Āṇḍali, situated in the same district, by his son, the prince Bōpadēva—on the occasion of a solar eclipse on Sunday, in the month Kārttika in the cyclic year Īsvara, the nakṣatra being Chitrā. The numerical figures of the year are given at the end as 966. Though no era is specified, the date must evidently be referred to the Kalachuri era. It regularly corresponds, for the expired Kalachuri year 966, to Sunday, the 5th October 1214 A. C., when there was a total solar eclipse visible at Kānkēr, the tithi being the new-moon day of the pūrṇimānta Kārttika, and the nakshatra, Chitrā.¹ The cyclic year, however, does not agree. According to the southern luni-solar system it was Bhāva and according to the northern system, it was Bahudhānya. In neither case was it Īśvara. As Kielhorn has pointed out,² according to the northern mean-sign system the cyclic year Īśvara lasted from the 2nd September 1212 A.C. to the 29th August 1213 A.C. The discrepancy is evidently due to the writer's carelessness.

¹ In translating this expression and a similar one in the next sentence, I have followed Hiralal, but I am not certain about the meaning. According to Hiralal, Halbas are an aboriginal tribe, chiefly found in Kāṅkēr. Paṭṭa is also used as a territorial term in l. 15 of the Khōh plates of Mabārāja Hastin (C. I. I., Vol. III, p. 103). Pati-bhāga or patti-bhāga occurs in the sense of 'a share of the produce' in the Hīrahaḍagalli plates of Śivaskandavarman. Ep. Ind., Vol. I, p. 6.

The present grant mentions eight royal officers, besides the Prime Minister. Five of these figure as witnesses and one more, viṣ., Viṣṇuśarman, as the writer in the preceding grant. The Prime Minister seems to have been changed during the interval. In the present grant he is named Vāghu, while previously the post was held by Dōgarā. The engraver of both the grants was the same man Kēśava.

The donee of the present grant was the Gaitā Laksmīdhara, who is also mentioned in the preceding inscription. He was a student of the Yajurveda and belonged to the Ghṛita-Kauśika gōtra. He was the son of Gadādhara and grandson of Mādhavaśarman.

Of the place-names mentioned here, Pāḍi, where the grant was made, has already been identified. It seems to have been a second capital of Pamparāja; for, the preceding plate also, though granted at Kākaira, was actually engraved at Pāḍi. As for Kōṅgarā, the village donated by Pamparāja, there are three places of that name in the vicinity of Kānkēr. Two of them, Deo Kōṅgērā and Kōṅgērā Biyās, lie close together, 4 miles to the south-east, and the third, Hāṭ-Kōṅgērā, 5 miles to the north of Kānkēr. One of these is probably meant by the Kōṅgarā of the present grant³. Āṇḍali is probably Āndaṇi, 6 miles east of Kānkēr.

According to Kielhorn's calculations, the tithi ended 3 h. 33 m. and the nakshatra was Chitrā by the equal space system and according to Garga for 2 h. 38 m. after mean sunrise. See *Ep. ³ Hiralal connects Śrī-Prāṅkēśvara-saṁnidhāne with Kōṅgarā-grāmā and decides the question in favour of Deo Kōṅgērā. The prefix Deo of this village-name is, according to him, reminiscent of the shrine of Prāṅkēśvara, which, though it has now disappeared, was previously situated close to the village. It seems, however, more probable that the grant was made at the shrine of Prāṅkēśvara and before that deity. For an analogous instance, see the Amōḍā plates of Pṛithivīdēva I, above, No. 76.

the king. Hiralal translates, 'the best of all twice-born and the author of the Uddyōta.' But in that case the expression should have been Uddyōtakara or Uddyōtakāra. Besides no such work of Mādhavaśarma is known. The well-known Nyāya work Uddyōta was composed by Bhāradvāja who flourished in circa 620 A. C. ¹ Hiralal translated : 'after having washed our feet (ceremoniously)'. This is incorrect. See v. 16 of the Amōdā plates (First Set) of Pṛithvidēva II (No. 91, above).

ADDITIONAL INSCRIPTIONS

No. 118; PLATE XCVII

KALACHHALA PLATE OF ISVARARATA

THIS copper-plate was found in the possession of Mr. Gambhirsingh Adesingh Parmar at the village Kalachhala near Karali, about 10 miles west of Chhota Udaipur, in the Bombay State. It was brought to notice by Mr. Amrit Pandya of Vallabh Vidyanagar, who published a transcript of the text, with a photo-lithograph and an eye-copy of the record, but without any translation, in the brochure New Dynasties of Gujarat History (1950), pp. 12 ff. At my request, Mr. Pandya very kindly supplied me with a copy of the photograph from which the record is edited here, the original plate being inaccessible to me.

The copper-plate measures 8" broad and 2" high¹, and is inscribed on one side only. It has a hole in the centre, at the bottom, for the ring which must have connected it with the other plate or plates of the set. The weight of the plate has not been recorded. This is plainly the first plate of a grant which seems to have been written on two or three plates², but the other plate or plates of the set are not forthcoming. The characters belong to the western variety of the southern alphabets and resemble those of the grants of Svāmidāsa and Bhuluṇḍa. The average size of the letters is .2". The letters have small knobs at the top. Many of them, e.g., n, p, m, r, v, ś and ṣ, closely resemble those in the Indore plate of Svāmidāsa. Worthy of note are the initial ī which occurs in Īsvararāta, l. 1, l, the right limb of which is a straight vertical stroke, in kuśala-, l. 4, and the elongated subscript v in =sarvvān-, l. 2. The language is Sanskrit, and the extant portion is wholly in prose. The orthography shows the usual peculiarity of the reduplication of a consonant after r; see =sarvvān-, l. 2.

The plate refers itself to the reign of Īsvararāta. He bears no royal title; but like Svāmidāsa, Bhuluṇḍa and Rudradāsa, he is described as Parama-bhaṭṭāraka-pād-ānudhyāta 'meditating on the feet of the Great Lord'. This plainly indicates that like them, he was a feudatory chief who owed allegiance to some unnamed suzerain. The close resemblance in characters and wording³, which the present grant bears to those of the *Mahārāja*s Svāmidāsa, Bhuluṇḍa and Rudradāsa, suggests that Īsvararāta flourished in the 4th century A.C., and that his suzerain was some king of the Ābhīra dynasty.

The plate was issued from the place Prachakāśā. The royal order is addressed to the officers, Āyuktas, Viniyuktas, Kumārāmātyas, Uparikas, Dāṇḍikas, Dāṇḍapāṭikas, those in charge of elephants, horses and men, chāṭas and bhaṭas as well as to the residents of the village Kupikā, headed by the Brāhmaṇas. The village was situated in the territorial division (paṭṭa) Vaṅkikā. The record ends here abruptly. All other details such as the name of the donee, the object and the occasion of the grant are, therefore, lost. Any date which it may have contained at the end is also unfortunately lost. It may have been recorded in the so-called Kalachuri era.

As for the localities mentioned in this grant, Prachakāśā may be identical with Prakāsha on the Tāpī, 10 miles south by east of Talodā, as has been suggested.⁴ Vaṅkikā, the

² The second plate of the set is said to have been taken away by one Mr. Bechar Tadavi, but it could not be procured for decipherment and publication.

³ There are, in the margin, traces of some letters which may be of the sign-manual of the donor.

headquarters of the territorial division in which the donated village was situated, may be Vānkaḍ, about 20 miles south by east of the town Chhota Udaipur. No place like Kupikā can, however, be traced in its neighbourhood.

Success! Hail! From Prachakāśā;—Īśvararāta, meditating on the feet of the Paramabhaṭṭāraka (Great Lord), is in good health. Having stated his good health, (he) informs all his (Officers) such as the Āyuktas, Viniyuktas,¹² Kumārāmātyas, Uparikas,¹³ Dāṇḍikas,¹⁴ Dāṇḍapāsikas,¹⁵ those in charge of elephants, horses and men, chāṭas and bhaṭas,¹⁶ assembled at the village Kupikā, situated¹⁷ in the territorial division (paṭṭa) of Vaṅkikā, as well as the residents of the village, headed by the Brāhmaṇas (as follows):—

² Expressed by a symbol.

¹¹ Read बोधयति. The following words may have been अस्तु वो विदितम् as in No. 11, l. 4.

¹⁴ Dāṇḍikas may be Magistrates.

¹⁶ For chāṭas and bhaṭas, see above, p. 43, n. 9.

¹⁷ The text has vīṣya, which corresponds to prāvīṣya of the Maitraka grants. Hultsch translated prāvīṣya by 'belonging to'. Sten Konow's rendering 'which can be entered from,' and Sukhtankar's 'which belongs to the prāvīṣa' are both unsatisfactory; for, the former gives no good sense, and as for the latter, prāvīṣa occurs nowhere in the sense of 'a territorial division'. Prāvīṣya, like prāpiya, seems to have become current in the sense of 'belonging to' or 'situated in'.

KALA CHHALA PLATE OF ISVARARATA.

ERAN STONE PILLAR INSCRIPTION OF SRIDHARAVARMAN

THIS inscription is incised on a small stone pillar, afterwards converted into a Siva-linga, which stands near the left bank of the Binā between the ancient town of Ēraṇ and the neighbouring village of Pēhēlējpur, in the Khurai tabsil of the Saugor District in Madhya Pradesh. Another record on the same pillar, viz., the posthumous inscription of Gōparāja, was discovered in 1874-75 by Sir Alexander Cunningham¹, and has been edited by Dr. Fleet in the Corpus Inscriptionum Indicarum, Vol. III, pp. 91 ff. The discovery of the present inscription is due to a fortuitous circumstance. During the inspection tour of 1950-51, Mr. Krishna Dev, Superintendent, Archæological Department, Central Circle, Patna, noticed that the last line of Gōparāja's inscription was concealed by some later accretions to the pīṭha or ablution-trough of the linga. He got these accretions removed, when the present inscription, which was lying concealed under the pīṭha, was disclosed. I came to know of this discovery from a photograph of the record taken by Mr. V. P. Rode, Assistant Curator, Central Museum, Nagpur. At my request Dr. B. Ch. Chhabra, Government Epigraphist for India, kindly supplied me with excellent inked estampages, from which the inscription is edited here.

The pillar, which is now fully exposed to view, measures about 5' 9" high and 1' 6" in diameter. It is the upper part of a large column which appears to have broken naturally in falling, as its bottom is irregularly cut. In the introduction to his article on the inscription of Gōparāja, Dr. Fleet has given the following description of the pillar:—"The bottom part is octagonal; and the inscription² is at the top of this octagonal part, on three of the eight faces, each of which is about 7" broad...Above this, the pillar is sixteen-sided. Above this, it is again octagonal; and the faces here have the sculptures of men and women, who are probably intended for the Gōparāja of the inscription and his wife and friends;³ the compartment immediately above the centre of the inscription, represents a man and a woman, sitting, who must be Gōparāja and his wife. Above this, the pillar is again sixteen-sided. Above this, it is once more octagonal; and on two of the faces here, there are the remains of a quite illegible inscription of four lines, in characters of the same type with those of the inscription now published. Above this, the pillar curves over in sixteen flutes or ribs, into a round top. The pillar was converted into a linga, by fitting an ablution-trough to it; this was attached over the part where the inscription lay; and it was only by the breaking of it, that the greater part of the inscription was disclosed to view." A new pīṭha was substituted later below the inscription of Gōparāja. When it was broken and the whole shaft was dug out, the present inscription was brought to view. It is incised on the lowest portion of the shaft, on three of its eight faces, each measuring about 7" broad, on the side opposite to that where the record of Gōparāja is engraved.

The writing, which originally covered a space 1' 9" broad by 1' 5" high, has suffered a good deal. The portion on the right-hand face is almost completely obliterated, only an akshara here and there being still visible. That on the left-hand and middle faces also has suffered considerably; but most of it can be read with patience and perseverance. The characters are of the western variety of the southern alphabets, closely resembling those of the Kānākhērā inscription¹ of Śrīdhavarman. The size of the letters is about '5". At the top of the letters there are knobs which in some cases appear triangular. The peculiarities of individual letters are as follows:—The apex of the initial ē is on the left in ētad-divasam-, l. 4; the lower horizontal line of j slants downwards and in some places ends in a curve; see -vijayinaḥ, l. 2 and -vijaya-, l. 1; the subscript lingual ṭ is slanting in Māhārāshṭrēna, l. 7, but not in yashṭi-, l. 9; the subscript th is laid on its side in -sthiti-, l. 9 and sthūnam-, l. 10, but not in tīrttham, l. 5; m appears in two forms:—(i) that which shows a horizontal base line with or without a loop on the left; see the superscript m in -varmmaṇaḥ, l. 2 and dharmmān, l. 9 and (ii) the older one with a loop at the bottom; see Mahākshatrapasa, l. 1; v is generally triangular, but in some places it appears roundish; see -Śrīdhavarmmaṇaḥ, l. 2; and ś is cursive in some places; see -vimśati-, l. 3. The numerical symbols for 7 and 20 occur in l. 3. The language is Sanskrit. Like the Kānākhērā inscription, the record begins in prose and is rounded off with a verse at the end. Worthy of note are the Prakritisms, the genitive affix sa instead of sya in Mahākshatrapasa, l. 1, which occurs often in pre-Gupta Kshatrapa records, and vimśatimē for vimśatitamē in l. 3. The rules of sandhi are either not observed or are violated in some cases; see rājñah Ārakshikēna, l. 6 and Māhārāshṭrēna, l. 7. Otherwise, the record is written in a good style².

The inscription refers itself to the reign of the Rājan and Mahākshatrapa Śrīdhavarman, the son of the Śaka Nanda, who was probably described in the lost portion of the record as a devotee of Mahāsēna (Kārttikēya). As in the Kānākhērā inscription, he is described here as dharmavijayin or a righteous conqueror. The record is dated in the twenty-seventh regnal year, expressed both in words and in numerical symbols. The month, fortnight and lunar day were also probably recorded at the end of line 3 as in the Kānākhērā inscription, but are now completely obliterated. Unlike the latter record, however, the present inscription does not contain any date of the Kalachuri or any other era, at least in the preserved portion.³

Owing to the unfortunate loss of its one-third portion, the record does not admit of a complete description of its contents; but its object appears to have been twofold: (i) to record the construction, by a person whose name appears to be Nārāyaṇasvāmin, of a tirtha or stairs for descent into the river⁴ at the adhishṭhāna of Ērikiṇa in the territorial division Bāhirikā of the *Nagendra*⁵ ābāra for the well-being of the adhishṭhāna headed by the cows and the Brāhmaṇas as well as for the increase of the religious merit of the person's father and mother, and (ii) to mention the erection of a memorial pillar, called yashṭi in l. 9, by Satyanāga, the Ārakshika and Sēnāpati of the Śaka Mahākshatrapa and Rājan Śrīdhavarman, at the same adhishṭhāna for the removal of calamities, the attainment of

prosperity and the happiness and well-being of all creatures.¹ Satyanāga appears to be described further as a native of Mahārāshṭra and as the chief, apparently, of the Nāgas. The concluding verse expresses the hope that the yashṭi, enduring unimpaired, would proclaim there the duties of the warlike people; for it was a place where people—friends as well as foes—met together in a spirit of service and reverence.

The Saka king Śrīdhavarman, the son of the Saka Nanda, is already known from the Kānākhērā inscription dated in his thirteenth year; but as he bears only the military title Mahādandanāyaka in that record, he was supposed by some scholars to be a military officer of some other ruler. The present inscription, which mentions the titles Rājan and Mahākshatrapa in connection with his name, leaves no room for doubt that he was an independent king. Though he bears the title Mahākshatrapa, he did not probably belong to the house of Chasṭana; for, unlike the Western Kshatrapas, he does not date his records in the Saka era.

The column on which the present inscription is incised is called yashṭi or a memorial pillar². In its corrupt form lasṭi, this word occurs in four inscriptions of the reign of the Western Kshatrapa Rudradāman, dated in the Saka year 52 (130 A.C.), which were discovered at Andhau in Cutch. Mr. R. D. Banerji, who has edited them in the *Epigraphia Indica*³, took yashṭi (Prakrit laṭṭhi) to mean 'a funeral monument.' Another inscription, incised on a narrow stone slab⁴ with a pointed top, which was discovered at Mūlavāsara near Dwārakā in Saurashtra, mentions that it was a silā-lasṭi (Sanskrit, śilā-yashṭi), raised as a memorial to a person who had sacrificed his life for the sake of his friend. The monuments at Andhau and Mūlavāsara were raised by private individuals in memory of their relatives, and are in the form of long narrow slabs. They cannot be taken to be in the standard form of a yashṭi. The Sui-Vihāra copper-plate inscription, dated in the 11th regnal year of Kanishka, mentions that a yashṭi was raised (in memory) of the Bhikshu Nāgadatta. Dr. Sten Konow takes yashṭi in the sense of 'a staff.'⁵ The Sanskrit word yashṭi is also known to occur in the form vala-yashṭi in the Bhumarā pillar inscription of the Mahārājas Hastin and Sarvanātha.⁶ That record is incised on one of the faces of a small sand-stone pillar. Fleet translated vala-yashṭi (which he took to be a mistake for valaya-yashṭi) by 'a boundary pillar'. A similar word, bala-yashṭi, occurs also in a pillar inscription of Skandagupta, discovered by Dr. Chhabra at Supia in the former Rewa State.⁷ The present inscription, which calls the pillar at Ēraṇ yashṭi, indicates for the first time the standard form of a memorial pillar, as distinguished from a victory pillar (jaya-stambha or raṇa-stambha) or a flag-staff (dhvaja-stambha).

² Yashṭi occurs in the Manusmṛiti, adhyāya IX, v. 285, where Mēdhātithi explains it as dāv-āyatanēshu yashṭiḥ (a post erected in temples), and Kullūka as yashṭiḥ pusbkarīṇy-ādan (a post such as stands in tanks etc.). Other commentators explain it as 'a flag-staff erected near villages etc.', or as 'the pole of the Indra-daṇḍa'. Bühler and Gangānath Jha translated it by 'a pole'. The Manusmṛiti, which lays down a fine for the destruction of a yashṭi, probably uses the word in the sense of 'a memorial pillar', but this sense of it seems to have been forgotten in course of time.

⁷ I owe this information to the kindness of Dr. Chhabra. He takes bala-yashṭi in the sense of 'a stone monument in the shape of a shaft'.

The pillar at Eraṇ was originally a large one. Supposing that the bottom line of the present inscription which was originally incised on it was at the same height as in the case of the pillar inscription¹ of Budhagupta at the same town, i.e., about 3' 3" above the ground, the total height of the yashṭi may have been about 9' above the plinth. Its top does not appear to have been tampered with. So a standard yashṭi seems to have been generally eight- or sixteen-sided, with a round top, but without any capital such as that which generally crowns a jaya-stambha or a dhvaja-stambha. It was generally decorated with panels of warriors or scenes of fighting.

The present pillar was erected by Satyanāga, the Sēnāpati of the Śaka king Śrīdhara-varman, apparently to commemorate some great battle, fought at Erikiṇa (modern Eraṇ), in which several Nāga soldiers had met with a hero's death. This is indicated by the original sculptures carved on it. On each of the three faces of its middle octagonal part on the same side as the present inscription, there is a compartment showing a horseman holding the reins of his horse in the left hand and a sword or a javelin in the right.² In the present inscription Satyanāga expresses the hope that the yashṭi raised by the Nāgas themselves (nāgair-ēva) would inspire future generations of warlike people to perform similar heroic deeds; for, it was a place where friends and foes met in a spirit of service and reverence. This description fits Eraṇ very well. It was the battle-ground of hostile powers for several centuries as shown by several Satī-stones and inscriptions with dates ranging from the fourth to the eighteenth century A. C.³ One of the memorable battles fought at Eraṇ was during the reign of the Gupta Emperor Bhānugupta in the Gupta year 191 (510-11 A. C.). In this battle Gōparāja, 'renowned for manliness', who had accompanied Bhānugupta as his ally, died fighting. His wife immolated herself on his funeral pyre. The event was fittingly commemorated, evidently by the order of the Gupta Emperor, by incising another short inscription on the opposite side of the same yashṭi which had been exhorting warlike people to perform such heroic deeds for more than a century. A panel, showing Gōparāja and his wife sitting on a couch, was also sculptured on the face of the pillar immediately above the centre of that inscription.⁴ Later, the pillar seems to have fallen down and broken to pieces. As it had a round top, it was found serviceable by some devotee of Śiva, who turned it into a Śiva-līṅga by fitting a piṭha or ablution-trough to it. Both the inscriptions on it were concealed from view—that of Satyanāga was on the part buried underground, while the other one, commemorating Gōparāja's death, was hidden by the piṭha. None could, therefore, suspect that the līṅga was originally a yashṭi or memorial pillar, notwithstanding the panels carved on it.⁵

As for the geographical names occurring in the present inscription, Mahārāshṭra finds epigraphic mention here for the first time. From the Aiholē inscription which is

² The inscription is slightly misplaced with reference to the sculptures. If we designate the faces of the pillar as A, B, C and D, the inscription is on the faces A, B and C, while the sculptures of the horsemen are on B, C and D. The sculpture on the face D is slightly damaged by a narrow channel, subsequently cut into the centre of it from the bottom upwards. Four small holes are now seen in the lower part of the channel. In Saurashtra such memorial stones are usually marked with the figure of a horseman. D. R. Bhandarkar Volume, p. 174. They are called paṭhyās in Gujarat and Saurashtra, virakal in South India and vīrgal in Maharashtra.

³ C.A.S.I. R., Vol. X, pp. 89 ff.

nearly three centuries later, we know of three Mahārāshṭras, consisting of 99000 villages. They evidently comprised the present Northern and Southern Mahārāshṭras and the Marathi-speaking parts of the States of Madhya Pradesh and Hyderabad. All this territory was generally grouped under the single comprehensive name of Mahārāshṭra mentioned in the Epics, Purāṇas and other works of Sanskrit literature. Satyanāga seems to have taken pride in mentioning his Mahārāshṭra origin. Ērikiṇa is modern Ēraṇ. The place-name occurs as Ērakaṇa (i.e., Ērikiṇa, with the vowels restored) on the coins published by Cunningham¹ and as Ērakina in an inscription on the Sāñchī Stūpa². Later, the name occurs in the form Airikiṇa in the Ēraṇ inscriptions of Samudragupta and Tōramāṇa. The adhiśṭhāna of Ērikiṇa was included in the territorial division Bāhirikā in the ābhāra of Nagēndra. Both these names are otherwise unknown³.

³ Bāhirikā, of course, occurs as the name of a viśaya in distant Gujarat as stated above. See p. 606, n. 5, above.

⁴ From the original pillar which I examined in situ and from inked estampages kindly supplied by Dr. Chhabra. I am indebted to Dr. Chhabra, Mr. N. L. Rao and Mr. Y. R. Gupte for the reading of a few words in this much abraded inscription.

¹⁵ Read नगेन्द्राहारस्य बाहिरिकायां. This is an instance of सापेक्षसमास. Some word like पणके, meaning

'a territorial division', may have followed बाहिरिकायां. The river at which the tīrtha was constructed may also have been named. The lost portion may, therefore, be conjecturally restored as follows :—पथके वेण्वानद्यां कारितं नारा—.

³ Read राज आरक्षिकेण.

⁴ There are fairly clear traces of these two akṣharas, but whether the intended word was महाराज— or महाराष्ट्र—, it is difficult to say. As Śrīdhavarman bears the title Rājan in lines 1 and 6, it appears more likely that the word was महाराष्ट्र. The missing words may be conjecturally restored as महाराष्ट्राभिजननागानां प्रमुखेन.

⁵ The word is formed according to Pāṇini, IV, 3, 90.

¹⁰ Metre: Sragdharā.

NO. 120 ; PLATE XCIX

NAGARDHAN PLATES OF SVAMIRAJA : (KALACHURI) YEAR 322

THESE copper-plates were discovered in 1948 at Nagardhan, a small village about 3 miles south of Rāmṭēk, the chief town of a taluk of the same name in the Nagpur District of Madhya Pradesh. Mr. Hiralal Upasrao Mahadule of Nagardhan, who obtained possession of the plates, handed them over to me for decipherment. They were first published by me in the Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XXVIII, pp. 1 ff. The record is edited here from the original plates and their ink impressions taken kindly for me by Mr. V. K. Aiyar, Superintendent, Government Press, Nagpur.

They are three copper-plates, each measuring 7.9" in length and 4.1" in height. The first and third plates are inscribed on one side, and the second, on both the sides. The plates are held together by a ring, $\frac{1}{2}$ " in thickness and 2" in diameter, on which slides a small circular band with a rectangular seal, measuring 1.2" by 1", which is soldered to it. The surface of the seal is divided by a horizontal line into two almost equal parts. The upper part contains a symbol, apparently a goad, lying horizontally, while the lower has the legend Gaṇa-dattiḥ, meaning 'a gift of the Corporation', inscribed in the same characters as those of the grant. The plates together weigh 67 $\frac{1}{2}$ tolas, and the ring and the seal, 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ tolas. This mode of stringing the plates together resembles that of the Vākāṭaka grants, though the seal here is rectangular, not round as in the latter grants. The plates are in a state of good preservation, and there is no uncertainty in the reading of any part of the text.

The record consists of 28 lines, which are evenly divided on the four inscribed faces of the three plates. The characters are of the box-headed variety, the boxes at the top

² Yashṭi is a memorial pillar erected to commemorate some notable event or the death of a person. See above, p. 607.

of the letters being scooped out hollow. They are beautifully formed, being more cursive and round than those of the Vākāṭaka grants. They resemble very closely the characters of the Early Gaṅga grants of the sixth or seventh century A.C.¹ As regards individual letters, we may note the forms of initial u which occurs in ll. 8, 14, 19, 24 and 27, of initial ē in l. 13, and of initial au in l. 10. The right stroke of l, which is mostly vertical in the Vākāṭaka grants, sharply turns to the left and encircles the letter as in the later records of the Kalachuris and the Gurjaras of Gujarat; see kuṣali, l. 2; a final consonant is indicated by its small size; see Nāndivardhanāt, l. 1; punctuation is generally indicated by a small horizontal stroke, but in some cases by two vertical strokes, the first of which is sporadically hooked at the top.

The language is Sanskrit, and except for two verses at the end in ll. 24-27, the record is in prose throughout. As regards orthography, the only peculiarities that call for notice are the use of ri for the medial vowel ṛi in -bhrātri-, l. 2 and nirishṭaḥ, l. 20; of the guttural nasal ṇi for anusvāra in dvāviṇśē, l. 28; and of anusvāra for final n in -drāṅgi-kādīm, l. 3. In other respects, the record is remarkably free from errors of orthography, though in places it is not altogether devoid of uncertainty of meaning.

The plates were issued from Nandivardhana by Nannarāja, who meditated on the feet of his brother Svāmīrāja, during whose reign the grant was made.² Svāmīrāja is described as Bhaṭṭāraka-pād-ānudhyāta 'meditating on the feet of the lord paramount', which indicates his feudatory status. Neither the family to which these princes belonged nor the suzerain to whom they owed allegiance is mentioned in the present grant. No ancestors of Svāmīrāja have been named. In all these respects the present grant resembles those of the Mahārājas of Khandesh.³

The object of the inscription appears to be to record two gifts: (i) one of two nivartanas of land in the village Chiñchapattikā, which was made at the request of the President (Sthavira) and Members of the Executive Committee (Pramukhas) of the assembly (Samāha) of the Corporation (Gaṇa) Mahāmātragaṇa, and (ii) the other of the village Aṅkōllikā, which was made by Nannarāja (or, perhaps by Svāmīrāja) on his own account near the *Chaṭuka-vaṭa*⁴, situated in the stream of the Gaṅgā, on the occasion of an eclipse which occurred on the new-moon day of Chaitra in the cyclic year Āshāḍha. The donated village Aṅkollikā was situated on the right bank of the river Sūla, to the west of the agrahāra of Achalapura and to the east of Śrīparṇikā. The donees were certain Brāhmaṇas of the White and Black Yajurvedas and the Sāmaveda. The inscription contains another date at the end, when the plates were issued, viz., the fifth tithi (expressed by a symbol) of the bright fortnight of Kārttika in the year three hundred and twenty-two (expressed in words) of an unspecified era. The engraver was the Kshatriya Durgāditya, the son of Chandra.

As stated before, the royal family to which Svāmīrāja and Nannarāja belonged is not specified in the present grant, but since these names occur in two early Rāshtrakūṭa

records discovered in Vidarbha, viz., the Tivarakhēd¹ and the Multai² plates, with the slight change of Svāmīrāja into Svāmīkarāja, it seems very likely that the princes mentioned here also belonged to the same royal lineage.³

The plates state, in lines 14-15, that the grant of Nannarāja was made on the occasion of a (solar) eclipse on Chaitra amāvāsyā in the cyclic year Āshāḍha. This year was evidently of the twelve-year cycle of Jupiter. The system of citing the years of this cycle was current in early times and continued till the sixth century A.C. In North India five such dates, with the word mabā prefixed to the name of the year, were discovered in the grants of the Parivrājaka Mahārājas Hastin and Saṅkshōbha, from which Dr. Fleet and Mr. Sh. B. Dikshit calculated the epoch of the Gupta era⁴. Some more dates of this kind have since then been discovered. In South India also, some dates of this kind have been noticed in the records of the Early Rāshtrakūṭas⁵, the Kadambas⁶ and the kings of Kalinga⁷, but they do not admit of verification in the absence of the necessary details. The present grant is thus unique in that it mentions such details together with the name of the cyclic year and the date of an era. Let us see whether the details work out regularly for any of the known eras.

If the year 322 is referred to the Gupta era, it would correspond to 641-42 A.C. There was, however, no solar eclipse in the amānta or pūrṇimānta Chaitra of that year. Besides, the cyclic year was Phālguna⁸, not Āshāḍha as stated in the grant. The nearest solar eclipse in Chaitra occurred on the 21st March 638 A.C., but then too the cyclic year was Mārgaśīrsha, not Āshāḍha. Again, there is no evidence that the Gupta era was current in Vidarbha or, for the matter of that, anywhere in Maharashtra. The year 322 of the present grant cannot, therefore, be referred to the Gupta era.

The only other era to which this date can be referred is the Kalachuri era, which was current in the neighbouring districts of Khandesh and Nasik⁹. Let us next see if the details work out satisfactorily for this era.

The epoch which suits early dates of the Kalachuri era is 248-49 A.C. If the year 322 is referred to this era, it should be equivalent to 570-71 or 571-72 A.C. according as it was current or expired. But in neither of these years, was there a solar eclipse in the amānta or pūrṇimānta Chaitra. There was, however, such an eclipse in the immediately following year 573 A.C., on the 19th March, which was the amāvāsyā of the amānta Chaitra. The year of the twelve-year cycle was also Āshāḍha according to the mean-sign system. The agreement of these three details, viz., the solar eclipse, the lunar month and the cyclic year shows that the 19th March 573 A.C. is undoubtedly the correct date of the grant.

³ Svāmīrāja and his brother Nannarāja were not, however, identical with Svāmīkarāja and his son Nannarāja. The latter flourished at the close of the seventh and in the beginning of the eighth century A.C. as shown by the Multai plates dated Śaka 631 (709-10 A.C.). The Tivarakhēd plates, which give the earlier date of Śaka 553 (631-32 A.C.), are undoubtedly spurious. The present grant, on the other hand, was made in 573 A.C., more than a hundred and thirty-five years before, as shown below. For a detailed examination of this question, see Ind. Hist. Quart., Vol. XXV, pp. 138 ff.

⁶ Ind. Ant., Vol. VII, pp. 35 ff. and Vol. VI, pp. 24 ff.

⁷ Ep. Ind., Vol. XXIV, pp. 47 ff.

⁹ See dates of Nos. 2-4, 28 and 31, above.

The palæography of the grant also supports this date; for, as stated before, its characters resemble those of the early Gaṅga grants, and must, therefore, be referred to the sixth century A.C. Besides, the wording of the formal portion of the present grant shows that it must be classed with such early grants as those of the Mahārājas of Khandesh, Subandhu of Māhishmatī and the Traikūṭakas of Western Maharashtra.

As stated before, the epoch of 248-49 A.C. does not hold good in the present case. Supposing the year of the present grant to be Kārttikādi and expired as in most other early dates, the epoch of the era applicable in the present case would be 250-51 A.C. The solar eclipse in Chaitra when the grant was made must have occurred in the Kārttikādi Kalachuri year 321. The amāvāsya of the amānta Chaitra in the expired year 321 fell, according to the proposed epoch of 250-51 A.C., on the 19th March 573 A.C. On that day, there was a solar eclipse visible in India, and the Bārhaspatya samvatsara also was Āshāḍha as stated in the grant.¹

The grant under discussion is unique in another respect also. It is the only grant dated in the Kalachuri era that has been found in Vidarbha. The earlier grants of the Vākāṭakas who ruled in Vidarbha are dated in regnal years, while the later ones of the Rāshtrakūṭas are recorded in the Saka era. The present grant, which belongs to the intervening period, is dated in the Kalachuri era evidently because that era had spread to Vidarbha with the spread of the Kalachuri power. The unnamed suzerain of Svāmīrāja was probably the Kalachuri Kṛishṇarāja (circa 550-575 A.C.). It is noteworthy that the silver coins of this Kṛishṇarāja have been discovered at some places in Vidarbha, viz., at Dhāmōri in the Amaravati District and Paṭṭan in the Betul District.

The present grant is interesting in several other respects also. It is one of the few copper-plate grants to which a Gaṇa (Corporation) is seen to have affixed its own seal. The Corporation was of elephant-drivers (Mahāmātras).² Its President was called Sthavira,³ and the members of the Executive Committee, who seem to have numbered twelve, Pramukhas.⁴ The assembly of the Corporation was called Samūha.⁵ The Gaṇa had, among its leaders, one who was Pilupati (Chief of the Elephant Corps) and another who was Hastivaidya (Physician of Elephants).⁶ The Corporation had apparently no authority to make any grants of land; for, it had to request the ruling prince to make one on their behalf; but it was allowed to affix its own seal containing its own peculiar emblem of a goad.⁷ This

⁴ The Indor copper-plate inscription uses pravara in the sense of pramukha. C.I.I., Vol. III, p. 70.

⁵ For samūha meaning 'the assembly of a gaṇa', see Prīhaspatī-smṛiti, XVII, 20.

⁶ It is noteworthy that Viśvarūpa, the oldest commentator of the Yājñavalkya-smṛiti, explains gaṇa as 'a corporation of elephant-riders and others'. Cf. vaṇik-samūho gaṇah, bastyāḍb-ādi-samūha ity=anyā in Viśvarūpa's commentary on Y.S., II, 196.

shows that it wielded considerable power in the State.¹

As for the localities mentioned in the present grant, Nandivardhana, from which the plates were issued, has already been identified with Nagardhan. This identification has been corroborated by the present record. Nagardhan is also said to have been known by the name of Nandardhan which corresponds to Nandivardhana. Achalapura is usually identified with a place of the same name (former Ellichpur) in the Amaravati District; but there is no river named Sūlanadī flowing by its side. The Achalapura mentioned in the present plates as an agrabāra village was probably situated not far from Nandivardhana. The Sūlanadī, on the bank of which it lay, is probably identical with the river Sūr² which flows only about 4 miles east of Nagardhan. Āṅkōllikā, which was situated on the bank of the Sūlanadī, may be identical with modern Aroli, on the right bank of the Sūr, about 8 miles south by east of Nagardhan; but there are no places corresponding to Achalapura and Śrīparṇikā in its vicinity. Chiñchapattikā is probably represented by the village Chichal, about a mile and a half north by east of Nagardhan.

PRINCE OF WALES MUSEUM PLATES OF DADDA III : (KALACHURI) YEAR 427

THESE plates were in the possession of the Prince of Wales Museum, Bombay. They were sent by the Curator of the Museum to the Government Epigraphist for India, who

kindly supplied their ink impression to me for inclusion of the record in this Volume.¹ The plates are edited here from that impression.

They are two copper-plates, each measuring 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ " long, 6 $\frac{7}{8}$ " broad and $\frac{1}{8}$ " thick. Their edges have been fashioned thicker so as to serve as rims for the protection of the writing. The plates have each, at the top, two holes, about $\frac{1}{2}$ " in diameter, for the rings which must have originally held them together; but neither the rings nor the seal which must have been affixed to one of them is forthcoming now. The plates together weigh 178 tolas. They are inscribed only on the inner side. The record consists of 30 lines, which are equally divided on the two plates. The last line which contains the sign-manual of the reigning king is only 2.9" long.

The characters belong to the western variety of the southern alphabets, resembling those of the other Gurjara grants². As regards individual letters, attention may be drawn to the form of the initial i which consists of two indented curves, one below the other; see iva, l. 3; the medial u is shown by raising the vertical again to the top or by adding a flowing curve to it; see ru in Bharukachchhāt, l. 1 and guru-, l. 10; ḍ has a tail in -danḍa-, l. 17; ṇ shows its upper curve turned inside; see a-śaṅkit-, l. 5; b is rectangular in -bindu-, l. 22 and round in -bāhu-, l. 13; l has two forms—the old one as in -lōka-, l. 4 and the cursive one as in sakala-, both in l. 4; ś also appears in two forms, with its bar slanting as in -śālīni, l. 2, or horizontal as in -varṇṇ-āśrama-, l. 8. A final consonant is indicated by a flowing curve commencing at the top as in vasēt, l. 25. Punctuation is marked by double dots or by single or double vertical strokes. The sign-manual of the donor is in northern characters and exhibits straight top-strokes as in the modern Nāgarī. The numerical symbols for 400, 20 and 7 occur in l. 29. It is noteworthy that the symbol for 4, which is added to the sign for 100 to turn it into one for 400, is unlike that used in other records of the period³, being closely similar to that for 100, and the symbol for 7 has an indented top.

The language is Sanskrit. The eulogistic and formal parts of the grant are mutatis mutandis identical with the respective portions of the grants of Jayabhaṭa III and later Gurjara princes. Except for four benedictive and imprecatory verses which occur at the end, the whole record is in prose. As regards orthography, the only peculiarities which call for notice are as follows:—the reduplication of the consonant following r, rightly in such cases as -Kaṛṇṇ-ānvayē, l. 2, but wrongly in -Harshsha-, l. 4 and varshsha-, l. 24, that of the consonant preceding r as in puttra-, l. 18, the use of ri for the vowel ṛi as in krishṇ-ābhayō, l. 26 and of n for anusvāra in rājahansaḥ, l. 3.

The plates refer themselves to the reign of Dadda III alias Bāhusahāya of the Early Gurjara Dynasty. He was a devout worshipper of Mahēśvara and had attained the pañchamahāśabda. As in other later records, his family is said to have descended from the epic hero Karna. The genealogy of the donor is traced from Dadda II, who is said to have obtained great glory by the protection he gave to the king of Valabhī when the latter was defeated by the Emperor Harsha. The description of this Dadda II, his son Jayabhaṭa II and the latter's son Dadda III who made the present grant, is given here exactly as in other later records of the period⁴. The plates were issued from Bharukachchha.

The object of the present inscription is to record the grant, by Dadda III-Bāhusahāya, of the village Uvarivadra in the territorial division Kōrēlla-Eighty-four. The donee was a Brāhmaṇa of the Bharadvāja gōtra, who resided at the village Sāvatthī.

⁴ See, e.g., Nos. 21, 22 and 24.

His name is inadvertently omitted, but he is described as a student of the Ṛigvēda and as the son of Gaṅgāditya who was himself the son of Dundubhibhaṭṭa. The village was donated together with an elephant-chariot on the occasion of the ratha-saptamī, i.e., the seventh tithi of the bright fortnight of Māgha, in the year 427 (expressed in numerical symbols only). The charter was written by Saṅgulla, the son of Durgabhaṭa, who held the office of Mahāsandhivigrahādhīpati (the Chief Minister for peace and war). Another son of this Durgabhaṭa, Sahabhaṭa by name, who was a military officer (Balādhikṛita), wrote the Anjanēri plates¹ of Jayabhaṭa III, dated K. 460. Saṅgulla, the scribe of the present plates, must be distinguished from the homonymous writer of the Prince of Wales Museum plates of Jayabhaṭa IV, dated K. 486; for, the latter Saṅgulla, who lived about 60 years later, was the son of Alla², not of Durgabhaṭa. He may have been a grandson of the writer of the present plates.

It is noteworthy that though Dadda III was himself a devotee of Maheśvara (Siva), he made the present grant in honour of the Sun, the tutelary deity worshipped by his ancestors from Dadda I onwards³. The seventh tithi of the bright fortnight of Māgha, called *rathasaptamī*⁴, is sacred to the Sun; for his form is believed to have been revealed to the gods on that day⁵. It is regarded as holy as the day of a solar eclipse⁶, and a gift made on that day is regarded as very meritorious. The gift of an elephant is specially commended in the Purāṇas as ensuring a wide dominion to the donor.

The date of the present plates, like those of the other Gurjara grants, must be referred to the Kalachuri era. If the year 427 was expired, it would correspond to the 16th January 677 A. C.; but since the Maitraka king Śilāditya III also made a grant at Bharukachchha on this very tithi (Māgha-suddha-saptamī) in the Gupta year 357 (677 A. C.), it appears likely that the Kalachuri year mentioned in the present grant was current. The date would, therefore, correspond to the 29th December 675 A. C. It does not admit of verification.

Dadda III claims to have obtained victories over the rulers of the east and the west. The ruler of the west was probably the contemporary king of Valabhī, Śilāditya III, whose known dates range from G. 342 to G. 365, i.e., from 661-62 A.C. to 684-85 A.C. It is not known whether Dadda III actually defeated the Maitraka king who had assumed the Imperial titles Paramabhaṭṭāraka, Mahārājādhirāja and Paramēśvara and was evidently a very powerful ruler; but if he did, the latter soon took revenge. He raided the Gurjara kingdom and occupied it for some time. This is known from his Anastu plates⁷ which record the grant of a village in the Bharukachchha viśaya, i.e., the district of Broach in which the Gurjara capital was situated, in G. 357 (the 16th January 677 A.C.), just a year after the date of the present plates. The grant was made on the same tithi, viz., Māgha śu. di. 7. This leaves no doubt that Śilāditya III had annexed at least the coastal portion of the Gurjara kingdom to his own dominion in that year.

As for the localities mentioned in the present plates, Bharukachchha is well-known as the ancient name of Broach. Kōrēlla-Eighty-four is probably identical with the territorial division Korillā-pathaka mentioned in the Navsāri plates of Jayabhaṭa III. Kōrēlla, its headquarters, is probably identical with Koral on the southern bank of the Narmadā.

³ See, e. g., No. 16, ll. 4 and 52.

⁴ A later record (No. 88, l. 19) mentions rath-āṣṭamī, but this is not supported by the Purāṇas.

⁷ Gadre, Important Inscriptions from the Baroda State, Vol. I, pp. 23 ff.

Uvarivadra, the donated village, may be Umarwārā, about 8 miles south of Broach. Sāvattī, where the donee was residing, cannot be distant Sahet-Mahet on the Rāptī. It must have been situated not very far from the donated village; but no place exactly corresponding to it can be traced in the vicinity of Umarwārā. Perhaps it is Sāvā, about 8 miles south by east from Umarwārā.

NO. 122 ; PLATE CI

PARAGAON PLATES OF RATNADEVA II : KALACHURI YEAR 88;

THESE plates were discovered near the village Pāragaon, about 7 miles north of Baloda Bazar in the Raipur District of the Chhattisgarh Division in Madhya Pradesh. They were sent by the Deputy Commissioner, Raipur, to the Government Epigraphist for India for decipherment. They are now in the possession of the former Malguzar of the village. They are edited here from excellent ink impressions kindly supplied by the Government Epigraphist.

They are two copper-plates, each measuring 12.2" broad and 7.7" high, and are inscribed on the inner side only. They have raised rims for the protection of the writing and are held together by a ring passing through a hole, .5" in diameter, in the centre of the top of the upper side of each plate. The ring carries a detachable round seal, 2.5" in diameter, which has, inside a circular border of knobs, the figure of Lakshmi seated on a lotus, with an elephant on either side pouring water over her. The figures of the goddess and the elephant are beautifully executed. Below the lotus-seat of the goddess appears the legend Rāja-śrīmad-Ratnadēva in two lines in the Nāgarī characters¹ like those of the copper-plate grant. Below the legend is seen a sheathed sword as on the seal and coins of Pratāpamalla². The weight of the plates is 251½ tolas and that of the ring, 21 tolas.

The record consists of thirty lines, fifteen being inscribed on the inner side of each plate. The characters are Nāgarī. The average size of the letters is .4". They are neatly written and carefully engraved, and resemble those of the Sarkhō plates of the same king³. The only peculiarities worth noticing are as follows:—The letter ṇ appears without a dot in -vēdāṅga-, l. 21; dh is still without a horn on the left; see -dbātryā, l. 4; and the loop of th touches the line at the top; see ath=āśya, l. 3. The language is Sanskrit, and except for Om namō Vrahmaṇē in the beginning and the date and maṅgalaṁ mahā-śrīḥ at the end, the whole record is metrically composed. It has twenty-one verses, all of which are numbered. The metre of verse 12 is faulty. The first eleven verses, which trace the genealogy of Ratnadēva II from Kōkalla, occur in the same order in the earlier Sarkhō plates. The verses in the formal portion are, of course, different. The orthography shows the usual peculiarities of the use of ṽ for b except in the perfect forms of the root bhū, the reduplication of the consonant following r and the use of the dental s for the palatal ś and vice versa, though rarely; see vrahmaṇē, l. 1; dharmma-, l. 7; sasvat-, l. 7 and āśit-, l. 9.

The plates refer themselves to the reign of Ratnadēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. They record the grant, by Ratnadēva II, of the village Vōḍalā, situated in Kōsala, on the occasion of the solar eclipse which occurred in the month of Kārttika. The donee was Padmanābha, the son of Hariśarman and grandson of Sahadēva who had emigrated from the village Gōri. He belonged to the Bhārgava gōtra with the five pravaras Bhārgava, Chyavana, Āpnavāna, Aurva and Jāmadgnya.

The plates are dated, in the last line, on Wednesday, the first tithi of the bright fortnight of Āśvina in the Kalachuri year 885. The tithi and the year are expressed in decimal figures only. This is one of the few dates which name the Kalachuri era specifically. According to the epoch of 247-48 A.C., the date corresponds, for the expired year 885, to Wednesday, the 19th September 1134 A.C. On that day the tithi Āśvina śu. di. 1 commenced 19 h. 40 m. after mean sunrise. This date is important for determining the initial day of the Kalachuri year⁴. It shows clearly that with the epoch of 247-48 A.C. which is seen to hold good in all later dates from North India and Chhattisgarh, the year of the

⁴ For other dates of the same type, see Nos. 63 and 94, above.

Kalachuri era could not have commenced in the month of Āśvina as was supposed by Prof. Kielhorn.¹

The grant purports to have been made on the occasion of the solar eclipse which occurred in the month of Kārttika, evidently in the Kalachuri year 885 recorded at the end of the grant; but neither in that year (corresponding to 1133-34 A. C.) nor in either of the two preceding years K. 883 and K. 884 (corresponding to 1131-32 and 1132-33 A.C. respectively), was there any solar eclipse in the month of Kārttika, amānta or pūrṇimānta. There was, however, a solar eclipse in the month of pūrṇimānta Śrāvaṇa in K. 885. It occurred on the 23rd July 1134 A.C. It would, therefore, seem that Kārttikē māsi in v. 15 is a mistake for Śrāvaṇē māsi. This proposed reading would also suit the metre of v. 15 very well. Besides, this would reduce the interval between the date of the grant and the issue of the plates to about two months, which appears quite plausible.²

As for the localities mentioned in the present plates, the village Gōri, from which the donee's grandfather had emigrated, may be Gōrā, 18 miles almost due south of Pāra-gaon. Kōsala is, of course, Dakṣiṇa-Kōsala, roughly corresponding to modern Chhat-tisgarh. Vōḍalā may be Bōludā, 27 miles south by east of Pāra-gaon in the Baloda Bazar tahsil of the Raipur District.

² If the reading Kārttikē māsi is regarded as correct, the mistake will have to be attributed to the wrong calculations of the astronomers of the court of Ratnadēva II. That some of the astronomers were not following then the correct methods of calculation is shown by the Sarkhō plates of this king; see above, p. 424.

TRANSLATION

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to Brahman !

(For a translation of verses 1-11, see above, pp. 428-29.)

(Verse 12) There was a Brāhmaṇa, Sahadēva (by name), of the Bhārgava gōtra, with the five pravaras, Bhārgava, Chyavana, Āpnavāna, Aurva and Jāmdagnya, who had emigrated from the village Gōri.

(V. 13) From him was (born) Hariśarman, who was conversant with the Vēdas, Smṛitis and Purāṇas (and who was) the birth-place of sacrificial knowledge and the abode of righteous conduct.

(V. 14) There was his son Padmanābha, who was conversant with the Vēdas and Vēdāṅgas, who maintained the sacred fire, who was devoted to righteous conduct and was pious, and who resembled (the god) Padmanābha (Vishṇu).

(V. 15) This king Ratnadēva (II), who is always devoted to religion, has donated with devotion this village named Vōḍalā, (situated) in Kōsala, to that Padmanābha, when the sun was devoured by Rāhu in the month of Kārttika.

(V. 15) Whoever king or Amātya there might be even in another age, he also should always preserve this gift with care.

(Here follow five benedictive and imprecatory verses.)

In the Kalachuri year 885, (the month) Āśvina, the bright (fortnight), the (lunar) day 1, on Wednesday.

May there be happiness and great prosperity ! Śrī.

No. 123 ; PLATE CII

PARAGAON PLATES OF PRITHVIDEVA II : (KALACHURI) YEAR 897

THIS set of copper-plates was discovered together with the preceding one in 1950 near the village Pāragaon, about 7 miles north of Baloda Bazar, in the Raipur District of the Chhattisgarh Division in Madhya Pradesh. The plates were sent by the Deputy Commissioner, Raipur, to the Government Epigraphist for India for decipherment. They are now in the possession of the former Malguzar of the village. They are edited here from an excellent ink impression kindly supplied by the Government Epigraphist.

The copper-plates are two in number, each measuring 12.8" broad by 7.5" high. They are inscribed on the inner side only and are held together by a ring, passing through a hole, .6" in diameter, in the centre of the top of each plate. The ring has a seal, 2.6" in diameter, soldered to it. The latter has, inside a border of knobs, the figure of squatting Lakshmi with an elephant on either side pouring water over her. The technical execution of this emblem is much inferior than in the case of the seal of the preceding grant. Below the emblem appears the legend Rāja-śrīmat-Prithvidēvaḥ in two lines in the Nāgarī characters. The weight of the plates is 236½ tolas, and that of the ring and the seal, 17½ tolas.

The record consists of thirty-seven lines, of which nineteen are inscribed on the inner side of the first plate and the remaining eighteen, on that of the second. The characters are Nāgarī and resemble those of the preceding grant. The average size of the letters is about .4". The grant is written very carelessly and contains several mistakes. The language is Sanskrit, and except for Om namō Vrahmaṇē in the beginning and the name of the engraver and the date at the end, the whole record is metrically composed. There are, in all, twenty-seven verses, all of which are numbered. The first ten verses which carry the genealogy from Kōkalla to the donor's father Ratnadēva II occur in the same order as in the preceding grant; but verse 3 of the latter, eulogising Kārtavīrya, has been omitted. Verse 11, eulogising the donor Prithvidēva II, occurs also in other grants of the king. As regards orthography, the only peculiarities that call for notice are the use of y for j, of v for b (except in the perfect forms of the root bbh) and of the dental for the palatal sibilant and vice versa; see -Yāmadagni-, l. 20, Vrahmaṇē, l. 1, -saurya-, l. 6 and -sahasrēṇa, l. 32. The consonant following r is reduplicated in a few cases; see sarvva-, l. 5.

The plates refer themselves to the reign of Prithvidēva II of the Kalachuri Dynasty of Ratanpur. His genealogy is traced from Kōkalla I of Tripurī as in the preceding grant of his father Ratnadēva II. The object of this inscription is to record the grant, by Prithvidēva II, of the village Vaḍadā, situated in Kōsala, on the occasion of his father's śrāddha. The donee was the same Brāhmaṇa who received the preceding grant, viḥ, Padmanābha, the son of Hariśarman and grandson of Sahadēva who had emigrated from the village Gaurī¹. His gōtra and *pravara*s also are mentioned as in the preceding grant. The tāmra-praśasti, as the inscription is called in verse 26, was composed by the poet Malhaṇa,² the son of Subhaṅkara. It was written on the copper-plates by Sūpaṭa,³ the son of Kīrtidhara. The engraver was Dharaṇīdhara, the son of Lakshmidhara.

The plates are dated, in the last line, on Wednesday, the 15th tithi of the bright fortnight of Phālguna in the year 897 of an unspecified era. The tithi and the year are expressed in the decimal figures only. The date must, of course, be referred to the Kalachuri era and regularly corresponds, for the expired year 897, to Wednesday, the 27th February 1146 A.C. On that day the tithi Phālguna śu. di. 15 commenced 8 h. 25 m. after mean sunrise.⁴ If the grant was actually made, and not merely recorded, on the aforementioned

³ Sūpaṭa appears to be the elder brother of Vatsarāja who wrote the three later grants of Prithvidēva II, dated K. 900 and 905 (above, Nos. 91, 92 and 94).

date, the present inscription would give us the tithi of Ratnadēva II's death, viz., Phālguna śu. di. 15. This was, however, not the first annual śrāddha of that king; for, we have earlier inscriptions of Prithvidēva II, dating from K. 890.¹

As for the localities mentioned in the present grant, Kōsala and Gaurī (plainly identical with Gōri mentioned in the preceding grant) have already been identified. Vaḍadā, the village granted, is probably identical with Badrā, 22 miles south by east of Pāragaon in the Baloda Bazar taluk of the Raipur District.

TRANSLATION

Success! Ōm ! Obeisance to Brahman !

(For a translation of verses 1—10, see that of verses 1, 2 and 4—11, pp. 428-29, above.)

(Verse 11) From him was born Pṛithvīdēva (II) as a cub is from a lion; who, having the strong body of a lion, destroyed (his) enemies like a troop of elephants.

(V. 12) There was (born), in the gōtra of Bhārgava, a Brāhmaṇa named the illustrious Sahadēva, dear (to all), incomparable, wise and respected by good people;—who, with his mind exceedingly sanctified by (his knowledge of) the Vēdas, caused wonder daily (even) to the self-existent (Brahmā). What more can now be said of him?—

(V. 13) Who had, as the first pravara, Bhārgava, (then) another (named) Chyāvana, so also Āpnavāna (and) Aurva, and the fifth one (named) Jāmadagni.

(V. 14) What can be said of the hereditary pleasing nature of him who had a respectable reputation?—by the rows of the waves of smoke from whose (offerings of) clarified butter, even the thousand-eyed (Indra) was (greatly) troubled !

(V. 15) His son was the illustrious Hariśarman by name, who was the resting place of excellent religious merit. The great burden of the interpretation of the Vēdas was duly and wholly entrusted to him (selected from) among wise men.

(V. 16) To him was born a son (named) Padmanābha, who has become well-known in the whole world as one who has performed a great sacrifice; and by the noble qualities of whose character the people have always felt surprised.

³ Read —लसत्पदेन as in the Bilaigarh plates (No. 89, above). Metre of this and the following verse: Vasantatilakā.

(V. 17) By his study of the Vēdas and daily teaching, the four-faced (Brahmā) is pleased and surprised; and so is that god Indra by the excellent performance of (his own) sacrifices, that lord of speech (Bṛihaspati) by his officiating at (others') sacrifices, and also Karṇa by his charity. There is no Brāhmaṇa, learned in the Vēdas, who resembles him in respect of the non-acceptance of gifts.

(Vv. 18-20) To him the king Prithvidēva (II) gave the village Vaḍadā (situated) in Kōsala, inclusive of all taxes and free from all disputes, after washing both (his) feet, applying a mark (of sandal-paste) to (his) forehead and pouring water on (his) hand, on (the occasion of) his father's śrāddha—(the village) where wind, the moon and the sun, being apprehensive of (touching) a Brāhmaṇa's property, neither cause the flowers in the gardens to fall nor make them wet or dry.

(V. 26) This praśasti, (incised) on (plates of) copper, has been composed by that illustrious Malhaṇa, the son of the illustrious Śubhaṅkara, who, being well-read, is a bee on the lotuses, namely, the poets, and whose words shine with significance in numerous works.

(V. 27) This (praśasti) has been written in beautiful letters by the illustrious Sūpaṭa, the son of Kīrtidhara, who is a favourite of the King, is possessed of a complete assemblage of merits, well-known on the surface of the earth, and is the dwelling place of goodness, courage, noble descent and character.

(Line 37) And it has been engraved by Dharaṇīdhara, the son of Lakshmidhara.

In the year 897, (the month) Phālguna, the bright (fortnight), the (lunar) day 15, on Wednesday.

SUPPLEMENTARY INSCRIPTIONS

PIAWAN ROCK INSCRIPTION OF GANGEYADEVA : (KALACHURI) YEAR 789

THIS inscription was discovered by Sir Alexander Cunningham's Assistant, Mr. Garrick, apparently in 1882¹ at Piāwan, 25 miles north-north-east of Rewa in Vindhya Pradesh.¹ Cunningham visited the place in 1883-84 and published a lithograph of the record together with an indifferent transcript in his Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. XXI, pp. 112 ff. and plate xxviii. As the inscription is very much weather-worn and the place is difficult of access, none has attempted to edit it since then, though it has been referred to several times in connection with the history of the Kalachuris of Tripurī². In 1936, the Superintendent of Archæology, Central Circle, Patna, kindly sent his mechanic to copy the record for me. But when he reached the place, he found the inscription completely destroyed. As no fresh facsimile of it is now possible, I edit it here from the small-scale lithograph mentioned above.

Cunningham has given the following description of the record:—"Piāwan, or Payāwan, means simply the 'drinking place'. The spot is a small valley, about 800 feet wide and half a mile in length, with precipitous rocks on both sides, about 200 feet high. At the western end a small stream falls over the cliff, and the rock below, on which the water falls, has been formed into an Argha for the reception of a lingam or phallic symbol of Siva. A view of this Argha has been given by my assistant, Mr. Garrick, who first discovered the place. He has described it under the name of Jhirmā, or 'the waterfall'. The name given to me was received from the people, who grazed their herds in the neighbouring hills, and who knew it only as the Piāwan, or 'watering place'. The Argha is 14 inches in diameter. On the upper face of the Argha there is an inscription of six lines in boldly carved letters, which are unfortunately much weather-worn."

The record consists of six lines. The characters are Nāgarī. The language is Sanskrit, and the inscription is in prose throughout. In its present form, its orthography does not call for any special notice.

The record mentions the illustrious Gāṅgēyadēva with the imperial titles Parama-bhaṭṭāraka,³ *Rājādhirāja*⁴ and Paramēśvara. He is also described as paramamahēśvara or a devout worshipper of Mahēśvara (Siva). The object of the inscription probably was to record the king's obeisance to the Siva-linga on the rock where the inscription is incised. The name of the linga which occurred in line 4 is not quite clear, but may have been Alaṅghyēśvara.

The last line contains a date which Cunningham read as 789. The reading of the first and third figures is probably correct and that of the second figure also may be so, as

² See, e.g., H. T. M., p. 14.

the Makundpur inscription¹ of the same king is dated K. 772. The date must, of course, be referred to the Kalachuri era. As an expired year, it corresponds to 1037-38 A. C. This falls in the reign of Gāṅgēyadēva, who, we know, was ruling till the 22nd January 1041 A.C.²

JABALPUR SECOND PLATE OF YASAHKARNA : (KALACHURI) YEAR 529 (?)

As stated before,¹⁷ the second copper-plate of the grant of Yaśaḥkarṇa discovered in the Jabalpur District has long been lost. A transcript of the text on that plate has been preserved in the Central Museum, Nagpur. The paper on which it was written has

⁴ Expressed by a symbol.

⁷ Two akṣaras are illegible here.

¹¹ Perhaps the name of the Śiva-līṅga was Alaṅghyēśvara. This name occurs also in another record of an earlier period. See No. 25, l. 24. The following two akṣaras which are gone may have been dāva—

¹⁴ This word is completely gone.

KARANBEL STONE INSCRIPTION OF JAYASIMHA

This inscription was first brought to notice by Sir A. Cunningham in his Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. IX, p. 96. It was subsequently edited, without any lithograph or translation, by Dr. Kielhorn in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XVIII, pp. 214 ff. The stone which bears this inscription is said to have been found originally at Karañbēl, now a village in ruins, a few miles from Bhērā-Ghāt near Jabalpur. It was lying at the house of a stone-cutter when the rubbing, later supplied to Kielhorn, was taken by Sir A. Cunningham. As neither the original stone nor any estampage of the inscription is now forthcoming, I give below the transcript of it made by Dr. Kielhorn, together with my translation of it.

“The stone is broken right through in the middle, from top to bottom, but the fracture is so clean that hardly a single akshara has been lost. The inscription contains 25 lines. The writing covers a space of 3' 6½" broad by 1' 7" high, and it is well preserved throughout, so that the actual reading of the inscription is hardly anywhere doubtful. The size of the letters is about ½". The characters are Nāgarī, carefully drawn and skilfully engraved.”³ The language is Sanskrit and except for ōm namaḥ Sivāya, the record is metrically composed throughout. There are 55 verses in all, none of which is numbered. The inscription is written in an ornate style. As Dr. Kielhorn has pointed out, the author had evidently the Bhērā-Ghāt stone inscription of Narasimha before him; for, he has imitated some verses of it in the present record.¹ The inscription is generally free from errors, but the use of achikīrttayāt as the third person singular of the Aorist from √ kṛit, and that of asūta, contrary to the usage in classical Sanskrit, in a passive sense in v. 31 deserve notice. As regards orthography, we have to note that the sign for v is generally used to denote b, and that the rules of sandhi have not been observed in two cases.

The inscription appears to have been left incomplete; for, there is no mention of what it was intended to record. But as conjectured by Dr. Kielhorn, it may have been intended to be put up at a temple of Siva, since it opens with an obeisance to that god and the first four verses also are in honour of him. There is, besides, no mention of the author or the engraver and no record of the date.

After six verses invoking the blessings of Siva, Gaṇapati and Sarasvatī, the inscription carries the genealogy of the Kalachuri rulers from Yuvarājadēva, who is plainly the second king of that name, to Jayasimhadēva. From the description of the latter in verses 43-53, it is clear that the present record was composed during his reign. In connection with Yuvarājadēva II, we are told that he dedicated the wealth which he had obtained by conquering the kings of all quarters to Sōmēśvara. This recalls a similar statement about Lakshmaṇarāja II in the Bilhāri inscription. In regard to Karṇa, the present inscription says that he was waited upon by the Chōḍa, Kuṅga, Hūṇa, Gauḍa, Gurjara and Kīra princes. The pedigree of Alhaṇadēvī, the mother of Narasimhadēva and Jayasimhadēva, is given as in the afore-mentioned Bhērā-Ghāt inscription, with this additional information that her great-grandfather Hamsapāla was a ruler of Prāgvāṭa which was evidently another name of Mēwād. In other respects, the present record does not make any addition to our historical knowledge.

Om! Adoration to Siva!

(V. 1) May the god (Siva) always secure for you your desired object, (viz.) the attainment of excellent and marvellous prosperity!—(he) on whose head, where the matted hair is joined by the celestial river, the crescent moon displays at all times the beauty of a fresh sprout!

(V. 2) May Siva with these eight bodies protect you!—(the eight bodies,¹⁰ viz.) that which always has fluidity; that which, being different from it, has gravity; those two which, being devoid of gravity, are felt by touch; that which, being an element, is devoid of touch; that which, showing time, engages the world in actions; that which shines with digits; (and) that which attains the reward of a sacrifice!

(V. 3) “Blessed are those (women) the wreath of whose skulls you always wear on (your) head!”¹¹ “I say this, because it must be said:—Refer to them as males.”¹² “That

¹¹ This verse is in the form of a dialogue between Pārvatī and Śiva.

¹² There is a play on the expression pūṁstveṇa samikṛtaya. What Śiva means is that Pārvatī should would not be very proper!" "I do not ask you to give up your female form. Besides, it is impossible". May Hara, who was thus perplexed in replying to his beloved, protect you!

(V. 4) May that Sambhu always grant your desired object!—(he) whose ornaments consist of (serpents) whose eyes are ears; who possesses the splendour of (the moon) that makes the lotuses bloom; devotion to whom makes people rejoice; on whose body alone there is rajas (ashes) (but no rajas¹ in his nature); and in whom there is changeless intelligence incarnate!

(V. 5) May that Gajānana protect you!—(he) who possesses in the guise of his (curved) tusk, one half of the moon, which is other than that on the crown of the coiled matted hair of Dhūrjati (i.e., Siva)!

(V. 6) May Sarasvatī verily increase the learning of good people!—(she) who moves about in (all) the four (directions),² assumes four forms³ and is the cause of (the attainment of) the four objects (of human life)!

(V. 7) The Creator, by continuous meditation, produced a son who had no third (being, equal to him), (and) whom he designated Atri.⁴

(V. 8) From him there came to view (the Moon), the crest-jewel that adorns (Siva), the lord of creatures; which is the sole repository of the prosperity of the whole world, (and) the tap-root of the pleasant and joyful sport of the mind of women; (and) whose rays cause the blooming of the assemblages of lotuses.

(V. 9) From him was born Budha even as knowledge is produced from a very pure mind. He procreated a very strong family of the kings who afforded freedom from fear to the (whole) world.

(V. 10) In the race of this treasure of digits (i.e. the Moon) there was a king named Arjuna, who, being endowed with a thousand arms, possessed prowess by night as by day; by uttering whose celebrated name, people even now find about them their desired objects.⁵

(V. 11) By the good fortune of beings are such supreme lords of the world born—only few (in number) and rarely—as those of this race who became the lords of princes, attaining ever-increasing prosperity.

(V. 12) In this race which became well-known by the name of Kalachuri through possession of various precious excellences, there was born, through the religious merit of the worlds, Yuvarājadēva II, who resembled Yayāti in good qualities.

(V. 13) Having conquered all regions and taken away the various kinds of wealth from kings, he, the mighty lord of the world, being filled with an excess of intense devotion, presented them (all) to the holy Sōmēśvara.

(V. 14) By that lord of kings was begotten the unique wrestler of the world, Kōkalla (II) by name, who defied the arrows of (his) enemies. How many regions have not attained great splendour by his meritorious works, making one another beautiful in a thousand ways?

refer to the skulls on his head as those of men, not of women, while Pārvatī purposely mistakes the words as meaning that she should say what she has got to say, in a male form.

² Or, perhaps, in all the four kinds of creatures, viz., womb-born, egg-born, sprout-born and moisture-born.

³ Vīṣṇu, Parā, Paśyanti, Madhyamā and Vaikharī.

⁵ Compare v. 7 of the Bhērā-Ghāt stone inscription of Narasimha (No. 60, above).

(V. 15) He, who attained excessive power and showed great devotion to Siva in many ways, removed the apprehensions of the world by the multitudes of (his) forces as the Himālaya does with those of rivers.

(V. 16) From him there was (born) (a king) named Gāṅgēyadēva, who was possessed of valour and courage which are akin to great serenity displayed in the prosperity of the world; under whose protection the princes ceased to feel ashamed by (referring to) the stories of the ten-faced (Rāvaṇa) and Arjuna.¹

(V. 17) His lotus-like feet appeared beautiful with the heads of princes bowing to him as though they were the lilies of splendid victory, produced in the water of his sword!

(V. 18) What did not the creeper-like eye-brow and the creeper-like sword of him, who was the abode of the lotus of victory, achieve?—(the former of) which was the night (which shrouded) the valour of (his) enemies and (the latter), the creeper of the ornamental figures (drawn) in musk on the beautiful faces of the quarters?

(V. 19) From him was (born) that Karṇa, the collection of whose excellences deserved praise. That king's army, like his command, went beyond the ocean.

(V. 20) The women of the princes who were his enemies had always, in the forest as in the city, *kaṭakas*² on their feet and large necklaces round their beautiful necks.³

(V. 21) His door-keeper thus checked the princes (who had) come to wait upon him (and) who were wrangling among themselves—"Chōḍa, move about lowly; Kuṅga, what is this nonsense thou art talking? Hūṇa, it is not proper for thee to bawl out thus; Gauḍa, give up thy arrogance; Gurjara, do not roar in this manner; Kīra, be silent."

(V. 22) By diverting his mind, the best of poets, like his sense-organs, greatly increased (his) fame, publicity and wealth.

(V. 23) From Karṇa sprang Yasāhkarṇa even as Tri-kūṭa did from (Mōru) the golden mountain—(he) who became a store-house of changeless excellences even as Tri-kūṭa became a mine of jewels (hidden) in its peaks.

(V. 24) When he, who was almost like nectar to the distressed, bent the end of his bow, the hostile princes experienced that misery⁴ from which there was, for the most part, no recovery.⁵

(V. 25) He, whose vikrama (valour)⁶ was like the vikrama (step) of Trivikrama, adorned the directions with his glory (which was) white like the moon, and with his deeds (which were) very difficult to perform.

(V. 26) He, clever and adept in policy as he was, achieved the four desired objects of life with the four well-known measures,⁷ used in their respective spheres.

(V. 27) From him sprang the king Gayakarṇa, the repository of accomplishments, even as the moon, the store-house of digits, did from the white (milk-) ocean—(he)

² There is a play on the word kaṭaka here. They had anklets round their feet when in the city, but twists of straw as they roamed through the forest.

⁷ These are sāman (negotiation), dāna (bribery), daṇḍa (assault) and bbēda (sowing dissension).

who, having a complete circle of tried (ministers), like the moon which has a full white orb, was endowed with the clear splendour of a precious kind, making (all) worlds happy.

(V. 28) The tamāla-leaf, which was the sword of that king, though it moved in his hand, decorated the goddess of victory on the battle-field, having removed dust with the showers of the tears (of the enemies' wives).

(V. 29) He, who, in the order of his valorous-deeds, was like (Garuḍa) the son of Vinatā, not only threw into the background Achyuta (as Garuḍa takes Achyuta on his back), but well-conducted as he was, he performed no action through partiality (unlike Garuḍa who does everything by flapping his wings).

(V. 30) In the sphere of his actions, there was not even Dvāpara, how (could then there) be Kali? For even his adversaries always saw his work accomplished (krīta).¹

(V. 31) In Prāgvāṭa, there was the illustrious Hamsapāla, the ornamental mark on the forehead in the form of (all) kings. From him was produced a king, named the illustrious Vairisimha, the abode of truthfulness, whose birth caused apprehension to (his) enemies (and) a wealth of joy to (his) friends, provided excellent happiness with a home, (and) gave splendour to heroism and festivity to the whole world.

(V. 32) From him was born a king, named Vijayasimha, through whom the Kali (age), they say, met with destruction; who stepped on the heads of the best among kings and destroyed the mighty rutting elephants of his foes.

(V. 33) Śyāmaladēvī, the daughter of Udayāditya, the lord of Dhārā, became his favourite wife as Satyā² was of (Kṛishṇa), the enemy of the demons.

(V. 34) On her the king (Vijayasimha) begot the gem of a daughter named Alhaṇadēvī, who looked bright with her excellence as (Himālaya), the supporter of the earth, begot Gaurī on Mēnā.

(V. 35) For the establishment of good order in the worlds, the king Gayakarṇa grasped her hand with his hand as Siva did that of Pārvatī.

(V. 36) On Alhaṇadēvī, the king Gayakarṇa begot two sons who removed the sorrows of all (people) even as the Sun procreated Aśvins on Samjñā.

(V. 37) The father named one of them Narasimha and the other, Jayasimha—whom the people regarded as Rāma and Lakshmaṇa.

(V. 38) When his father (Gayakarṇa), through his religious merit, gained heaven, like Indra, without any obstruction, the king Narasimha adorned this earth.

(V. 39) The king Narasimhadēva, who was endowed with a noble form like that of Achyuta (i.e., Vishṇu), ruled over the earth, conquering habitually the countries of even mighty kings and making the world free from the fear of the next world.

(V. 40) As he marched, the oppression³ of the hostile kings increased, even though the sun was concealed (from view) by the mass of dust (raised by his forces).

(V. 41) Making frequently (the days of) parvan fruitful with great gifts⁴ and other things, he, who was active, increased (the number of) the legs of Dharma⁵ as Bali increased the steps of Vishṇu.⁶

² I.e., Satyabhāmā.

⁴ For the mahādānas or great gifts, see above p. 298, n. 8.

⁵ Dharma, it is believed, had four legs in the Kṛita or golden age, but successively lost one leg in the succeeding ages of Tṛīta and Dvāpara. By his pious deeds Narasimha restored the lost legs to Dharma. For the idea, compare verse 24 of the Deopara inscription of Vijayasēna. Ep. Ind., Vol. I, p. 310.

⁶ I.e., in his Dwarf incarnation.

(V. 42) In the brightness of the moon-like glory of him who purified the whole world and exceedingly hated ignorance, even the moon became a hare.¹

(V. 43) Though sleeping at night on comfortable beds, with the circle (of his ministers) free from fear, he was continuously wakeful in the hearts of his enemies.

(V. 44) Coming into contact with him, the assemblage of the best among the Brāhmaṇas obtained wealth as the great Indra did his fortune, being pleased by (Vishṇu) the enemy of demons (in his Dwarf incarnation).

(V. 45) That king, the illustrious Narasimhadēva, having become a guest of the lord of the celestial world, may the illustrious king Jayasimhadēva long increase the well-being of good people!

(V. 46) How many worlds does not the infinite fame of the ever-noble lord of kings sanctify like (the Gāṅgā) the river of the gods,—(the fame of him) whose extensive capital smiles with the beautiful splendour of large jewels?

(V. 47) Sending fearlessly to the abode of the gods, through zeal for the conquest of the eastern regions, the brave kings of great and celebrated fame mounted on the temples of ever-rutting elephants, he made the mind of the lord of gods extremely apprehensive.

(V. 48) Through the blooming of the lotus of his face, the goddess of wealth always goes to the multitudes of even poor people; (while) the disease of kings, caused by the apprehension of his frown, does not disappear even by their taking the medicine, namely, residence in a forest.

(V. 49) How many kings have there not been on the earth, whose merits were honoured by the world, and through whose deeds the paths of virtuous conduct are praised even now? May this king Jayasimha of pure splendour, who is different from them and sets an example even to them in the acquisition of an assemblage of merits, be triumphant!

(V. 50) It is a wonder that the fire of his prowess requires the fuel of princes and that the moon of his glory detests night-lotuses!²

(V. 51) The world bears great love towards him who obliges his allies, always pursues the virtuous path, causes the excellence of the intellect of the meritorious, increases only his charity, possesses the joy springing from continuous victory (over his foes, obtained) through valour, (and) supports the earth.

(V. 52) While marching, he conceals, with the mass of dust (raised by his forces), not only the waters of the ocean, but also the rays of the sun.

(V. 53) Employing the four parts of the army like the four means of proof, he, (who is) proficient in policy,³ cuts short the life of the enemies.

(V. 54) The goddess of victory never leaves the lotus of his hand, (but) displays a very violent dance in (the din of) military musical instruments.

(V. 55) Having heard of the very marvellous deed of the illustrious king Jayasimha similar to that of Arjuna, the hostile kings first gave up their enthusiasm for fighting, thereafter their loving fortune, then their capitals, sons and then wives—only they did not forsake the fear which they had entertained, even when they took refuge in the caves of mountains.

¹ I. e., his glory was whiter than the moon, which appeared on it like a dark spot, having the form of a hare.

² There is a play on the word kumuda which means (1) a night-lotus and (2) a wicked person.

KUMBHI PLATES OF VIJAYASIMHA: (KALACHURI) YEAR 932

THIS inscription was first brought to notice in 1839 in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. VIII, pp. 481 ff., where the Editors published a transcript and a sort of translation together with introductory remarks, a facsimile of the seal and specimens of the letters. The inscription was next published, without any lithograph or translation, by Dr. F.E. Hall in 1862 in the same journal, Vol. XXXI, pp. 111 ff. The plates, which were made over to the Asiatic Society of Bengal, have since been lost. As even an impression of them is now not forthcoming, I have copied here Dr. Hall's transcript¹ and added to it my notes and translation.

The copper-plates, two in number, were dug up at Kumbhī on the right bank of the Herun river, thirty-five miles north-east of Jabalpur, the chief town of the Jabalpur District in Madhya Pradesh. When discovered, the plates were held together by a ring which had the customary Kalachuri seal of Gaja-Lakshmi with the legend Srimad-Vijayasimhadēvab. The inscription seems to have been in a state of good preservation as Dr. Hall found only about ten aksharas illegible. The size of the plates and of the letters incised on them, and also their weight have not been recorded.

Judging from the specimens of the letters published in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. VIII, the characters belonged to the Nāgarī alphabet. The language is Sanskrit. Except for the opening obeisance to Siva, the formal portion of the grant and the particulars about the writer and the engraver at the end, the record is in verse throughout. There are forty-four verses in all, of which twenty-six occur in the introductory portion. The draft used here is the same as that in the Jabalpur plates of Jayasimha², but in the description of the Kalachuri kings down to Jayasimha, the present inscription has seven verses³ more than the latter record. Of these seven verses, again, four⁴ occur in the Khairhā and Jabalpur plates⁵ of Yaśaḥkarṇa, but three of them are employed there to describe Yaśaḥkarṇa, not Narasimha as in the present grant. As they contain merely conventional praise, they do not affect our historical information. The remaining three verses, viz., 14, 16 and 24, which eulogize Yaśaḥkarṇa, Gayākarṇa and Jayasimha respectively, and two more, viz. verses 25 and 26, which describe Vijayasimha and Gōsaladēvī, are not known to occur anywhere else. In respect of orthography, it is not possible now to say anything definitely as Dr. Hall has admittedly made several changes in his transcript before publication.

The inscription is one of the king Vijayasimha of the Later Kalachuri Dynasty of Tripurī. Down to his father Jayasimha, his genealogy is given in the same words as in the aforementioned Jabalpur plates. There is only one verse here about Vijayasimha and that too contains conventional praise. The object of the inscription is to record the grant, by Gōsaladēvī, the mother of Vijayasimha, of the village Chōralāyī, in the Sambalā pattalā. The grant was made by the dowager queen after bathing in the Narmadā at Tripurī on the occasion of a *yugādi*⁶ and with the permission of her son,

⁵ Nos. 56 and 57, above.

the ruling king. The donee was the Brāhmaṇa Sōdhaśarman, the son of Chhiktū and grandson of Sūlhaṇa and great-grandson of Janārdana, who belonged to the Sāvanya gōtra with five pravaras, and was a student of the Chhandōga sākhā of the Sāmavēda.

Among the dignitaries to whom the royal order is addressed, there are the Mahākumāra Ajayasimha, the Mahāmantrin, the Saivāchārya, the Rājaguru Vidyādēva, the Mahāpurōhita Yajñadhara, the Mahāmātya Kiki, the Mahākshapaṭalika, Mahāpradhāna, Arthalēkhin and Daśamūlika Vatsarāja and the Mahāsāndhivigrahika Purushōttama. Some of these names occur in other inscriptions also. The crown prince Ajayasimha, for instance, is mentioned in the Bhērā-Ghāt inscription of Vijayasimha,¹ while the Sāndhivigrahika Purushōttama and the Daśamulin Vatsarāja are named in the Jabalpur plates of Jayasimha.² The present charter was written by the aforementioned Vatsarāja and the Paṇḍita Kēśava. The latter is mentioned as Arthalēkhin in the Rewa stone inscription of Vijayasimha.³

The inscription is dated in the year 932 (expressed in decimal figures only) of an unspecified era. The date must, of course, be referred to the Kalachuri era and corresponds, for the expired year 932, to 1180-81 A.C. It does not admit of verification in the absence of the necessary details.

Of the localities mentioned here, Chōralāyī is probably Chaorai, a village about 20 miles south by west of Jabalpur. Sambalā, the headquarters of the pattalā (sub-division) in which it was situated, cannot now be traced.

TRANSLATION

Om! Adoration to Brahman!

[For a translation of vv. 1-13, see that of vv. 1—10, 12, 14 and 15 on pp. 296 ff.]

(Verse 14) His (i.e., Yaśaḥkarma's) enemies, who had somehow repaired to the bank of a lake in the cavity of some very high and lordly mountain, and felt there slightly at ease, were in an instant filled with consternation, saying to one another "It has come!" when they heard the echo (of their own talk) and saw their own reflections in water (which appeared to them) like their gathering foci! What more (need we say)? Such was that (prowess)!

[For a translation of v. 15, see that of v. 13 on p. 330.]

(V. 16) The dart of grief rankles, being planted deeply in the hearts of enemies' wives by him (i.e., Gayākarma) who was eager to expand his glory in (all) quarters, had a noble family and was endowed with excellences.³

[For a translation of v. 17 and 18, see that of vv. 14 and 15 on p. 330.]

(V. 19) He (Narasimhadēva) poured five or six drops of water by way of gifts on the hands of the Brāhmaṇas. Even with these, they satisfy their desire for wealth and afterwards show their contempt for (the ocean which is) a mine of jewels.

(V. 20) [Occupying a high position like Mēru], (this) ruler of the earth exceedingly gratifies the suppliants by his great gifts such as the tulā-purusha.⁴

(V. 21) Extirpating the hostile Kshatriyas and bestowing the earth on the Brāhmaṇas he was (as it were) vying with Paraśurāma.

[For a translation of vv. 22 and 23, see that of vv. 16 and 17, above, p. 330.]

(V. 24) When the sky is whitened by the light of the moon which is his glory, the flock of birds, flying somehow in it, appears to be ashamed (as it were).

(V. 25) Triumphant is his son, the king Vijayasimha, who is the repository of attractive qualities (and) the abode of auspicious things; (who is) adorned with abundant fame; (who is) the sun on the earth whose rays rest on (the confines of) the world, and who has destroyed the lions, namely, his foes!

(V. 26) May that illustrious Gōsaladēvī be glorious!—(she) whose glance is a (veritable) shower of nectar, whose company is an excellent treasure and whose speech is the wish-fulfilling jewel!

And he, the Paramabhaṭṭāraka, Mahārājādhirāja (and) Paramēśvara, the illustrious Vijayasimhadēva, a devout worshipper of Mahēśvara, the lord of Trikaṇḍa, who by (the might of) his arm has acquired suzerainty over the three kings, (viṣ.) the lord of horses, the lord of elephants (and) the lord of men, (and) who meditates on the feet of the Paramabhaṭṭāraka, Mahārājādhirāja (and) Paramēśvara, the illustrious Vāmadēva,—this victorious (king),—having called together the Mahārājā, the illustrious Mahākumāra, the glorious Ajayasimhadēva, the Mahāmantrin, the Śaiva Āchārya Bhaṭṭāraka, the holy Rājaguru Vidyādēva, the Mahāpurōhita Paṇḍita, the illustrious Yajñadhara, the Dharmapradhāna, the Mahāmātya Thakkura, the illustrious Kikī, the Mahākṣhapatalika, the Mahāpradhāna, the Arthalēkhin Thakkura, the illustrious Daśamūlika Vatsarāja, the Mahāsāndhivigrahika Thakkura, the illustrious Purushōttama, the Mahāpratihāra, the Superintendent of Criminals and Spies, the Bhāṇḍāgārika, the Pramattavāra, the Āśvasādhānika—these and other (officers) and the inhabitants of the village which is to be granted,—duly honours, informs and commands (them as follows):—

“Be it known to you that for the increase of the religious merit and fame of her mother and father and of herself, Our mother, the illustrious Gōsaladēvī, having duly bathed in the Narmadā and worshipped the holy Mahādēva at the famous Tripurī on the occasion of a yugādi in the year 933, has, with Our permission, given as a grant by pouring water the village Chōralāyī, (situated) in the Sambalā pattalī, to the extent of its four limits, with its four boundaries well-determined, together with pasture-land, with land and water, with mango and mahuā trees, with salt mines, with pits and barren lands, with (the right of) egress and ingress, with fertile and marshy lands, with tree-groves, plant-gardens, grass and so forth, with the cess on pravaṇis, liquor, kāmata (and) vāḍa, with fines (and) mārganaka, with the cess on Viśēnima, those for Paṭṭakila, Duṣṭasādhya and ardha-puru-shārika, with woods and hills, and with the toll (paid at) toll-stations, and free from all obstructions—to the Brāhmaṇa, the illustrious Paṇḍita Sōḍhaśarman, the son of the illustrious Paṇḍita Chhikṭū, and son’s son of the Paṇḍita Sūlhaṇa and son of the son’s son of the illustrious Paṇḍita Janārdana, who belongs to the Sāvarṇya gōtra, has the five *pravara*s, Bhārgava, Chyāvāna, Āpnavāna, Aurva and Jāmadgnya, and is of the Chhandōga śākhā.”

(V. 44) (This charter has been) written by Vatsarāja, the son of the illustrious Dharma and son’s son of Abhyuddhara, (who is) the Daśamūlin of the lord of Chēdi.

Written by the Paṇḍita, the illustrious Kēśava. Engraved by the Sūtradhāra Nāmala.

GOPALPUR STONE INSCRIPTION OF VIJAYASIMHA

THIS inscription was brought to notice in 1862 by Dr. Fitz-Edward Hall, who gave a partial transcript of some of its lines in a foot-note to his article entitled ‘Three Sanskrit Inscriptions’, published in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XXXI, pp. 113 ff. Subsequently, it was noticed by Sir Alexander Cunningham in 1879 in his Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol. IX, p. 99. Finally, its contents were discussed by Dr. Kielhorn in a short note, published in 1889, in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XVIII, pp. 218 ff. As stated by Dr. Hall, the stone on which the record is incised belonged originally to Karaṇbēl, now a village in ruins near Bhērā-Ghāt. It was subsequently removed to Gōpālpur, a village about 3 miles to the south-east of Bhērā-Ghāt, where it was seen by both Dr. Hall and Sir

A. Cunningham. Thereafter, it was missing for a long time; for when Mr. Natesa Aiyar visited Gōpālpur to search for it in about 1917, he could not trace the record anywhere.¹ In October 1952, Dr. M. C. Chaubey of the Hiralal Archæological Society, Jabalpur, found it built into a wall of the ākṣhādā (wrestling hall) near the Kotwali building in Jabalpur. I edit the inscription from an excellent inked estampage, kindly taken by Dr. B. Ch. Chhabra, Government Epigraphist for India.²

The inscribed stone had already been broken into two unequal pieces when its estampages were supplied to Dr. Kielhorn. Since then it has developed one more crack. The record consists of 21 lines. The writing, which covers a space of 4' 5" broad by 1' 9½" high, has suffered a good deal. The larger portion of it on the right-hand piece of the stone is in a fair state of preservation, and of the smaller portion on the left-hand piece, the upper four lines and the concluding two or three lines are sufficiently well preserved to be read from a careful impression. A few akṣharas have, however, been lost in the two cracks mentioned above. The characters are of the Nāgarī alphabet, resembling those of the Jabalpur stone inscription of Jayasimha.³ The language is Sanskrit, and excepting om namō bhagavatē Vāsudēvāya at the commencement of the first line and the words śrī-Sōmarāja-kṛitam rāj-āvali-varṇanām=iti in line 16, the inscription is in verse throughout. There are, in all, 34 verses, none of which is numbered. The introductory portion of the inscription was composed in an elegant kāvya style, but owing to its sad defacement, many of the verses cannot now be deciphered completely and interpreted satisfactorily. As regards orthography, the only points that call for notice are the reduplication of the consonant following r as in -niruvānam, l. 1, the use of v for b except in such forms as babbhūvur-, l. 17 and vice versa in bavṛidhē, l. 7, and the change of the anustūta to the dental nasal in -drēṣhyam=chakāra, l. 13.

The object of the inscription was to record the construction of a temple of Viṣṇu, apparently at Karañbēl, by Harigaṇa, who was descended from a Brāhmaṇa of the Kaśyapa gōtra. The names of his first two ancestors, mentioned in line 17, are now lost. Lines 17 and 18 describe Malhaṇa and his concubine, Jōgalā, who was dear and faithful to him. Malhaṇa's son, Harigaṇa, is described in lines 19 and 20.⁴ He had two wives, Mahādēvī and another whose name is lost. He caused a lofty temple of Viṣṇu to be constructed out of love for his chaste wife.⁵

By way of introduction the record gives a description of the Kalachuri kings of Tripurī from Karṇa to Vijayasimha. The first five verses are in praise of the several incarnations of Viṣṇu, to whom the temple was dedicated. The sixth verse appears to have praised men of learning. The seventh verse, which is now partially lost, probably invoked the blessings of Gaṇēśa. From verse 8 begins a description of the Kalachuri family. In the race of the Moon was born Sahasrārjuna, the ancestor of the Kalachuri kings. Verses 12 to 16 appear to have described the illustrious Kalachuri king Karṇa, whose name actually occurs in verses 14 and 16. He is called the seventh *Chakravartin*⁶

⁴ Jōgalā was probably the mother of Harigaṇa though this is not stated specifically. Otherwise, there was no need to mention her name in this record. It is also curious that Harigaṇa explicitly mentions her real status. He does not conceal it or gloss over it.

⁵ The wording of v. 33 shows that Mahādēvī had died before the inscription was composed. It is not stated at the instance of which of the two wives Harigaṇa erected the temple of Viṣṇu.

The inscription is not dated, but as it belongs to the reign of the Kalachuri king Vijayasiniha whose known dates range from K. 932 to K. 96 (x), it can be referred to about the last quarter of the 12th century A.C.

Success ! Ōm ! Adoration to the divine Vāsudēva !

(Verse 1) May the four dark-blue [arms] of Vishṇu grant (the four objects of human life, viz.) dharma, artha, kāma and *nirvāṇa*¹³ for the attainment of bliss by good people !

(V. 2) May Hari, the lord of the three worlds, who allays the anguish of worldly existence, protect you !—(Hari) who, assuming the form of a lion [by self-will], brought clearly to view the inward fire of wrath of Hiranyakaśipu, which gushed out in the guise of blood when he tore his heart¹⁴ (and) who, being a hater of asuras, caused harm to the wife of Rāhu, making her half-widowed¹ !

(V. 3) Victorious are the roarings of (Vishṇu), the lion of Vaikuṇṭha, which are fond of depriving the lord of demons of his life and which served as mantras (chanted) at the coronation of (Indra), the lord of the three worlds !

(V. 4) May Lakshmi secure the highest bliss for you !—(she) who first became horripilated as she, immediately after coming out of the ocean, was well supported with his hand by Vishṇu with his hair standing on its end, and was led forth [with great respect] by him, the victorious one, her mind being full of love as its large paths were illumined by the rays of each other's looks !

(V. 5) May that Chakrapāṇi (Vishṇu) cause you joy !—(he) to whom, the omnipresent one, the Sun and the Moon— who, looking like ear-ornaments as they clung to his ears, were observed with joy by the gods, the siddhas and the vidyādharas who were nearby—respectfully intimated in exceedingly loving words that the nectar from [the vessel in his hand] was being drunk by Rāhu² !

(V. 6) May the multitude of learned men who have the ignorance of their minds rapidly dispelled and who feel delighted on the rise of the sun of literature . . . !

(V. 7) “Mother, give me the piece of my tusk which appears on the head of Father.” “Child, give up this importunity. I know nothing of it. You should beg of your father.”³ When Śrīkaṇṭha laughed as these words were heard, . . . !

(V. 8) Victorious in the three worlds is the disc of the moon with a shining edge, which is almost like the life of the milk-ocean; which is the eye of policy of the god of love, the receptacle of joy to the people's eyes and the fire-pan of love to couples, joined or separated; which dispels the spread of darkness and has produced a noble (royal) family . . . !

(V. 9) Glorious in the sky is the Moon, adorned by a multitude of stars, who in beauty resembles the Kaustubha which adorns the breast of Vanamālīn (Vishṇu) . . . !

(V. 10) In his race there was born Sahasrārjuna, the great (king) who with his thousand ray-like arms resembled the sun

(V. 11) After him there flourished many lords of the earth, whose minds were full of great compassion, and who, with their pillar-like glory, supported the Kalachuri family; the fire of whose prowess flared up with [the tears] shed in grief by the enemies' wives

(V. 12) who sharpened his sword with the tears discharged by the eyes of the wives of the enemies killed by him

(V. 13) the flames of fire shooting up from the destruction, caused in anger, of the palaces of the enemies, which rose without any obstruction to the orb of the moon

(V. 14) Karṇadēva, the seventh *Chakravartin*⁴ (Universal Emperor), who despoiled (other kings) of their royal fortune by levying heavy tributes (as the sun deprives the moon of its

lustre by means of its numerous rays), who planted his foot on the heads of eminent kings (even as the sun sheds its rays on the peaks of high mountains)

(V. 15) "He is the (wish-fulfilling) Pārijāta Have you heard anywhere such a milk-ocean from the words of slanderous people ?" 'The ocean speaks with the shrieks of water-elephants

(V. 16) The illustrious Karṇadēva, who feels rebuked, recollecting his past deed as soon as the half word Vāli- was heard by him¹

(V. 17) There was his son, the king Yaśaḥkarna, [the night lotus in the form of whose fame] did not wither even when the night had passed

(V. 18) That king, single-handed as he was, struck (his enemies) in battle with thick (showers of) arrows without concealing himself, formerly in the holy place

(V. 19) In (the expedition for) the capture of cows, Arjuna, without revealing himself, defeated (his) well-wishers, friends and others²

(V. 20) The illustrious Gayākarna, as he proceeded for the conquest of the quarters, attacked his enemy and destroyed him Others rose high with fallen on their heads.

(V. 21) In the land which had been abandoned (by his enemies), where lavalī and beautiful sāla trees were growing thickly and which was infested by tigers, he always and incessantly engaged himself in capturing elephants

(V. 22) There is truth in the speech of the illustrious king Narasimhadēva, liberality on the palm of his hand, valour on the battlefield, wealth Have not his people said that the moon (which possesses these qualities) is (rightly known as) dōśhākara since it is subject to the fault of superfluity³ ?

(V. 23) There shone his younger brother, the illustrious Jayasimhadēva, who was (verily) Dharmarāja (i.e., Yudhishṭhira) among a multitude of kings (and) who [sharpened] his sword with the tears of his enemies in the domain of the god of death.

(V. 24) The illustrious Gōśaladēvi,

(V. 25) Victorious is the illustrious and brave Vijayasimhadēva, who was nobly born of her body—whose sword, black as it is (in fighting) with his enemies, produces, oh wonder ! white glory⁴ !

Here ends the description of the line of kings, composed by Sōmarāja.

(V. 26) There were Brāhmaṇas who increased the family of Kāśyapa, who were

² This refers to the expedition of the Kauravas for the capture of the cows of Virāṭa in whose city the Pāṇḍavas were living incognito. Arjuna, disguised as Bṛīhannalā, fought and defeated his relatives and well-wishers who had sided with the Kauravas. The poet seems to have instituted a comparison here between Arjuna and Yaśaḥkarna. The latter also undertook an expedition for the conquest of the earth (gā), but he defeated his enemies, not his friends and well-wishers, without concealing his identity. He was thus greater than Arjuna.

keen on devotion to Vishṇu and who regarded their intelligence and knowledge as their wealth.

(V. 27) the light of whose fame does not cease to shine even now.

(V. 28) His son was who was the object of the desires of the noble minds of virtuous people and who was foremost among those who are possessed of self-respect and intelligence.

(V. 29) From him was born the illustrious Malhaṇa, who was versed in politics and correct in conduct, and who felt proud of his mountain-like numerous excellences.

(V. 30) He had a beautiful mistress, Jōgalā by name, who delighted his heart like his fortune, and who was unswerving in her fidelity.

(V. 31) Verily there was no good deed that he did not perform. Knowledge, discrimination, forgiveness, charity and other excellences did not (in his case) perish on account of the sinfulness of the Kālī age. To enhance those (excellences) there was verily born from him the wise Harigaṇa, who, they say, is Hari's own attendant, sent by him purposely to the earth.

(V. 32) This (Harigaṇa) is the support of wise men (and) has his mind adorned by great compassion. Being charming like the moon, he gives delight to the eyes of the good. He is fond of tranquility and is honoured by artisans. He is conversant with the duties of kings, is possessed of lasting and incomparable fame and has firm determination.

(V. 33) He had a lawful and chaste wife named Mahādēvī and also another . . . who is well-conducted and is his companion in the performance of religious rites.

(V. 34) May this Kailāsa-like temple of Viṣṇu, which has been caused to be constructed by him who is adapt in devotion (to the god), out of love for his chaste wife,¹ endure as long as (Śiva), the creator of the three worlds, joyfully dwells on the mountain of crystal (i.e., Kailāsa) !
